EMOTION IN PSYCHOTHERAPY: COMPARING MODELS OF EMOTION IN THERAPY

With Leslie S. Greenberg, PhD, Norka T. Malberg, PsyD, and Michael A. Tompkins, PhD

Emotion is central to all forms of therapy, yet each has a distinct model for working with it.

In this program, guest experts Leslie S. Greenberg, Norka T. Malberg, and Michael A. Tompkins discuss the common as well as differentiating factors across their respective approaches to emotion in an effort to understand both why such different models developed and whether there is the potential for a shared model.

After examining video clips to compare and contrast the different approaches, the guest experts highlight common factors, such as the importance of emotional arousal and therapist awareness of emotion, as well as differences in areas such as the origin of emotion and how it is conceptualized.

This candid conversation is intended to spark further discussion and expand viewers' understanding of this therapeutically central phenomenon.

EMOTION IN PSYCHOTHERAPY: WORKING WITH EMOTION IN COGNITIVE BEHAVIORAL THERAPY

With Michael A. Tompkins, PhD
Accompanied by Norka T. Malberg, PsyD, and Leslie S. Greenberg, PhD

In cognitive behavioral therapy, emotion stands with thought and behavior as one of the interacting elements that make up a person's inner life.

In this approach, all three are seen as connected and influencing one another: Emotion may signal the presence of important therapeutic material in the cognitive or behavioral realm, and similarly, behaviors and thoughts could contribute to developing unhelpful emotions such as chronic anxiety.

In this program, Dr. Michael A. Tompkins explores the ways that cognitive behavioral therapy works with emotion, and guest experts Norka T. Malberg and Leslie S. Greenberg ask Dr. Tompkins questions as he discusses excerpts from previously published videos that illustrate aspects of this approach to working with emotion.

EMOTION IN PSYCHOTHERAPY: WORKING WITH EMOTION IN EMOTION-FOCUSED THERAPY

With Leslie S. Greenberg, PhD
Accompanied by Michael A. Tompkins, PhD, and Norka T. Malberg, PsyD

Emotion-focused therapy looks beyond a client's symptomatic behavior to the role that emotion plays in its formation. Emotion-focused therapists view emotion as our primary meaning system and as such emotion is used as the path to greater awareness of what is important in any given situation. Emotion-focused therapy reaches past awareness and acceptance of emotion by helping clients make sense of their feelings as well as transforming their core painful emotions.

In this program, Dr. Leslie S. Greenberg, the primary originator of emotion-focused therapy, discusses how it works with emotion, and guest experts Norka T. Malberg and Michael A. Tompkins ask questions as they watch clips from previously published videos that illuminate this model.

EMOTION IN PSYCHOTHERAPY: WORKING WITH EMOTION IN PSYCHODYNAMIC THERAPY

With Norka T. Malberg, PsyD
Accompanied by Leslie S. Greenberg, PhD, and Michael A. Tompkins, PhD

Psychodynamic and psychoanalytic therapies see emotion as a gateway to meaning, and emotion often provides the initial motivation leading to therapeutic change.

In this approach, emotion serves as both a container of memory and as an experiential process occurring in the moment, and therapists work with emotion in both forms to help uncover recurring patterns and resolve issues.

In this program, Dr. Norka T. Malberg discusses the mainstream psychodynamic and psychoanalytic model of emotion as well as that of mentalization-based therapy, a recent approach within this tradition. Guest experts Leslie S. Greenberg and Michael A. Tompkins ask questions as Dr. Malberg discusses excerpts from previously published videos that show emotional expression.

MULTICULTURAL COUNSELING: CULTURALLY INFORMED PSYCHOANALYTIC PSYCHOTHERAPY

With Pratyusha Tummala-Narra, PhD

In Culturally Informed Psychoanalytic Psychotherapy, Dr. Pratyusha Tummala-Narra demonstrates her approach to psychotherapy that involves an integration of contemporary psychoanalytic theory, multicultural psychology, and feminist psychology.

Her theoretical understanding of clients' presenting issues is based on the idea that individual development is shaped by interpersonal, sociocultural, and systemic factors and circumstances. She presents a model for a psychoanalytic, culturally informed psychotherapy which extends existing conceptualizations within psychoanalysis and psychology to a deeper understanding of the interplay between the individual and his/her sociocultural world, and its influence on identity, relationships, and psychological well-being.

In this video, Dr. Tummala-Narra demonstrates this approach to therapy with a Caucasian woman who is coming into therapy to deal with deep-rooted feelings regarding race and racial tension.

This video features a client portrayed by an actor on the basis of actual case material.

SYSTEMS OF PSYCHOTHERAPY: INTERPERSONAL RECONSTRUCTIVE THERAPY

With Lorna Smith Benjamin, PhD, ABPP

Interpersonal reconstructive therapy incorporates aspects of biological and psychoanalytic attachment theories into a case formulation model that explains symptoms in relation to client views of safety and threat.

Therapy follows a set series of steps, and the therapist chooses treatment and specific interventions on the basis of the case formulation and at what point in the therapeutic process the client may be. The client's sense of safety is a central concern, as this core mental schema will change as a result of the therapy process.

In this program, Dr. Lorna Smith Benjamin works with a 19-year-old single woman with severe anxiety who was hospitalized after attempting suicide. Dr. Smith-Benjamin works to understand the worldview of the client and help her begin to move from feeling hopeless and unseen toward a sense of agency.

The client in this video is portrayed by an actor on the basis of a composite of case descriptions.

SYSTEMS OF PSYCHOTHERAPY: THE HUMAN AND RELATIONAL CORE OF PSYCHOTHERAPY

With David N. Elkins, PhD

The Human and Relational Core of Psychotherapy is a demonstration and discussion of Dr. David N. Elkins's approach to helping clients overcome unresolved issues.

In this approach, the therapeutic work focuses on employing the human factors of psychotherapy in order to facilitate change. Such human elements include fostering a firm therapeutic alliance and de-emphasizing modalities and techniques that are commonly used in traditional paradigms of psychotherapy.

In this video, Dr. Elkins works with a young woman who is coming into therapy to address fears and anxieties surrounding her recently discovered pregnancy.

This video features a client portrayed by an actor on the basis of actual case material.

ACTIVISTS, THE: WAR, PEACE, AND POLITICS IN THE STREETS

Directed by Melody Shemtov

The story of activists who opposed the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, including their lives, the tactics they used, and the historical context.

Activists and activism have long been a part of the struggle for peace and justice in American politics and society. Activists have fought battles for civil rights, voter enfranchisement, collective bargaining, and an end to wars. While these struggles have sometimes yielded significant victories, and at other times resulted in disappointing defeats, activism has always been driven by ordinary people who give freely of their time and resources to try to bring about their visions for a new world. However, activists -- as well as how they fit into the political process -- are often overlooked or misunderstood by their fellow citizens.

The Activists: War, Peace, and Politics in the Streets brings to life the stories of ordinary people who tried to stop and end the U.S. wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. At best, activists had limited influence over the conduct of military policy after 9/11. Yet, their experiences in the antiwar movement helped them to learn about speaking out in the face of injustice. They inspired others to do the same during the Arab Spring and Occupy Wall Street movements. Indeed, democracy requires more than just one vote every four years. It requires continued pressure by citizens on their government. This is what democracy looks like!

Featuring leading activists and scholars including Tom Hayden, Leslie Cagan, Medea Benjamin, and Michael Heaney.

CULTIVATING KIDS

Directed by Melissa Young, Mark Dworkin

On South Whidbey Island, WA, a school farm shows that a garden can be a valuable addition to the curriculum while encouraging a healthy diet.

On South Whidbey Island in the state of Washington, a school farm involves children from kindergarten through high school in every phase of raising organic vegetables as part of their school experience. Supported by local non-profits, community volunteers, and the school district, it shows that a garden can be a valuable addition to a school curriculum, while encouraging children to eat healthy food. The school farm sells local, organic produce to the school cafeterias and also supplies the local food bank and community nutrition programs with fresh organic produce throughout the growing season.

DISTURBING THE PEACE

Directed by Stephen Apkon, Andrew Young

A film about people born into conflict, sworn to be enemies, Palestinians and Israelis, who challenged their fate and joined together to say "enough."

In a world torn by conflict--in a place where the idea of peace has been abandoned--an energy of determined optimism emerges. When someone is willing to disturb the status quo and stand for the dream of a free and secure world, who will stand with them?

DISTURBING THE PEACE is a story of the human potential unleashed when we stop participating in a story that no longer serves us and, with the power of our convictions, take action to create new possibilities. DISTURBING THE PEACE follows former enemy combatants--Israeli soldiers from elite units and Palestinian fighters, many of whom served years in prison--who have joined together to challenge the status quo and say "enough."

The film reveals their transformational journeys from soldiers committed to armed battle to nonviolent peace activists, leading to the creation of Combatants for Peace. While based in the Middle East, DISTURBING THE PEACE evokes universal themes relevant to us all and inspires us to become active participants in the creation of our world.

VIOLENCE IN THE LONG-TERM CARE WORKPLACE: PROTECTING OURSELVES AND OUR RESIDENTS

A Video for staff in long-term care

As caregivers in long-term care, we seek a workplace where we feel safe. In the facilities where we work, we are also charged to help safeguard our residents. Yet violence can occur -- no one knows the day or the hour it might happen, but it is our responsibility to identify the threat of violence and to be prepared should an incident occur.

This educational program and any accompanying in-service training will help viewers:

- AWARENESS: Recognize different forms of potential workplace violence and the risk factors that can increase the likelihood of an occurrence
- PREVENTION: Understand what you can do to help prevent violence -- against yourself, your co-workers and the residents under your care
- RESPONSE: Know how to protect yourself and those around you in the event that violence does occur

UNLOCKING THE CAGE

Director: Chris Hegedus and DA Pennebaker

Unlocking the Cage follows animal rights lawyer Steven Wise in his unprecedented challenge to break down the legal wall that separates animals from humans. Arguing that cognitively complex animals such as chimpanzees, whales, dolphins and elephants have the capacity for limited personhood rights, Steve and his legal team are making history by filing the first lawsuits that seek to transform a chimpanzee from a "thing" with no rights to a "person" with legal protections. Unlocking the Cage captures a monumental shift in our culture, as the public and judicial system show increasing receptiveness to Steve's impassioned arguments. It is an intimate look at a lawsuit that could forever transform our legal system, and one man's lifelong quest to protect "nonhuman" animals.

DIVERSITY AND INCLUSION: A STEP-BY-STEP GUIDE FOR EMPLOYEES

Creating an inclusive environment in the workplace can be a challenge. Employees sometimes clash and don't work together as well as they should, even when they come from the same background. Add differences to the mix and this friction can get even worse, damaging teamwork and hurting the productivity of the group as a whole.

Fortunately, there are specific skills that can help us smooth workplace interactions and resolve issues that might come up, whether they involve ethnicity, age, gender, sexual orientation, disabilities or anything else that makes people feel different.

Employees learn how to:

- Overcome resistance
- Welcome newcomers
- Make small gestures of support and acceptance
- Meet in the middle
- Look for opportunities to connect

These skills make it easier for everyone to be more open, more respectful in our behavior, and more willing to help others get the job done.

Filmed on location in a variety of settings, from healthcare to manufacturing, this video features dramatic scenes, first-person interviews, and research grounded in scientific studies that both provide new information and model the kind of behavior that contributes to a more positive workplace—for everyone.

HOMELAND: IRAQ YEAR ZERO

Directed by Abbas Fahdel

In February 2002 - about a year before the U.S. invasion - Iraqi filmmaker Abbas Fahdel traveled home from France to capture everyday life as his country prepared for war. He concentrated on family and friends, including his 12-year-old nephew, Haider, as they went about their daily lives, which had come to include planning for shortages of food, water and power. No strangers to war, the Iraqis thought they understood what was coming, and could even manage to be grimly humorous about what they felt would likely be a major and lengthy inconvenience. And then, the war began.

When Fahdel resumed filming in 2003, two weeks after the invasion, daily activities have come to a near standstill, the city is overrun with foreign soldiers, and many areas of Baghdad had been closed off to ordinary citizens. Iraqis endure, seemingly as unwitting as Americans themselves about what further tragedy awaits. Fahdel's epic yet intimate film paints a compelling portrait of people struggling to survive while their civilization, dating back to ancient times, is destroyed around them.

LEADENHALL BUILDING, THE: THE SERVANT & THE SERVED

Graham Stirk is a senior partner at Rogers Stirk Harbour + Partners, having first joined the practice in 1983 when it was titled the Richard Rogers Partnership. As principal architect on buildings that include the office scheme 88 Wood Street, the luxury residential building One Hyde Park, two airports and a winery, he helps steer the design direction of the practice.

Here Stirk discusses The Leadenhall Building - a speculative office tower in London's financial district. The tower is inclined along the south side to avoid blocking a key view of St Paul's Cathedral, with core services housed in a vertical "cassette" on the north side. The concept of distinct served and servant spaces, borrowed from Louis Kahn, recurs throughout the work of the practice. Stirk also explores the challenges of building across the street from the Lloyd's Register of Shipping - the first building he worked on after graduation and, in contrast to Leadenhall, one of the most bespoke office buildings on the planet - and explains the 11 year lag between commission and completion.

ARCHITECTURE

APOCALYPSE AND UTOPIA

By James Wines and Alison Sky

James Wines come from Chicago and studied art and art history at Syracuse University. From 1955 to 1968 he worked as a sculptor and exhibited widely receiving many fellowships and grants. Alison Sky graduated in Fine Arts at Adelphi University and also received many fellowships. In 1970. Wines, Sky and Michelle Stones founded SITE, an interdisciplinary architecture and design organisation for exploring new ideas for the visual environment. SITE has always been a collaboration of Artists architects, sociologists, psychologists, whose work is therefore much oriented to information and site. As Wines says they start with information. And that information is then recycled through an art-making process, letting it be invaded by all kinds of outside ideas which totally change all context of the building. In their recorded talk, Wines and Sky illustrated their ideas with a number of their projects. Including some of the renowned Best Products buildings. They deal with different situations that seem to be typical and, By fusing them create a new relationship between ideas, a new structure

ART HOUSE

Director: Don Freeman

In this documentary, photographer Don Freeman explores the homes designed and lived in by notable American artists, revealing the inventiveness derived from the dialogue between each artist's practice and the construction of their handmade homes. Ranging from the romantic (Hudson River School painter Frederic Church's Olana, framing views of the Catskills to echo his paintings), to the futuristic (Paolo Soleri's silt-casted structure Cosanti growing out of his bell-making experiments in the Arizona desert), to the sublime (George Nakashima's mid-century modern ode to the beauty and versatility of wood), what they all have in common is a fierce spirit of individual expression that deserves deeper examination in this age of architectural standardization.

CHATEAU MARGAUX, FRANCE

Norman Foster is one of the world's pre-eminent architects. With his practice Foster + Partners, Lord Foster has designed every possible building type and worked in every corner of the globe, picking up numerous awards and accolades along the way.

For his recently completed winery for Chateau Margaux, Lord Foster drew on the local vernacular to create a different addition to the famous estate. In this talk he discusses why he became so personally involved with the project, about combining recycled materials with cutting edge technology, and his client's delight at the new building's understated boldness.

CONCRETE LOVE

Director: Maurizius Staerkle Druх

Gottfried Bohm is widely regarded as Germany's preeminent architect. The son of a master builder of churches, he's also the patriarch of a modern architecture dynasty to which his three sons Stephan, Peter and Paul belong. But with the death of Gottfried's wife Elisabeth, also an architect and a key source of inspiration for all the Bohm builders, the family loses its emotional lodestone.

Concrete Love paints an intimate portrait of the complexity and inseparability of life, love and art.

DANGERS OF STYLE, THE

By I.M Pei

One of the foremost architects of his generation, IM Pei's reputation rests on buildings such as the John Hancock Tower in Boston, the Mile High Centre in Denver, the Louvre in Paris and the Bank of China in Hong Kong. While he kept faith with the founding principles of the International Style, he applied them to buildings that were all his own. In this talk, part of a series conducted By the architectural publisher John Peter from the 1950s onward, Pei discusses the enduring influence of Frank Lloyd Wright, the crucial distinction between having a style and designing with style in mind, the limits to technology's influence on architecture, French hostility towards his Louvre redevelopment, and the difference between the European and American traditions: "they built Rolls Royce, we built Ford".

LEADENHALL BUILDING, THE: THE SERVANT & THE SERVED

Graham Stirk is a senior partner at Rogers Stirk Harbour + Partners, having first joined the practice in 1983 when it was titled the Richard Rogers Partnership. As principal architect on buildings that include the office scheme 88 Wood Street, the luxury residential building One Hyde Park, two airports and a winery, he helps steer the design direction of the practice.

Here Stirk discusses The Leadenhall Building - a speculative office tower in London's financial district. The tower is inclined along the south side to avoid blocking a key view of St Paul's Cathedral, with core services housed in a vertical "cassette" on the north side. The concept of distinct served and servant spaces, borrowed from Louis Kahn, recurs throughout the work of the practice. Stirk also explores the challenges of building across the street from the Lloyd's Register of Shipping - the first building he worked on after graduation and, in contrast to Leadenhall, one of the most bespoke office buildings on the planet - and explains the 11 year lag between commission and completion.

MANCHESTER SCHOOL OF ART

By Keith Bradley

Keith Bradley is senior partner at Feilden Clegg Bradley Studio, based in Bath, UK. Bradley led FCBS's best known work, the Stirling Prize-winning Accordia Housing Project in Cambridge. He's also worked on major urban regeneration schemes, public museums, galleries and academic buildings. In this talk, Bradley explores FCBS's Manchester School of Art extension building, completed in April 2013. He discusses the evolution of the design, which includes a vertical gallery space where students can showcase their work, an interactive hybrid studio intended to foster creative collaboration between students from different disciplines and triple height columns with a relief cast decorative detail inspired By the textiles of Lewis Day, who taught at the school a century ago. Manchester School of Art was shortlisted for the 2014 Stirling Prize.

By Richard Neutra

Richard Neutra is famous for adapting the International Style to Southern California with domestic projects that included the Lovell House, the von Sternberg House and the Kaufmann House. This talk, one of a series conducted By the architectural publisher John Peter, was recorded in 1955 at Neutra's own home in Los Angeles, the metal and glass Neutra Research House, an early example of the houses that made his name. Here Neutra explores the psychological and biological approach behind his work - reflective of the intellectual environment of the Vienna of his youth.

NOW WE HAVE A STYLE

By Philip Johnson

The late Philip Johnson, one-time partner of Mies van der Rohe, and possibly the most renowned architect of the time, was accused of turning his back on modern architecture in favour of Post-Modern. This he denied, saying 'There's absolutely no way I can get functionalism, structural clarity, simplicity, non-ornament, flat surfaces out of my system ... the whole paraphernalia of the International style'.

In his recorded talk he goes on to state that he sees no reason why Modern can't embrace some of the richness and fun he finds in the designs of Sir Edwin Lutyens or, better still, Sir Ernest George, Lutyens' first employer. He elaborates on this idea and shows how he has taken advantage of it in some of his own recent work. As a preamble he takes a look at the streets of London and also tells us what he appreciates about recent British architecture.

POLYCENTRIC CITY, THE

By Leon Krier

Leon Krier was born in Luxembourg in 1946. He studied briefly at Stuttgart University but his basic architectural education came from his older brother Rob Krier (P8216), and his practical experience was in the offices of James Stirling in London and J.P. Kleihuis in Berlin. After 1974 he worked on his own in London and in close association with Maurice Culot (the Belgian architectural historian, teacher at La Cambre School and member of the ARAU research group). He has taught at the AA school and the Royal College of Art in London and at Princeton University and his published theories and designs have had great influence. He says that "his projects are a series of polemical statements, reflections on the specific structure of the European city and opposing the global destruction of European culture through industrialisation". Briefly, he champions the "quarter" of the limited size as the basic of urban design -- the "close-knit scene of community life and loyalties" -- as opposed to the dogma of zoning, and the treatment of buildings as solutions to individual needs regardless of their relationship to their surroundings. In his recorded talk, he outlines simple design precepts and then demonstrates their application in his proposal for the redevelopment of a part of Stockholm, an area to the south of the historical centre.

REINVENTING THE STADIUM: FROM SYDNEY TO LONDON & BEYOND

Australian-born Rod Sheard is senior principal of leading sports architects Populous. Following early experiments with stadium design at the John Smith's Stadium in Huddersfield, Sheard's firm went on to win the competition for Sydney's 2000 Olympic ANZ Stadium. Since then, the firm has built a portfolio of international sports buildings including London's Wembley Stadium, the Yankees ballpark in New York, Nationals Park in Washington DC, Ascot Racecourse in Berkshire, England, the London 2012 Olympic Stadium and the forthcoming Qatar World Cup Stadium. In this talk, Sheard compares the experience of designing the Sydney and London Olympic Stadiums and explores how his firm has led the way in the evolution of sports venues into the complex, quality buildings they are today.

SUNCHEON CITY, KOREA: HOLDING THE ECO-LINE

By Charles Jencks

American-born Charles Jencks is a landscape architect, theorist and critic best known for his Garden of Cosmic Speculation, near Dumfries, Scotland, and his writings on post-modernism. He has designed landscapes projects around the world, including Parco Portello in Milan, Northumberlandia near Newcastle, England and Wu Chi at the Olympic Forest Park in Beijing. Jencks is also co-founder of the Maggie's Centres - a series of cancer care centres designed By leading modern architects, named in honour of his late wife Maggie Keswick. In this talk, Jencks discusses his recent project Holding the Eco-line, a landscape design for the Suncheon Bay expo in 2013. He explains the development of the design and his Korean hosts' reaction to it, as well as the importance of symbolism in his work, and his latest creation the Crawick Multiverse, inspired By cutting edge theories of the origin of the universe.

By Walter Gropius

Walter Gropius, founder of the Bauhaus and head of Harvard's department of architecture, was also a talented architectural innovator. His Fagus Factory with Adolf Meyer and his Bauhaus budding in Dessau were remarkable examples of the early International Style. This interview, one of a series conducted by architectural publisher John Peter, was recorded in 1955 in two parts - at Gropius's home in Lincoln, Massachusetts and at his office in Cambridge. Here he describes the origins, philosophy and enduring influence of the Bauhaus, discusses the importance of helping students to find their own way, and predicts a slow but steady move towards pre-fabrication.

WRIGHT STARTED IT, CORBU GAVE IT FORM, MIES ADDED CONTROL

By Eero Saarinen

Eero Saarinen died just aged 51 at the height of his creative powers. His career was jumpstarted early with the General Motors Technical centre, lauded as the industrial Versailles. He went on to design an array of distinctly different buildings - including the Gateway Arch in St Louis and the TWA Terminal at JFK Airport, New York - each reflecting the philosophy he shared with Corbusier that every building has within it its own solution. This talk, one of a series conducted by the architectural publisher John Peter, was recorded in 1956 at Saarinen's remodelled Victorian house in Bloomfield, Michigan. Here he discusses the three great Modernist influences: Frank Lloyd Wright, Le Corbusier and Mies Van der Rohe; the rise of the automobile and the resulting atomisation of the city; and the great body of advice and wisdom passed on to him from his father, not least that architecture must be approached as an art.

CAMERA THAT GOES ANYWHERE, A: THE LEGACY OF AMERICAN DOCUMENTARY CINEMA

Directed by Jane Weiner

Filmmaker Jane Weiner discovers, in old boxes, the elements of a film that she began shooting in 1972 with her friends and colleagues -- Richard Leacock, Terence Macartney-Filgate, DA Pennebaker, Robert Drew and Albert Maysles -- each speaking about their role in the early days of documentary cinema verite in America.

Through a series of conversations shot over a period of 35 years, and formed into a compelling narrative by co-author and editor Sebastian Eyherabide, these five filmmakers forgo the mythology surrounding this period and reveal the inside story of how they all came together to create Primary in 1960, what led up to this pioneering film, and how they each applied this revolutionary experience to films made over their long careers.

CHET ZAR: I LIKE TO PAINT MONSTERS

Director: Mike Correll

Enter the dark and foreboding world of Chet Zar, where apocalyptic industrial landscapes are inhabited by disturbing yet beautiful monstrosities. Sometimes gruesome, periodically funny, but always thought-provoking, Zar's art is as enigmatic as it is frightening. But who is Chet Zar, and why does he like to paint monsters? These are the questions at the heart of Chet Zar: I Like to Paint Monsters.

Zar is an influential figure in the Dark Art Movement, and, given his chosen moniker "Painter of Dark," this is no surprise. Born in 1967 in San Pedro, California, Zar was well known as the family prankster. With a passion for horror films, an innate urge to create bizarre artwork, and a superhuman work ethic, Zar seemed to be made for the special effects industry. During his time with the film industry, he designed and created creatures and make-up effects for such films as Darkman, The Ring, Hellboy I & II, and Planet of the Apes. Even more well-known is his work with the band Tool, contributing to both their music videos and their on-stage theatrical animations.

Despite his success in the film industry, Zar became disenchanted by the many artistic compromises required of him. With the support of his family and horror author Clive Barker, Zar decided in early 2000 to pursue his passion for monsters by painting them. In this new arena, he has flourished and found the much-needed freedom to explore his internal world and all of the oddities created by his brush strokes.

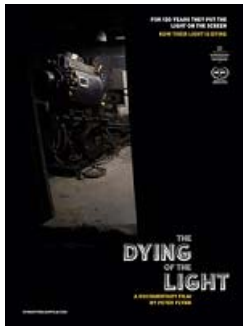

Chet Zar: I Like to Paint Monsters is your opportunity to take a journey into the mind and life of Zar. Become acquainted with his thoughts, motivations, and reflections of the past as well as his projections of the future. Delve into his experiences in the film industry, his transition from early special effects into the world of computer animation, and, ultimately, his evolution into the distinctive artist he is today.

This unique opportunity will allow you unprecedented access into the Dark Art movement, including the studios where it is being forged and the galleries where this cataclysmic work is being shown. Take part in this dynamic endeavor to explore the life and work of Chet Zar, "Painter of Dark!"

ENTER THE FAUN

Daisy Wright; Tamar Rogoff

The unlikely collaboration between a veteran choreographer and a young actor with cerebral palsy delivers astonishing proof that each and every body is capable of miraculous transformation. As Tamar Rogoff trains Gregg Mozgala to become a dancer, they discover that her lack of formal medical training and his fears and physical limitations are not obstacles, but the impetus for their incredible discoveries. The path they took together did not follow accepted models used in physical therapy or medicine, nor was it like any established process in choreography, but the advancements Gregg experienced in mobility and alignment were unprecedented. Enter the Faun is the story of a joyous journey towards opening night. It challenges the boundaries of medicine and art, as well as the limitations associated with disability.

HENRI ROUSSEAU OR THE BURGEONING OF MODERN ART

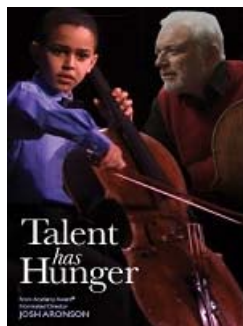

Henri Rousseau, referred to as "le Douanier", started to paint in Paris around 1880, at the age of 40. This self-taught artist was friendly with the poet Apollinaire, Robert Delaunay and Pablo Picasso, who recognised his genius, and yet his work was to remain under-rated during his lifetime.

However, with its dislocated compositions and profoundly dreamlike subject matter, it was to have a decisive influence on modern art, from surrealism to abstract art. This documentary film explores the secret inspiration and the little known influences of a painter whose canvasses are much less naïve than they appear to be.

TALENT HAS HUNGER

Director: Josh Aronson

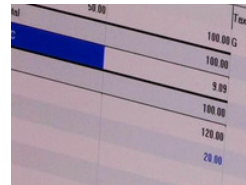

Talent Has Hunger is an inspiring film about the power of music to consume, enhance, and propel lives. Filmed over 7 years, the film is a window into the mysterious world of the artist, the passion that can grip and sustain a young player from childhood through the last days of life and the years of sacrifice and dedication a budding artist needs to fulfill one's talent. The film focuses on the challenges of guiding gifted young people through the struggles of mastering the cello. Through the words and actions of master cello teacher, Paul Katz, it's clear that this deep study of music not only prepares wonderful musicians, but builds self-esteem and a cultural and aesthetic character that will be profoundly important throughout his students' lives.

BETTER COMMUNICATION

By Richard Mulvey

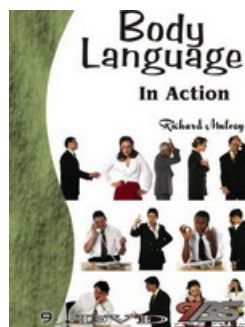

It is not what you know that matters; it is how you communicate what you know that really makes the difference. Your ability to communicate your ideas is your most important business skill, but communication is so often badly handled. Communication techniques are easy to understand and in this work we look at the basic principles and beyond to ensure your written and verbal communication is simple but effective.

- Learn how to influence and persuade
- Get your powerful message across in less than a minute
- Write perfect reports, letters and advertisements
- Construct convincing arguments
- Learn how to communicate with the opposite sex

It's not what you know that matters but rather how you communicate what you know that really makes a difference. Communication is the life blood of any business and a command of the basic principles will dramatically improve your team's communication skills. In this breakfast workshop Richard will outline the seven golden rules that influence both written and verbal communication and is a must for managers at any level.

BODY LANGUAGE IN BUSINESS

By Richard Mulvey

20,000 years ago business was a lot simpler; a man could exchange a clay pot for a leg of panther with simple nods and grunts. Business today is a lot harder but we are still using the same gestures and they remain a truer reflection of our feelings than the words we use. In this work on body language in business we explore the gestures we all use everyday and describe their meanings. We focus on how to understand your customers, how to pick out a lie, how to manage an interview or your boss and many other business situations.

- Know exactly when to Close that Sale.

- Read the Mind of your Negotiating Opponent
- Create the Right Impression with your Customers ... Everytime
- Learn about Body Language in Courtship
- Defuse Problem Situations
- Always Identify a Lie

Learn how to read minds, defuse problem situations, create an impact, improve your negotiation skills and know exactly when to close that sale. Is that salesman lying to you? Does your secretary really enjoy your company or is she just after a pay rise? These and many more questions are answered in "The Business Guide to Body Language". This presentation is as entertaining as it is informative and shows how an understanding of Body Language can give you an unfair advantage in all human interaction

CHANGE MANAGEMENT

By Richard Mulvey

Change is one of the most fundamental influences of modern business. You either adapt or die! In this work Richard explores the pitfalls and provides some solutions that will help your team keep up, and adjust to their ever-changing circumstances.

- Uncover the principles of leading people through Change
- Change is always opportunity, learn how to benefit from it
- Discover how different people manage change differently
- Learn about the Seven Predictable Dynamics of Change

Change is the single most important driving factor in business today. No longer can we do the same things in the same way and expect to stay in business. The rules that applied last year are different this year and will be different next. However, people don't like change. Doing the same things in the same way is comfortable. Facing change is like switching the light off in a room and stumbling around in the dark. It hurts! In this work Richard is going to switch the light back on again. There are seven predictable dynamics in change. If you know what is going to happen to your people it is much easier to manage them through the change that we all face. Some of us are Change Winners and others Change Casualties. This work will help you become a Change Winner.

DECISIONS: HOW TO MAKE THEM, HOW TO KEEP THEM

By Richard Mulvey

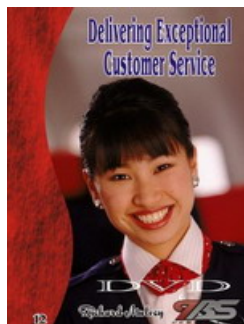

We are faced with many decisions. Should we expand? How far should we push the budget? How am I going to sell more this year? But how do you make sure you are making the right decision? In this work Richard will outline the logical approach to making accurate decisions and show how to make decisions stick.

- Find out how the world's leaders make decisions
- Learn how to motivate yourself to take decisions and stick to them
- Learn how to break down the decision making process
- Uncover the best way to make Group Decisions
- Discover how to make your decisions last

The ability to make accurate, informed decisions is one of the most important management skills. Most people in business understand the importance of good decision making, but many business people think that the ability to make good decisions is instinctive, or a matter of luck. This is far from true. Decision making is a skill and like any other business skill it can be learnt quite easily with a little application and a lot of practice. In this work Richard Mulvey will guide your team through the process of making good accurate decisions and sticking to them.

DELIVERING EXCEPTIONAL CUSTOMER SERVICE

By Richard Mulvey

Attracting your new customers is only half the battle, for your business to grow this year you need them to come back over and over again. By developing high levels of customer service you will encourage your casual customers to become regulars but having satisfied customers is just not enough and in this work Richard explores the techniques needed to generate "Raving Fans".

- Turn your satisfied customers into "Raving Fans"
- Convert "Just Looking" to "Just Buying"
- Find out how to create just the right "First Impression"
- Discover how complaints can be positive if managed professionally
- Make sure your customers always come back for more
- Help your team develop a passion for your customers

How many customers do you lose to bad service each year? Ten? One hundred? One thousand? You will probably never know but every customer lost will cost you hundreds or even thousands of rand in their "life time value". It is never too late to offer exceptional customer service and in this work Richard outlines a step by step process that will help your team keep your customers for ever.

GETTING NEW CUSTOMERS / KEEPING THEM FOREVER

By Richard Mulvey

If you are going to grow your business this year you will need to be more creative in the way you attract new customers. In this work we discuss the traditional methods of attracting new customers and explore some more creative ways to dramatically grow your business. Once you have attracted customers to your business it is important to keep them and in this work we also explore simple but effective ways to hang on to your customers and keep them coming back over and over again.

- Understand how Customer Relationship Management (CRM) works
- Find new customers before your competitors do
- Discover new ways to attract Customers to your business
- Turn cold calling into warm calling
- Double your potential customers in one month
- Convert casual customers into permanent customers

In today's economic climate successful companies know the importance of a successful sales team. Customers are fewer and harder to find and while your competitors are snapping at their heels trying to take them away from you, using the same old techniques will not be enough to stem the tide. There are no shortage of opportunities however and in this work we explore some new ideas that will help you develop your customer base and keep them for ever.

HANDLING OBJECTIONS / CLOSING THE SALE

By Richard Mulvey

Managing objections and the close are the most important parts of the sale but are so often handled badly. We are not good at closing the sale. In a recent study undertaken by a local security company, salespeople ask for the business in only 34% of the time and this is not unusual. In this work we make the close simple but very effective, and take the lid off all those difficult objections.

- Learn when to Close and when not to Close
- Find out how Closing can be fun
- Learn four steps to Closing any Sale
- Discover the different types of objection and how to handle them
- Objections are opportunities, find out how to look forward to them

How often do your sales people do all the hard work then forget to ask for the business? How often is a sale lost because an objection is badly handled? In this seminar for sales people at all levels we analyse objections and the close and discuss a few simple rules that will make a big difference to your strike rate.

MANAGING MEETINGS

By Richard Mulvey and Roger Knowles

Our surveys amongst South African business people indicate that we spend between 30% and 50% of our working day in meetings. Most meetings however, are about 25% effective. Meetings are a fantastic way to communicate but can also be a major waste of your time and in this work we explore ways to make your meetings shorter, and much more effective. This work is co-authored by Richard Mulvey and Roger Knowles, a well-known attorney, speaker and meetings specialist.

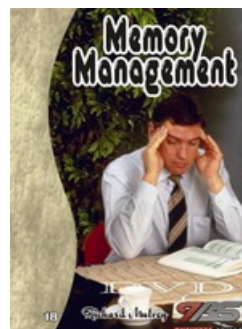

- Cut down your meeting time by half
- Make your meetings the most effective part of the day
- Discover 10 ways to have fun in meetings
- Learn how to manage formal meetings
- Understand the principles of "Robert's Rules"

Up to 60% of your business day is lost to meetings. Meetings with your team; meetings with the board; meetings with customers and meetings with the bank. Then there are the club meetings, church meetings, school meetings, and the endless committee meetings. The list seems to go on for ever, but how many of these meetings are run properly? In this work Richard will describe the best approach to making your meetings a well run, efficient use of your time. We will look at the agenda and how they should be written, note taking, controlling difficulty meetings, having fun in meetings, and even have a look at group thinking and decision making in meetings. If you have to go to meetings in your life, this work will be the best investment you make this year.

OCCUPATIONAL HEALTH AND SAFETY IN THE RETAIL INDUSTRY

In Australia, accidents in the retail workplace cost millions of dollars per year in direct costs and loss of production. Every year many people suffer a long-term injury, which affects their ability to work and enjoy life. Some even die. Employers and employees have legal responsibilities to keep workplaces safe and to reduce these risks, and the retail environment has some unique OHS conditions that you need to be aware of. In this program we hear from both WorkSafe Victoria and the Shop Distributive and Allied Employees Association, as well as coal-face expertise from leading retailer Woolworths about the effects of workplace injuries, legal obligations, employer responsibilities, employee responsibilities, the main types of injuries and what to do if there is an OH&S issue. A positive and pro-active look at the issues and how to make your retail workplace safe.

PEGASUS: YOUR GUIDE TO BREAKTHROUGH IDEAS (FILM 7) - ALPHABET FOR WIN-WIN SOLUTIONS

The PEGASUS video course is based on well-known methodology for innovation called TRIZ - Theory of Inventive Problem Solving.

An inventive challenge never looks trivial and very often seems impossible. Instead of trying to solve a problem in one go, instantly, we can use a step-by-step methodology, which leads to the ideal solution. TRIZ provides an algorithm that facilitates creating solutions for the challenges if standard solutions are not applicable. TRIZ works well in industrial problem solving when cheap and reliable solutions should be guaranteed and delivered here and now.

PEGASUS VIDEO COURSE TEACHES:

- How to state the problem in the most efficient way and choose the relevant context.
- How to achieve resource efficiency and turn any waste into the resource.
- How to address non-technical company challenge (conflict management, marketing, cost reduction, etc.)
- How to minimize risks: find the failure before it happens.

Film 7: Alphabet for Win-Win Solutions

There is a limited number of thinking patterns that lead to breakthrough solutions. Such patterns are called inventive principles. Use inventive principles to spark your creativity.

PEGASUS: YOUR GUIDE TO BREAKTHROUGH IDEAS (FILMS 1-6)

The PEGASUS video course is based on well-known methodology for innovation called TRIZ - Theory of Inventive Problem Solving.

An inventive challenge never looks trivial and very often seems impossible. Instead of trying to solve a problem in one go, instantly, we can use a step-by-step methodology, which leads to the ideal solution. TRIZ provides an algorithm that facilitates creating solutions for the challenges if standard solutions are not applicable. - How to achieve resource efficiency and turn any waste into the resource.
- How to address non-technical company challenge (conflict management, marketing, cost reduction, etc.)
- How to minimize risks: find the failure before it happens.

Film 1: Inventive Mind

"We can't solve problems by using the same kind of thinking we used when we created them" (Albert Einstein). You may be surprised that a whole variety of problems fit nicely into only two models, and a whole variety of solutions can be described with just 40 general principles. You decide which model best suits your situation and get the answer.

Film 2: Core of a Challenge

We often do not see the solution, because we cannot see the problem. You learn how to state your challenge in such a way that solution appears on a surface.

Film 3: Ideal Final Result

Why not to start from the end: from the solution itself? The Ideal Final Result describes the simplest solution to a problem ignoring any constraints; it is that

"miracle" you would like to have.

Film 4: Context

You learn how to investigate the problem in various contexts where the problem may surface. Look for the contexts where your challenge never appears!

Film 5: Resources

If the project requires a lot of additional resources (material, time, money, etc.) then it is the wrong path to the solution. This film shows how to turn any waste or harm into benefit.

Film 6: Contradictions and Resolutions

Do not be afraid of contradictions, search for them. If you can see the obstacles you use them for your benefit, if you do not see them, they will hold you back from your dream.

TIME MANAGEMENT

By Richard Mulvey

Time is your most important resource. In this unconventional look at Time Management Richard identifies why you are bad at time management and how to get better, why some hours of the day are as much as 3 times as valuable as others, how to prioritise and make the most use of the 24 hours available to you every day.

In this unconventional look at time management we will look at:

Why you are bad at time management and how to get better

Good time management is often the realm of left brained, logical thinkers, but anybody can develop the skills of managing their time in just a week.

Planning your day/week/month

The first step is to invest your time accurately planning the day

Preparing and using our simple, yet very effective time management system

Most time management systems are more complicated than they need to be. Our system is designed for people who like to keep it simple.

Prioritising and Delegating

We all have a lot to do but what to do first, what to do later and what should we discard all together?

Managing Meetings

Much of our time is spent in meetings and many of those meetings are a waste of time. Learn a few simple techniques that will cut your meeting time down by half.

And using all the tricks to make the most of your time

Every skill has its tricks and shortcuts and we will explore how to make the most of the time available.

WORK LIKE A PENGUIN

Antarctica is one of the most beautiful and breathtaking places on Earth. It is also one of the coldest!

With a record temperature of -129°F (just a balmy 20°F lower than the temperature of dry ice) and home to 90% of the World's ice, working like a penguin may not seem like what it's cracked up to be. This fun and inspirational program shows that penguins are motivated by more than meets the eye!

An Enterprise Media team member recently took a trip to Antarctica and returned with some incredible footage of this amazing continent and, of course, penguins - LOTS of penguins!

So, it was a natural progression to tell this fun story in the new film Work Like A Penguin!

These penguins will give you a humorous and inspirational look at work, meetings, and life. Use this program as a fun way to start a meeting or to give people a chuckle during a long day of training.

CHINA STORIES II

In the last few decades, China has been experiencing tremendous changes in her economy, society and infrastructure. Her leaders dream about revival of the Chinese race: domestically, they want to lead nationals out of poverty towards a reasonable standard of living; internationally, they want to propel the realization of an economic corridor, via both land and sea, and draft a blueprint for a rising power. Leaders have dreams, but what do their subjects dream about?

Each episode of "China Stories" shows audience around in China by presenting them with the stories of some characters, as well as some images, in the hope that they may understand what the present-day Chinese think, do, and care about.

CHINA VS USA: THE BATTLE FOR OIL

It's the end of a myth which lasted 3,000 years. Since its oil shortage, China has relied on the outside world. Energy is its weak spot, its Achilles heel, and the problem will become more pronounced in proportion to its unbridled economic growth, which continues to be forecasted at 8% for the foreseeable future. There will be an immense need for an increased energy supply. China is unable to meet these needs and collaboration with other governments is its only option. All of this growth has forced China to launch a world conquest. Every country with oil is being pursued.

For three years, Chinese authorities have been traveling extensively to establish new oil alliances across the world. With those, come concessions that are incessantly at odds with the West. Contracts have been signed with Venezuela, Iran, the Sudan and Angola. In exchange, China offers its support in the form of promises to build telecommunication systems, railways and ports. It also offers protection to their partner nations by threatening to use its UN veto against resolutions involving human rights (Darfur) or nuclear issues (Iran.) Therefore doing business with the Chinese is much more attractive than with countries in the West. The Chinese do not want to be involved in the politics of other nations. They simply want oil.

Are the Chinese really fulfilling all their promises? This investigative film offers an unprecedented examination of the issues that reach beyond the question of oil.

CHINA: IN THE SHADOW OF MR KONG PART 2 - MATTERS OF THE MIND

Superstition - Superstition, like everywhere else in the world, largely dominated the Chinese mind in early times.

Commentators on the works of Confucius - Confucian ideas established themselves but there were many commentators over the following centuries who muddled the waters.

The Han Dynasty - The Han dynasty was principally responsible for making Confucian ideas the norm for government and society.

Taoism - Taoism, growing out of early animism, developed ideas of non-interference in the ways of nature.

Buddhism - Buddhism, imported from India, introduced ideas of rebirth and reward for good conduct.

China and Tibet - Today China rules Tibet as it has always done. A largely Buddhist country, it has problems with the secular Chinese.

Sung Education and the Mandarin Bureaucracy - In the Sung dynasty, education according to Confucian principles was established on a huge and influential scale.

CHINA: IN THE SHADOW OF MR KONG PART 5 - THE ROUGH ROAD TO FREEDOM

Taiping Rebellion - Driven partly by the injustices suffered by the poor and a muddled view of the religious beliefs imported by western missionaries, the Taiping Rebellion rocked China to the core.

Japan - Japan, looked down on by the Chinese as of little import, displays how it has adapted to the times as the Chinese have not.

The Boxers and the end of the empire - As the empire collapses, a secret society called the Boxers feebly attempts to drive out the foreigners.

Japan and the Communist takeover - Japan invades and after the second world war the Communists take over and impose order.

China and the Communists - The rule of Mao and the Communists.

Overseas Chinese - Effective Overseas Chinese communities.

China: The Great Dilemma - The Great Dilemma which faces the Chinese today is how to bring about the democratic freedoms which society deserves without bringing Chaos yet again.

CHINESE MAYOR, THE

Directed by Zhou Hao

Once the thriving capital of Imperial China, the city of Datong now lies in near ruins. Not only is it the most polluted city in the country, it is also crippled by decrepit infrastructure and even shakier economic prospects. But Mayor Geng Tanbo plans to change all that, announcing a bold, new plan to return Datong to its former glory, the cultural haven it was some 1,600 years ago. Such declarations, however, come at a devastatingly high cost. Thousands of homes are to be bulldozed, and a half-million of its residents (30 percent of Datong's total population) will be relocated under his watch. Whether he succeeds depends entirely on his ability to calm swarms of furious workers and an increasingly perturbed ruling elite. The Chinese Mayor captures, with remarkable access, a man and, by extension, a country leaping frantically into an increasingly unstable future.

CIRCUS SCHOOL: CHINA'S PRESTIGIOUS ACROBATIC SCHOOL

Directed by Ke Dingding and Guo Jing

Circus School captures the breathtaking feats of a new generation of gymnastic performers-in-training in a centuries-old form of Chinese acrobatics. Given the art form's focus on challenging physical limitations, many Chinese view acrobatics as the quintessential expression of China's strength and power.

The film provides a rare glimpse into one of China's most revered institutions, the Shanghai Circus School, where students aged six to fifteen complete a grueling seven-year program that prepares them to work as professionals. Through exhaustion, injury, and broken bones, the students strive for seamless and precise performances in an unwavering quest to be the best.

The film introduces Xu Lu, a ten-year-old girl who grits her teeth through injury and pain in the struggle to perfect her routine. Thirteen-year-old Cai Yong, coping with a growing weight problem, has difficulties learning a single-handed handstand; his teacher urges him to practice self-control and warns him that his failure will ruin not only his own life, but also those of his teachers and parents. The students' punishing exercises are contrasted with the seamless beauty and precision of their performances to cast a new light on one of China's most ancient traditions.

FUTURE FOOD: STAY OR GO? (CHINA)

Directed by Alex Gabbay

Who will grow China's food as young people leave the countryside for the cities?

In many remote areas of China young people have little choice but to stay on the land, and yet they may face a destitute future, with millions of farmworkers in China earning less than two dollars a day. Although there are some exceptions, farming is not generally seen as a "sexy" career choice.

The reality is that in China and around the world, young people are fleeing the countryside and moving to the big cities. Who will grow the food that feeds future generations? How can young people be convinced that farming is a good option? Californian-born Rand and his wife Sherry are the founders of Resonance China, a social media agency in Shanghai. They use the internet to create and identify trends and tricks that can create a buzz for global brands. FUTURE FOOD sets Resonance a task: can they make farming popular with young people?

HIDDEN CHINA, THE

Hidden China takes an in-depth look into this country's meteoric rise to economic superpower in this behind the scenes show. Through access to exclusive interviews and on-camera visits to areas forbidden to journalists, discover how China has rapidly changed from a state run disaster to the world's powerful economy.

China is attempting to do in one generation, what other countries have needed three to accomplish. From one of the world's largest gaming industries, to global corporations, China is now most certainly on the world's stage.

In the 1970's, thanks to Supreme Leader Deng Xiaoping's pragmatism, China moved from a classic Soviet style command economy to a consumer economy virtually from scratch. This meant China needed to commercially reconnect with the rest of the world breaking away from centuries of tradition.

Learn how the inner battle between tradition and modernization continues to rage on as the world's most powerful economy continues to grow. With economic growth at over Ten percent a year, tradition is giving way.

HOWLING INTO HARMONY: CHINESE ROCK CULTURE BORN IN THE WEST

By Joshua Frank

Howling into Harmony offers a portrait of young Chinese rock musicians in Beijing and provides a glimpse into the lives of a generation awakened by Western cultural forces, despite the conservatism of their parents' generation and their government.

Li Yang Yang is an explosive guitarist who views his visceral noise improvisations as authentically Chinese music. Drawing inspiration from Beat writers such as Jack Kerouac and William S. Burroughs, he identifies with the rebellious American youth of the '60s.

He Fan is a Beijinger, born and raised. A rising young rock star and college student, he's known for his raucous live shows and anti-establishment lyrics.

Li Qing is a soft-spoken introvert who creates soundscapes that mirror the capital's incessant clang of construction. Her parents, though supportive, don't know what to make of her experimental music.

Howling Into Harmony provides a look at China's evolving youth culture that is rarely seen by the outside world.

LAW OF THE DRAGON, THE

Directed by Weijun Chen

Law of the Dragon examines how justice is served in the rural areas of China so remote and isolated that villagers have almost no contact with the central government. At the heart of the film stands the austere Judge Chen, head of a provincial legal practice, the Tiger Law Firm of Chengdu. Chen journeys with his team of court officials along mud tracks and rough roads in the Xuan'en region. Their court is wherever they hang the national emblem, be it nailed up in the fields or stuck up in the plaintiff's house. As he resolves the grievances of the residents and dispenses nuggets of Confucian-Communist wisdom, Judge Chen is the law in the eyes of the people.

Among the cases heard is the story of a family attempting to hold a school responsible for the suicide of their only son. In another, Judge Chen listens to the complaints of a mother who is suing her son for maintenance. Though the judge strives to remain fair, he often transcends his official role, reminding villagers that they cannot always rely on the law and must work to preserve peace and harmony in their community without recourse to the intervention of the country's official justice system.

MAO'S GREAT FAMINE

Directed by Patrick Cabouat

Written by Patrick Cabouat and Philippe Grangereau

Between 1958 and 1962, China experienced tragedy on an epic scale. The "Great Leap Forward" was an economic campaign conceived by Mao Zedong to transform China's vast population from an agrarian economy to a modern communist society through the process of industrialization and collectivization. In reality, it led to a famine resulting in the death of as many as fifty-five million people. But while millions were starving to death, China's grain stores remained full.

Using previously unheard testimony by survivors, rare archival footage, secret documents, and interviews with the leading historians on this catastrophe, Mao's Great Famine provides, for the first time, an insight into the insanity of this disastrous program. Today the Chinese Communist Party whitewashes the catastrophe calling it "three years of natural disasters." This film examines the mechanisms and political decisions that led to the disaster, stripping away the secrecy surrounding the campaign and exposing the lie, which continues today, about the true human cost and who was responsible.

ONE CHILD

Directed by Zijian Mu

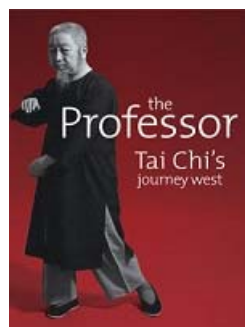

The 2008 Sichuan earthquake, China's deadliest disaster in three decades, killed 90,000 people, including more than 5,000 children. Losing a child is an immeasurable tragedy for parents anywhere, but in China the effect is compounded by the one-child policy. Many parents suffered the loss of their only child, and with it the totality of their life's emotional investment.

In response to the earthquake, China's government made an exception for those who lost their only child to conceive another. That generation of newborns became known in China as "reborn" children. But for many parents, particularly those who lost teenage children, their advancing age proved to be a significant barrier.

This film features three families from Beichuan, the city most devastated by the earthquake's aftershocks. 80% of the city's buildings collapsed and the city was left in rubble. The government deployed its construction machine toward building an entirely new city. Old Beichuan was dead and a new Beichuan was erected – in a different place. In just three years, residents of the old city were relocated, including the family of Yang, Jiang and Fu, and Gu, who all lost their only child in the earthquake. One Child follows the journey of these three families as they try to restore a sense of normalcy and struggle to move past the loss of their children.

SARS: COVER UP AND AFTERMATH

By Diana Dai

This documentary examines the extraordinary and insightful human drama that unfolded during and after the 2002 and 2003 crisis. It tells the stories of the Chinese government's efforts to hide the truth about this epidemic. The film also tells the story of the forgotten SARS survivors who continue to suffer from horrific after-effects. Many of these victims regularly undergo aggressive steroid treatments and must continually fight for their rights in China.

The film profiles five individuals, including Fang Bo, a SARS survivor who was initially hailed a national hero after winning his own battle against the virus, but was later blacklisted by the government for speaking out about civil liberties of those with the disease. It also shares the story of Wang Ligang, formerly an armed policeman, whose disability following SARS prevents him from making a living, and Wang Yong Hong, former senior editor at a major newspaper and present organizer of a SARS survivor group.

SPILLED WATER

By May May Tchao

Spilled Water explores how the economic transformation of China is changing the roles, rights, and social status of its women. Wanting to connect with her 'distant sisters', decades after emigrating to the United States, May May returns to China and explores the very different lives of four women: a young rural farmer who, against all odds, became a teacher; a successful lawyer in a male-dominated profession; a divorced factory worker struggling to brighten her daughter's future; and an ethnic minority singer torn between her dreams and her responsibilities as a peasant's wife. From the urban hustle of Beijing to the desolate beauty of rural provinces, their intimate stories show us why gender equality in China is so hard-earned, yet worth the struggle.

TO THE LIGHT: THE DARK DAYS OF CHINA'S COAL MINERS

By Yuanchen Liu

The bright lights of China's booming economy are powered by the hard labor of the miners, who work deep in perilous coal shafts around the country. When a miner dies, his family receives a death pension greater than the amount of money he would have made in his lifetime had he stayed alive. In rural China, where farming alone cannot sustain families, miners have no alternative but to risk their lives daily, descending hundreds of meters underground to dig out the black ore fueling China's massive electrical grid.

To the Light delves into the hopes and struggles of the mining families of Sichuan, in western China. The father of two, Luo originally became a coal miner to pay the fine for violating China's One Child Policy. Hui, son of another miner, prefers to be a coal-train driver than to work far from home. For many families, coal mining has become the principal source of income and the only alternative to factory jobs in distant cities. The mines are notoriously dangerous and thousands are killed every year. Going deep underground, the film exposes the perils faced by these miners, the slim rewards, and dire consequences when things go wrong. In spite of the risks, the working poor continue to flock to the mines, unable to heed the warning that earning a living wage may also mean dying for it.

XMAS WITHOUT CHINA

Directed by Alicia Dwyer
Featuring: Tom Xia

Exploring the intersection of consumerism and immigration in American culture, XMAS WITHOUT CHINA is an intimate portrait of families wrestling with our drive to consume cheap products, but also with our desire for human connection and a sense of who we are in a fast-changing world.

Pride and mischief inspire Chinese immigrant Tom Xia to challenge the Americans in his Southern California suburb to celebrate Christmas without any Chinese products. With deep ties to his extended family back home, Tom is incensed by how he considers China is misunderstood, particularly by the American media. But he gets more than he bargains for when he meets the Joneses, a young family trying to keep their children safe as a wave of Chinese toy recalls forces them to have their son tested for lead poisoning.

The Joneses start to give up not just toys, plates, lamps, and clothes, but the beloved hair dryer, coffeemaker, X-Box, and many Christmas decorations, challenging the way they live everyday life and how they celebrate Christmas. Meanwhile, Tom's parents are constructing a new home, proudly using Chinese materials to build their American dream. As they decorate for Christmas for the first time and the interactions between the Xias and the Joneses intensify, Tom realizes that he's on a deeper journey to understand the complexities of his own divided loyalties between America and China.

CRYSTAL CLEAR TRAINING

AUTOCLAVES - THE SCIENCE OF STERILIZING

Autoclaves are used primarily to sterilize finished medicines that are sealed in their final containers and media and equipment used in microbiological laboratories, as well as a variety of things used in aseptic manufacture.

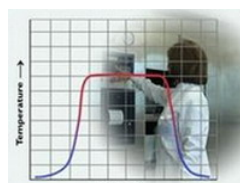

This program examines the science involved in achieving sterility and some of the pitfalls that await unwary users of autoclaves.

Content includes: About autoclaves; The science of killing microorganisms; Air and temperature; Porous loads; Laboratory science - Biological indicators.

Complete with full documentation - transcript, glossary of terms, printable multiple choice knowledge test, presentation summary sheets and editable QuestionMaster quiz software.

CONTAMINATION CONTROL IN PRACTICE

Contamination control practices are crucial to the safety and reliability of many products. Working with products sensitive to micro-contamination under clean conditions is a very responsible task. Everybody involved needs to control contaminants that they cannot see and that makes understanding them absolutely essential.

This program is an introduction to the subject illustrating the reasons for, and the controls related to, super-clean production environments.

The subject chapter headings are:

- Introduction
- Contaminants
- Clean air, cleanrooms & associated controlled environments
- People in cleanrooms
- Precision cleaning & disinfecting
- Review

FOCUS ON GXPS

Everyone needs to be reminded to keep their focus on their job—and FOCUS on GXPs is the perfect way to make sure that happens. These six real-world DVD programs are based on actual incidents and shot in a pharmaceutical manufacturing facility. They show what can happen when employees lose their focus on the job.

What's FOCUS? It's used as an acronym that encourages people to:

F— Focus on their job

Focus on the job at hand. Give it all your attention. Don't let yourself be distracted or preoccupied with something else. Talk to everyone involved with the job so all of you clearly understand what's to be done.

O— Organize their work

Organize your work so well that you won't have a chance to make mistakes. A well-organized workplace helps you stay error free.

C— Check their procedures

Check the SOPs for the job. Don't do the job until you've checked those all-important operating procedures. They're your guide for consistent work.

U— Use the right tools and equipment; wear the appropriate clothing
 Use the right tools and equipment for the job. Make sure that they're in good condition. And wear the proper clothing required for the job.

S— Sum up the job when it's complete

Did you do the job as intended? Did you document the work properly? It's a chance to ensure you followed all the FOCUS steps before you leave any job.

UNDERSTANDING ISOLATORS

It may be easy to assume that isolators

and other barrier technologies offer a fool-proof solution to controlling contamination when working on sensitive products or materials. There are however many elements that influence the success of working with such devices.

Isolators require careful attention from design to installation, operation and beyond for the rest of their life-cycle. Many factors play a part in the integrity of the unit including the background environment, operator behavior, material preparation and transfer, cleaning routines and maintenance.

This program provides a detailed grounding on the subject illustrating the benefits, pitfalls and the necessary controls to achieve consistent quality performance when using isolators.

- What is an isolator?
- Isolator applications & backgrounds
- Isolator design and construction
- Working at isolators
- Materials transfer
- Cleaning & sterilizing isolators
- Validation
- Maintenance programs

DESIGN

DESIGN IN THE REAL WORLD - LOGOS

Companies and other organisations rely on logos to convey information and create brand recognition. Their design is critical – time, creativity, expertise and often, vast sums of money, are invested into their creation – but what are the principles and elements of excellent logo design?

This program explores various aspects of logo design including the various purposes for which logos are required, how they might be used and the different places they might be displayed, the logo design process and the importance of excellent communication with clients.

Expert comments come from Deakin University lecturer Dr Meghan Kelly, commercial designers Stephen Davey and Chelsea Koetsveld, and one of her clients, business owner Nick McEwan-Hall.

ACUTE AND SEVERE BEHAVIOUR PROBLEMS

By Dave Stott

Prevent and manage high-level incidents in the classroom with this DVD.

Severe or acute behaviour problems are one-off high-level incidents that occur infrequently, but are so serious that they can cause teachers to question their own professional competence. Such problems present a high risk of damage to property and also to personal safety.

With this DVD you learn how to:

- deal with acute behaviour situations
- explore effective systems for gaining help
- protect yourself from physical and psychological attack

ANGER: TRIGGERS AND EFFECTIVE SOLUTIONS FOR TEACHERS AND STUDENTS

A masterclass on how to deal with anger in positive ways

With this DVD teachers can learn powerful strategies to deal with their own anger in three different scenarios:

- Meeting an angry parent face to face
- Handling a confrontation with a student
- Resolving an issue over the telephone

Each scenario shows a negative response followed by a more reasonable, positive way of managing the situation. Summaries of negative and positive points along the way allow the film to be paused and discussed by the viewers. The negative clips demonstrate:

- Early warning signs, triggers, escalation points and a failure to resolve the situation
- Overfamiliarity, power struggles, secondary behaviour issues

- Blame approach, raised voice, lack of empathy, threats
- Failure to use objective observations/evidence, personal comments, no trust/respect, interrupting
- Making excuses, being sarcastic, arguing, criticising, overreacting

The more reasoned, considered responses in contrast show:

- A welcoming attitude
- How to review the issue and spot the positives
- Directed questioning to focus on self-management and resolution
- The importance of pitch, intonation, smiling, keeping your voice enthusiastic and friendly
- Thinking carefully before you speak and focusing on the facts
- Non-verbal communication and active listening
- Recording of important points, review of conversation, agreeing on action plan

BRAIN TRAPS: CAN YOU SOLVE THESE PROBLEMS?

By pointing out that the mental habits that serve so well every day can become 'brain traps' when used to solve demanding problems, the program asks students to look at a series of interesting situations with creative freshness. Viewers are asked to analyze how they usually solve a problem and what habits prevent a good solution. Then the program introduces them to creative problem-solving skills that they can learn, practice and use in a variety of different disciplines. The problems here don't require high IQ's or advanced math--just clever thinking and an open mind.

CHOICE THEORY AND SOCIAL-EMOTIONAL LEARNING

This course focuses on teaching students responsible behavior by combining social-emotional learning (SEL) with choice theory. Included are SEL strategies to help students regulate their behavior (restrain impulses, manage stress and anger, self-evaluate, plan effectively, and persevere) and get along with others (take others' perspective, empathize, demonstrate manners and social skills).

In this course, you will learn how to:

- create and use specific, engaging strategies for teaching the emotional and social skills all students need.
- integrate SEL into the academic curriculum.
- learn skills to deal with any discipline situation no matter how intense.
- integrate character education into their classroom instruction.
- gain cooperation and prevent discipline problems.

CHRONIC BEHAVIOUR PROBLEMS

By Dave Stott

This Chronic Behaviour Problems DVD demonstrates how to:

- Reduce incidents of chronic misbehaviour in the classroom
- Encourage students to make good decisions about behaviour and return to "on task" behaviour
- De-escalate, rather than escalate, the situation
- Demonstrate a hierarchy of intervention.

The DVD starts by identifying chronic behaviour problems, those constantly re-occurring problems that are difficult to stop and wear you down as a teacher, challenging your professionalism. Such problems include fidgeting and lack of attention (disruptive and non-disruptive), agitated movement, rudeness, not bringing the right equipment, wearing the wrong uniform, calling out, leaving their seat, interrupting the learning of others by chatting or making physical contact and refusal to comply with clear instructions.

The DVD then continues by exploring a hierarchy of teacher responses – to use the least intrusive intervention in the shortest time. These responses include the look, secret signal, physical proximity (move in/move out) praise proximity, hurdle help, warnings, comply time, antiseptic bouncing, self-calming, timed reminders, rewards and consequences.

Dave also gives the teacher personal tips on being a positive person and explains how that will consequently then get a more positive result from the students. Such tips include positive body language, eye contact, sincerity, voice matching and intonation, verbal language, response style and empathy.

The DVD continues with looking at a problem-solving model and coming up with five different solutions then testing those solutions as to whether in a classroom situation they work, are safe, feel good and are fair.

Next Dave explores the benefits of one-to-one meetings: meeting the student and describing the problem and working with them to find a way forward.

Then finally the DVD concludes with a question and answer session with teachers in the audience, giving them suggested strategies for their own personal experiences of chronic behaviour problems.

COLLABORATIVE PLANNING: TRANSFORMING THEORY INTO PRACTICE

DVD 1 - Collaborative Planning: Transforming Theory into Practice

This DVD will provide you with an understanding of the value of collaborative planning and a thorough understanding of the five essential components to an effective collaborative teaming process. Richard Villa, nationally renowned lecturer and author of Creating an Inclusive School and Restructuring for Caring and Effective Education, presents a comprehensive overview of collaboration identifying the history, rationale and elements for its successful implementation in our nation's schools. From research and practice, Villa provides important information about how collaborative teams can function optimally. He visits with teachers engaged in transforming the theory of "collaborative planning" into successful instruction in the classroom. Collaborative teams of teachers are profiled and educators share how they met the many challenges and obstacles that needed to be overcome.

The viewer will learn:

To differentiate instruction through the power of collaborative planning To design collaboration using the P-I-G-S Face Model To identify how research-based theory can be transformed into practice To implement practical strategies that promote collaboration in schools To design inclusive classrooms based on collaborative planning and teaming

DVD 2 - Collaborative Teaching: The Co-Teaching Model

This second DVD in the Collaboration Series provides valuable information in the use of "co-teaching" as an effective instructional and organizational arrangement. Building on the five essential components of collaborative planning detailed in Tape 1, Villa reviews four basic models of "co-teaching":

Supportive Complimentary Parallel Split Team Teaching In addition to observing these models as they function in actual classrooms, you will see Villa as he helps educators address the most common issues and concerns related to implementing collaborative teaching in their schools. Richard Villa shares his expertise based on research and practice of professionals working across the country. Collaborative Teaching provides clear, concise and research-based information that enables educators to meet the challenges that any collaborative process entails.

The viewer will learn:

- To implement four approaches to successful co-teaching (supportive, complementary, parallel, and team teaching)
- To select appropriate strategies to ensure effective co-teaching in inclusive classrooms
- To overcome obstacles that are deterrents to the implementation of co-teaching
- To design co-teaching experiences based on the collaborative teaching model
- To differentiate instruction through the power of co-teaching

DIFFERENTIATION AND LITERACY: TEACHING READING AND WRITING

With the videos in this new course, you will be transported to a Best Practices Institute on Differentiating Literacy Instruction held on the campus of the University of Virginia. As a virtual participant in this conference, you will learn from author and differentiation expert, Dr. Carol Ann Tomlinson. In her presentation, Dr. Tomlinson describes how differentiated instruction can be best used to teach reading and writing in today's diverse classrooms. She gives examples of successful differentiated literacy lesson plans, shares personal experiences, and answers questions about the best ways to apply differentiation to literacy instruction. Also featured are teacher educators demonstrating how to apply differentiation concepts using pre-assessments, visual narratives, and real world documents.

In this course, you will learn how to:

- differentiate your instruction to reach children of varying literacy readiness levels.
- improve your instruction by adopting a growth mindset.
- use strategies such as flexible grouping and RAFT to enrich your literacy instruction.
- create reading and writing lesson plans and units utilizing differentiated instruction.

This course provides an excellent companion to our other three courses, "Introduction to Differentiation", "Differentiated Instructional Strategies" and "Differentiated Assessment Strategies". These four courses provide both the theory and skills necessary to successfully implement a differentiated approach to instruction.

POSITIVE BEHAVIOUR IN EARLY YEARS

The essentials of positive behaviour management within the early years setting

Positive Behaviour in Early Years looks at the essentials of positive behaviour management within the early years setting and examines the many things practitioners can do both individually and as a group to encourage positive behaviour and maintain effective and consistent behaviour management.

Practitioners are encouraged to review their own management approaches and consider their expectations and preconceptions. Developmental norms and team dynamics are discussed as well as the setting as a whole in terms of their impact on behaviour. Strong co-operation and collaboration with parents is put forward as a key strategy and the importance of objective observation and measurement are emphasised.

Positive Behaviour in Early Years is based on highly successful training programme developed with North Lanarkshire local authority as part of their innovative training programme for Early Years Practitioners which is widely used throughout Scotland.

WRITING WITH MENTORS

By Lynne Dorfman and Rose Cappelli

When learning how to write well, there is nothing more powerful than examining the work of the writers we admire. Real writers need mentors -- those writers who inspire us and demonstrate through their style and craft how we, too, can be successful writers.

In Writing with Mentors, Lynne Dorfman and Rose Cappelli, authors of Mentor Texts and Nonfiction Mentor Texts, take us inside two Pennsylvania classrooms and show us how we can use children's literature effectively to teach both informational and narrative writing.

Lynne joins fifth-grade teacher Dan

Monaghan to teach a lesson on effective leads in nonfiction. They model the "Sharing a Secret" lead, where students transition from telling secrets about themselves to using these secrets as a lead in longer essays to effectively hook readers. Rose joins two second-grade teachers in their fully-inclusive classroom to teach students all about the importance of setting and place in a good piece of narrative writing.

This video contains two programs, each over 90 minutes long, that show how a writing lesson evolves over two days. Viewers will see master teachers in action, demonstrating modeling, shared writing, whole group lessons, small group and one-on-one conferences, using writer's notebooks, and the all-important reflection upon the lesson.

Real-world writing and real writers don't follow a script. Join Lynne and Rose as they show us how to teach writing the way it was meant to be taught.

"I'LL BE THERE FOR YOU" - PROVIDING PERSON-CENTERED DEMENTIA CARE

By Jett Jousma

Learn how person-centered care can positively impact each day for persons with dementia...

This DVD shows how to make a hands-on shift to person-centered dementia care that engages the whole person and creates a support system based on each resident's needs and preferences.

From natural wake-ups to music therapy, the DVD looks at the benefits of involving residents in their care as much as possible, finding ways to help them to "continue" living life the way they prefer, and engaging them in personalized activities that boost self-esteem and interaction. It also empowers nursing assistants to act upon (and communicate to other team members) their first-hand knowledge of each resident to ensure a better understanding of their care needs.

HE WOULDN'T TURN ME LOOSE: THE SEXUAL ASSAULT CASE OF 96-YEAR-OLD MISS MARY

This DVD presents the real-life case of 96-year-old Miss Mary, who was financially exploited and later, sexually assaulted by her grandson. Miss Mary had been living with her grandson and his wife for five years during which financial abuse took place. Then, one evening, when his wife was out, the grandson sexually abused Miss Mary for several hours, leaving her bruised from head to toe.

After the attack and hospitalization, Miss Mary was placed in a nursing home under the name "Jane Doe" for safety reasons. Miss Mary's family refused to believe her and refused to support her; her primary social interactions were with staff and residents of the nursing home, and the advocates she met after the assault. However, Miss Mary retained her strength of character, and fully participated in the subsequent trial and prosecution of her grandson.

Through interviews with Miss Mary, various professionals involved in investigating and trying the case, and with victim advocates who helped Miss Mary, the DVD reveals some of the dynamics involved in this case, and how it was successfully brought to trial and prosecution.

INTO THE OTHER LANE: DRIVING AND DEMENTIA

This two-part DVD presents a compassionate, yet realistic portrait of the many issues faced by persons with dementia, (and their caregivers) when a decision has to be made about giving up driving.

Part One

Stories shows the real stories of five persons with dementia, and the impact that no longer being safe to drive makes on the autonomy and self-esteem of the person with dementia, as well as, the effects on family relationships and life styles. The stories are four to eleven minutes long, and put a human face on how it feels to be told that you can no longer drive, and how it feels to be a caregiver in this emotionally-charged process.

Part Two

Related Issues includes helpful insights from healthcare and driving safety professionals on how Alzheimer's affects driving ability, how to initiate the conversation about driving cessation, transportation options, and what healthcare specialists can do to help facilitate the situation for both the person with dementia and the caregiver.

This culture-changing DVD demonstrates (though real interactions) how person-centered care and knowledge of the resident can reduce dementia-related episodes, such as, sundowning and aggressive-protective reactions when bathing, and wanting to leave.

As it pinpoints the crucial role of the CAN as caregiver and friend, it also shows the importance of communicating directly, and creating a true "relationship" with persons with dementia. Caregivers will learn valuable tips to redirect and lessen anxieties for persons with dementia while preserving their personal autonomy and dignity.

The DVD covers:

- Building and maintaining a relationship
- Dealing with difficult situations
- Communicating to show respect
- Accepting their reality
- Respecting the person's preferences
- Encouraging use of remaining abilities

PERSON-CENTERED DEMENTIA CARE: STORIES AND EXAMPLES

"Who is this person - without dementia? If we can tap into who this person is, we can help their adjustment, and the process that they go through." - from the DVD

Through hands-on stories and examples, this chaptered DVD shows the positive impact of person-centered care. When caregivers meet persons with dementia "where they are" and find creative and engaging ways to connect with each individual, based on their needs and preferences, life is better for both residents and staff.

The DVD includes the case study of Elaine, a resident who, for extended periods of time, attempts to leave the facility and go home. By pinpointing the importance of knowing the resident, it shows how her "exit-seeking" behavior is addressed and managed in the context of who she is and what she needs at that particular time.

The DVD also shows how to make life richer for the residents who have dementia by

- personalizing their dining experience
- encouraging use of remaining abilities
- engaging them in creative activities

ENVIRONMENTAL STUDIES

AFTER THE SPILL

Directed by Jon Bowermaster

The oil and gas industry has historically dominated Louisiana politics and is largely responsible for the state's rapidly disappearing coastline.

Ten years ago Hurricane Katrina devastated the coast of Louisiana. Five years later the Deepwater Horizon exploded and spilled more than 200 million gallons of oil into the Gulf of Mexico, the worst ecologic disaster in North American history. Amazingly those aren't the worst things facing Louisiana's coastline today. It is that the state is fast disappearing through coastal erosion caused largely by oil and gas industry activity.

A follow-up to our 2010 film SoLa: Louisiana Water Stories, this film introduces us to some of the spill's most aggrieved victims as well as those who are desperately trying to save its coastline. Writer and historian John Barry who launched a suit against 97 oil and gas companies attempting to get them to pay their fair share for reparations caused by their explorations. Consultant and native son James Carville who manages to find some hope in new technologies that may save the coast. And Lt. Gen. Russell Honore, the man who saved New Orleans post-Katrina, whose new passion is for a Green Army he has recruited.

Fishermen, scientists, politicians, environmentalists, and oil-rig workers document how the coast of Louisiana has changed. What really happened to all that oil? What about the dispersant used to push it beneath the surface? How has the spill impacted local economies as well as human health and the health of both marine life and the Gulf itself? How much resilience is left in the people and coastline?

ANTHROPOCENE

Directed by Steve Bradshaw

Examines whether human impact has tipped the planet into a new geological epoch, the Anthropocene, with all of its political, social and behavioral implications.

A Working Group of international scientists is deciding whether to declare a new geological epoch - the Anthropocene - a planet shaped more by mankind than nature. Its members tell the story of the Anthropocene and argue whether it's a tragedy, a comedy, or something more surreal. With archival footage, award-winning stills and interviews, ANTHROPOCENE proposes a common secular narrative for mankind but leaves viewers to decide how we should write the ending. The film has the blessing of Nobel laureate Paul Crutzen, who coined the term, and is the first feature film about the Anthropocene. It is now our turn to decide-in this decade-how the Anthropocene will end.

Interviewees include Will Steffen, Erle Ellis, Jan Zalasiewicz, Andrew Revkin, John McNeil, Monica Berger Gonzalez, Eric Odada, Davor Vidas.

BLUESPACE

Directed by Ian Cheney

Contrasts sci-fi ideas about terraforming Mars with the state of NYC's waterways, and questions the viability of colonizing Mars before making our own planet sustainable.

Could humans live on Mars? Would we want to? Emmy-nominated filmmaker, Ian Cheney, provides insight into our currently unsustainable relationship with our home planet by examining the sci-fi speculation of "terraforming," or making another planet Earth-like, by altering its atmosphere. He calls on a multifaceted brain trust to process this big idea including a desert camp of Mars hopefuls, a bevy of sci-fi writers, Hurricane Sandy survivors, the Gowanus Dredgers Canoe Club, and a who's who of astrobiologists and earth scientists. BLUESPACE makes a strong case for taking better care of our water-rich planet so that future generations won't have to resort to interplanetary colonization.

At times whimsical and funny, serious and poignant and always stimulating, this is a unique exploration of current thinking about the origins and evolution of life and its relationship to water.

CULTIVATING KIDS

Directed by Melissa Young, Mark Dworkin

On South Whidbey Island, WA, a school farm shows that a garden can be a valuable addition to the curriculum while encouraging a healthy diet.

On South Whidbey Island in the state of Washington, a school farm involves children from kindergarten through high school in every phase of raising organic vegetables as part of their school experience. Supported by local non-profits, community volunteers, and the school district, it shows that a garden can be a valuable addition to a school curriculum, while encouraging children to eat healthy food. The school farm sells local, organic produce to the school cafeterias and also supplies the local food bank and community nutrition programs with fresh organic produce throughout the growing season.

DIVEST! THE CLIMATE MOVEMENT ON TOUR

Directed by Josh Fox, Steve Liptay

Chronicles 350.org's 'Do the Math' bus tour as it launched the fossil fuel divestment campaign onto the national and ultimately international stage.

As world governments struggle to meet the aspirational limit of 1.5°C of global warming agreed to at COP21 in Paris, a new campaign is targeting the fossil fuel industry in an effort to withdraw its social license to operate. DIVEST! Chronicles 350.org's 'Do the Math' bus tour across the United States in 2012 as it launched the fossil fuel divestment campaign onto the national and ultimately international stage.

Each night Bill McKibben and special guests laid out the findings in his landmark Rolling Stone article 'Global Warming's Terrifying New Math' and made both the moral and historical case for divestment. Three years later over 500 institutions representing over 3 trillion dollars in assets have committed to divest. The campaign is winning, but with the clock ticking down the question remains: will the victories add up enough to matter?

Featuring Naomi Klein, Reverend Lennox Yearwood, Dr. Sandra Steingraber, Josh Fox, Terry Tempest Williams, Winona LaDuke, Desmond Tutu and Ira Glass.

JUMBO WILD

Directed by Nick Waggoner

A 25-year battle in Canada's iconic Jumbo Valley pits developers of a large ski resort against conservationists, backcountry skiers and First Nations, who revere it as home of the grizzly bear spirit.

At the headwaters of the Columbia River in BC's Purcell Mountains, Jumbo Creek cascades out of deep snowpack, past crumbling glacial ice, wildflowers, and grizzly tracks. The Jumbo Valley has long been revered for its beauty; and to the Ktunaxa Nation, it is known as Qat'muk, home of the grizzly bear spirit.

Part of an important international wildlife corridor, the Jumbo Valley is one of only two areas in North America where grizzly bears can freely roam between Canada and the U.S. But, for nearly 25 years, local people -- First Nations, conservationists, backcountry skiers -- have fought a large-scale ski resort in Jumbo. Developers face environmental assessments, political roadblocks, and local outcry.

JUMBO WILD highlights the tension between the protection of wilderness and ever-increasing development interests in wild places, while bringing to life the passionate fight to protect the Jumbo Valley.

PLANETARY

Directed by Guy Reid

A provocative and breathtaking wakeup call - a cross continental cinematic journey that explores our cosmic origins and our future as a species.

We are in the midst of a global crisis of perspective. We have forgotten the undeniable truth that every living thing is connected.

PLANETARY is a provocative and breathtaking wakeup call -- a cross continental, cinematic journey. The film takes us from one of the truly extraordinary events of our civilization, space travel, and looks at how this gave us a totally different perspective on the Earth. It is a humbling reminder of the near-incalculable breadth of our impact on the earth, intellectually challenges us to reconsider our relationship with our home and the urgency to shift our perspective -- to remember that we are planetary.

Featuring interviews with thirty renowned experts including astronauts Ron Garan and Mae Jemison, celebrated environmentalist Bill McKibben, National Book Award winner Barry Lopez, National Geographic Explorer Elizabeth Lindsey and Head of the Tibetan Buddhist Kagyu school, the 17th Karmapa, Janine Benyus, Wade Davis, Joanna Macy, PLANETARY takes viewers on a cinematic journey to experience our world like never before.

SERVING ALCOHOL RESPONSIBLY

Anyone serving alcohol to customers must do so responsibly. This includes owners and licensees of premises, bar and drinks staff and security and other staff who might make judgments about patron behaviour. Alcohol affects people differently and it's important to recognise when someone is, or is becoming, alcohol-affected to the point where no more should be served. Even more critical is the ability to deal with a situation effectively and appropriately without disturbing other patrons. This video covers the skills required to ensure the responsible service of alcohol and includes interviews with hotel and live music venue owner Greg Dodds and wine bar operators Mark and Meredith Telfer. It is an ideal resource for learners in Hospitality and related courses.

FEAR OF 13, THE

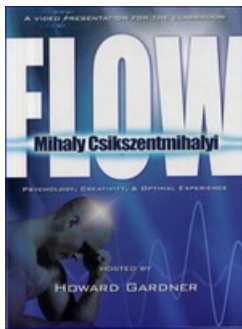

Director: David Singleton

After 23 years on Death Row a convicted murderer petitions the court asking to be executed. But as he tells his story, it gradually becomes clear that nothing is quite what it seems.

The Fear of 13 is a stylistically daring experiment in storytelling, a psychological thriller constructed from a single four-day long interview. In a monologue that is part confessional and part performance, Nick, the sole protagonist, tells a tale with all the twists and turns of classic crime drama. But as the story unfolds it reveals itself as something much deeper, an emotionally powerful meditation on the redemptive power of love and literature. A final shocking twist casts everything in a new light.

FLOW: PSYCHOLOGY, CREATIVITY, & OPTIMAL EXPERIENCE

By Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi

For more than 30 years, Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi (pronounced CHICK-sent-me-high-ee) has studied states of "optimal experience"—those times when we report feelings of deep concentration and fulfillment—when we transcend our ordinary consciousness, and become so completely involved that we lose our senses of time and self. In this state, we are at the peak of our abilities. In this state, we are in Flow.

Csikszentmihalyi's theory of Flow and his seminal work on creativity have revolutionized modern psychology, the social sciences, and even corporate management.

Now, join host Howard Gardner (Multiple Intelligences theory) as he leads your students on the intellectual journey through the life and mind of Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi.

From war-torn Italy to a chance encounter with Carl Jung to a swimming accident in Hawaii that would catalyze the formation of "positive psychology," Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi's fascinating story charts the course of a sweeping intellectual adventure. It is a story that plots decades of insights and breakthroughs that would ultimately crystallize in the theory of Flow, and his definitive treatise on creativity.

GROUP DYNAMICS AND THE NEW HEROISM: THE ETHICAL ALTERNATIVE TO THE STANFORD PRISON EXPERIMENT

By Phil Zimbardo and Bill Roller

GROUP DYNAMICS AND THE NEW HEROISM is a six hour video series which captures the unscripted, spontaneous group process of eight individuals as they learn how to work together and form groups that will help motivate and sustain the courageous actions they wish to pursue.

Our film tracks them as they obey their conscience and act in concert with each other. The viewer can follow the steps of the group as they organize themselves to act courageously and nonviolently for an ethical cause—then see them carry their project to fulfillment. We supply commentaries to help viewers follow the progress of the group.

Scapegoating was the primary dynamic in the Stanford Prison Experiment. But scapegoating is not the only way to create drama in a narrative. We present a dramatic story that is fresh and new—of people who resist scapegoating in all its guises, challenge unjust authority, and act in the public interest.

Our film series will help people practice civil obedience to universal values enshrined in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the laws of the United States. It will guide viewers to act with respect for humanity, resist scapegoating of those who appear different, and activate the creative energy of nonconformity.

This film series is essential viewing for organizations dedicated to peace and justice who want to put their political and social thought to work in real life situations. College and university departments of social psychology, sociology, psychology, political science, anthropology, and other human sciences will find the format useful in creating classes that challenge and inspire students.

HUMAN GROWTH & DEVELOPMENT: WORKING WITH ADOLESCENTS AND YOUNG ADULTS

With Shannon Dermer, Rebecca E. Michel

Dr. Michel takes a positive psychology approach to promote optimum development and wellness in working with adolescents and young adults. She defines the strength-based approach and discusses the benefits of using that approach with this population. In Part 2, Dr. Michel facilitates a mock session with a high school student to demonstrate the strengths-based approach. In Part 3, Drs. Dermer and Michel review the mock client interview and discuss the strategies and techniques Dr. Michel demonstrated in the session.

POSITIVE PSYCHOLOGY AND THE STUDY OF HUMAN STRENGTHS

With Rebecca E. Michel

Dr. Michel defines positive psychology as being the study of what makes life worth living, emphasizing both human strengths and areas of growth. Positive psychology has three broad areas of focus—positive emotions, positive subjective experiences, and interpersonal virtues. Dr. Michel discusses concrete examples of what mental health practitioners can do to incorporate positive psychology into their practice.

PROMISE OF GROUP THERAPY, THE: THE BEGINNING PHASES

By Vivian Nelson, Bill Roller

THIS THREE-PART SERIES presents scenes from a spontaneous, unscripted group that met for ten sessions with individuals willing to reveal themselves before a live camera.

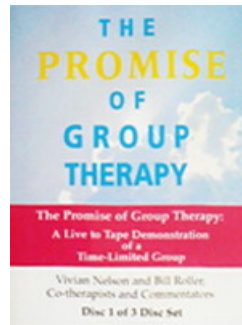

The six-hour series introduces a unique way to conceptualize small group process. As the group evolves, the videos demonstrate the phases of group therapy development and emergent leadership roles articulated by Ariadne P. Beck, founder of the Chicago Group Development Research Team and preeminent researcher in the field of group dynamics.

Throughout the series provide concise (and, we hope, incisive) commentary on the group, so that the viewer learns how object relations can be applied to the group therapy setting. The work of other systems theorists is also introduced, providing a practical method to contain conflict and intense affect by the skillful use of subgroups.

Such basic concepts as projective identification, dissociation, part-object transference, and countertransference are clearly illustrated. In our commentary we try to elaborate the meaning of the group structure and demonstrate how it maybe used to facilitate the growth of each member.

PSYCHOLOGY AND THE NEW HEROISM

PHILIP ZIMBARDO and DANIEL ELLSBERG in conversation

Philip Zimbardo is Professor Emeritus of Psychology at Stanford University and creator of the well-known Stanford Prison Experiment. Daniel Ellsberg is a former analyst at the Rand Corporation and served in the Pentagon under Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara. An author and political activist, he is best known as the whistleblower who released documents to the public which detailed the secrets and lies that shaped three decades of American foreign policy in Vietnam—documents which became known as the Pentagon Papers.

These two icons of progressive thought in America met for the first time to discuss a salient question for our times: Why are some people willing to take courageous nonviolent action in defense of ethical principles—even at personal risk to themselves? This video captures that conversation and calls for a new era of truth-telling or whistle blowing by citizens privy to crucial and often classified information that the public deserves to know. Zimbardo and Ellsberg also call for a new ethic of accountability by those leaders who govern the United States, its judiciary and its military.

They challenge ordinary people to do extraordinary things—to envision themselves as active and empowered and willing to take calculated risks in the service of their conscience and their fellow citizens. This defines the New Heroism. Students of psychology, sociology, political science, and recent United States history will find much to learn from this poignant and historic encounter.

PSYCHOPHARMACOLOGY OF ANXIETY, THE

With Cyrus Marcellus Ellis

Dr. Ellis begins by discussing the particular warning signs that accompany clinical anxiety and then discusses how pharmacology can be used as part of a comprehensive approach for treating anxiety. He defines pharmacology as: how a drug is made, its primary use (in this case for the treatment of anxiety) and its side effects. He describes the impact of medication on the body to reduce anxiety symptoms and the other possible side effects to the body's systems that may be affected. He discusses what clinical anxiety really looks like along with the accompanying characteristics such as constant worry, extreme rumination, and debilitating anxiety.

SCIENCES

BIOSPHERE, THE

Global warming, ozone depletion and acid rain all make headlines and the evening news. In order to understand these and other global environmental problems, students need to understand what biologists call the biosphere.

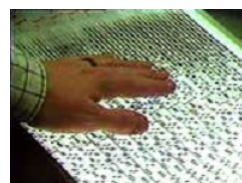

Part 1. A Brief History of the Biosphere. How did the biosphere come to be? Traces the history of four billion years of the growth of the atmosphere and of changing life on planet earth.

Part 2. The Biosphere Today. Gives the student a clear, dramatic picture of the scientific concepts needed to understand the biosphere today.

In The Biosphere the keys to scientific literacy include: aerobic, ages of earth, anaerobic, amino acids, ammonia, bacteria, biosphere, carbon dioxide, chemical cycles, ecosystem, enzymes, evolution, fossil fuels, Gaia, global warming, greenhouse effect, homeostasis, methane, meteor, molecules, natural selection, niche, nitrogen, nitrogen cycle, nucleic acids, oxygen, ozone, phosphorus, photosynthesis, pollution, proteins, recycling, respiration, sulfur.

DISEASE AND HEALTH

Michael Moore's movie Sicko captured the attention of many Americans. Our program Disease and Health avoids scare tactics, selective anecdotes and biased logic. Instead it adds much needed historical perspective to questions of disease and health today. Also stresses the need for science and for common sense in dealing with health.

Part 1. Disease and Health in Past Ages. Many of the proudest and many of the saddest moments in human history have centered on disease and health. Here we focus on some of the giant steps that medical science has taken to conquer disease and to foster health. Highlighted is the work of pioneers like Jenner, Koch, Pasteur and Jonas Salk.

Part 2. The Science of Health. An overview of consensus and dispute within the scientific community today about health and disease. Personal choice issues in health like smoking, diet and drugs are emphasized.

In Disease and Health the keys to scientific literacy include: AIDS, anatomy, anesthetic, anthrax, antibiotics, Black Death, cancer, epidemic, health quackery, Hippocrates, holistic medicine, immunization, Jenner, Koch, malaria, oxygen, Pasteur, physiology, placebo, pollution, smallpox, toxic wastes, tuberculosis, vaccine, vitamins.

ECOSYSTEMS

What is ecology? How can it help us understand the world we live in? A 2005 revised and updated program ideal for life science and environmental studies.

Part 1. From Nature Study to Ecology. The naturalist tradition of Henry David Thoreau is contrasted with the hard science tradition of modern quantitative ecology. New video footage from Walden Pond and from Silver Springs, Florida, where Eugene and Howard Odum did their pioneering work in the 1950s.

Part 2. The Web of Life. Carefully outlines concepts used by ecologists to study ecosystems today. Program includes a look at how human values play key roles in environmental choices.

In Ecosystems the keys to scientific literacy include: abiotic, acid rain, biosphere, Rachel Carson, chemical cycles, consumer, decomposer, ecology, food chains, greenhouse effect, natural selection, niche, ozone, parasite, photosynthesis, predator, producer, quantitative, recycling, species, thermodynamics, Thoreau, toxic wastes.

ENERGY AND SOCIETY

Relying on evidence from the past as well as the present, this program explains how energy availability relates to economic growth and human progress. Updated in 2007 it provides ideal introduction to energy issues of 21st century in secondary and college classrooms. This new DVD version includes guided questions and quizzes to help the teacher reinforce concepts recommended in the National Science Education Standards.

Part 1. A Brief History of Energy and Society. Traces the part played by energy throughout human history-muscle power to wind and water to fossil fuels to nuclear and solar energy and to large increases in efficiency today.

Part 2. Energy for Today and Tomorrow. Explains basic concepts in energy science and offers insights into energy production and use for today and tomorrow.

In Energy and Society the keys to scientific literacy include: acid rain, agricultural revolution, carbon dioxide, democracy, efficiency, energy, fission, foot-pounds, fossil fuels, fusion, global warming, greenhouse effect, horsepower, Industrial Revolution, kilowatt, laws of thermodynamics, nuclear energy, photosynthesis, power, renewable energy, solar energy, solar voltaic cells, Watt, watt.

ENERGY ON EARTH

As the third millennium begins, earth relies ever more heavily on fossil fuel energy. This program helps students understand basic laws of energy flow, the importance of energy supplies for industrial civilizations, and the options for the new century. Stresses the importance of research into alternatives, including nuclear power, that do not add to global warming.

EVOLUTION: HOW THEORIES OF EVOLUTION WERE DEVELOPED/EVOLUTION BY NATURAL SELECTION

Teaches the basic science of modern evolution theory. Includes a history of how evolution was discovered and reviews present-day controversies. Significantly updated in 2007. Would be of effective help to teachers challenged by students who hold to non-scientific "theories" like Creationism and Intelligent Design.

Part 1. How Theories of Evolution Were Developed. Exclusive Hawkhill on-site video in the Galapagos Islands and at Darwin's study in England help demonstrate the achievement of this pioneer.

Part 2. Evolution by Natural Selection. A straight-forward presentation of the theory of evolution by natural selection as it is understood by most biologists today.

In Evolution the keys to scientific literacy include: ages of earth, Age of Reptiles, amphibian, binomial nomenclature, Cenozoic, creationism, Darwin, dinosaur extinction, fossil, genus, heredity, Homo sapiens, Stephen Jay Gould, Lamarck, Linnaeus, Mesozoic, mutation, natural selection, Neanderthal, paleontology, Precambrian, punctuated equilibrium, species, theory, trilobite, vertebrate, Wallace.

HUMAN GENOME PROJECT, THE

Help your students learn why the Human Genome Project is revolutionary. The goal of the project (already achieved in rough form in 2001) is to decipher all of the genes in the human species, that is, to make public the detailed blueprints for making a human being.

This program takes you inside an automated gene sequencing laboratory where your students will learn how human genes are isolated, fragmented and how their DNA base sequences are determined. Controversial ethical issues are also addressed.

INTELLIGENCE UNDER THE MICROSCOPE

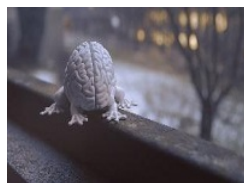

According to several IQ studies, our intelligence is declining as populations grow. Why should that be? And is IQ an adequate measure of human intelligence - the amazing faculty that has enabled us to achieve dominion over nature? Scientists from many different fields are scrutinizing our intelligence, be it innate (genetic) or acquired through environment, education and learning processes, in an attempt to determine what intelligence really is.

Meanwhile, others are working on ways of boosting our brain power. An experiment in which human brain cells were grafted onto the brains of mice found that their abilities increased tenfold. This and other similar discoveries are sparking new ideas for ways to improve our abilities. Via a fascinating journey through the maze of the human brain, we learn that there are several forms of human intelligence, among which creativity appears to be one of the most unusual and the most uniquely human.

KEY TO CONSCIOUSNESS, THE: A JOURNEY INTO THE STUFF OF THOUGHTS

What is consciousness? Where do our thoughts come from? What are the connections between mind and matter? Even today, no one knows the answers. Human consciousness - the small inner voice that says "I", through which we apprehend the world, is one of the greatest mysteries in contemporary science.

Scientists believe that our thoughts and feelings do not spring from a disembodied mind but from the body, and specifically from one particular organ: the brain. As far as they are concerned, our every least whim and all our choices are written into the tangle of neurons in a code that has yet to be deciphered. But that still does not tell us where decisions are made. Is it possible to identify the physical seat of free will? How does our consciousness influence the workings of our brain? From the dawning of consciousness in newborn babies via dreams, states of coma and meditation, this documentary takes us on an exploration of the extraordinary enigma of consciousness.

NUCLEAR POWER

This up-to-date program brings knowledge and perspective to an emotionally charged subject. Includes video footage from Los Alamos, Three Mile Island, Oak Ridge and other centers of nuclear research. Program can help provide a base in science and history for discussion of nuclear power issues, including new developments in connections between energy production and global warming.

Part 1. The History of Nuclear Power. Tells the story of how nuclear power was developed in World War II and how it has come to be an important source of power (and controversy) today.

Part 2. Nuclear Power Today and Tomorrow. Helps the student understand the basic scientific principles involved in nuclear reactions. Includes pros and cons of nuclear energy in the future.

In Nuclear Power the keys to scientific literacy include: atomic number, atomic weight, background radiation, Niels Bohr, chain reaction, Chernobyl, Marie Curie, Albert Einstein, $E=mc^2$, Enrico Fermi, fission, fusion, half-life, Hiroshima, hydrogen bomb, isotopes, meltdown, neutrons, plutonium, protons, radiation, radioactive wastes, Three Mile Island, U-235.

Students usually hear only one side of this important issue. (In 2003 a United Nations panel reversed itself, and now fears population decline more than population explosion-even in the developing world!). This program presents many sides using new year-2000 video footage from China, India, Africa, Europe and the U.S.

SOCIAL SCIENCES

AMERICAN REDS

Director: Richard Wormser

Weaving powerful and compelling personal stories told by American Communists with objective historical sources and analysis, American Reds: "What Must We Dream Of?" illuminates the epic story of the rise and fall of the American Communist Party.

Between 1920 and 1960, more than one million men and women joined the Party to fight for the emancipation of American workers from economic tyranny and plutocracy, for the freedom of minorities from racism and sexism, for the defense of America from fascism, and for the ultimate creation of a radiant society based on freedom, equality, justice, and fraternity.

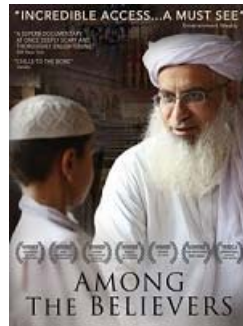

American Reds features unseen interviews by Richard Wormser of notable Party members such as Gus Hall, Henry Winston, Anne Burlak Timpson, Robert Schrank, and Steve Nelson; rare footage from the Moscow archives; and interviews with scholars such as Glenda Gilmore, Beverly Gage, Harvey Klehr, John Haynes, Vivian Gornick, and Eric Arnesen.

Professors of both U.S. and social history will find a valuable teaching tool in American Reds. It provides a perspective on the past that few Americans are aware of while raising a number of key issues concerning social change, idealism, ideology, and the nature of our economic and political system that continue to remain vital issues in contemporary America.

ACTIVISTS, THE: WAR, PEACE, AND POLITICS IN THE STREETS

Directed by Melody Shemtov

The story of activists who opposed the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, including their lives, the tactics they used, and the historical context.

Activists and activism have long been a part of the struggle for peace and justice in American politics and society. Activists have fought battles for civil rights, voter enfranchisement, collective bargaining, and an end to wars. While these struggles have sometimes yielded significant victories, and at other times resulted in disappointing defeats, activism has always been driven by ordinary people who give freely of their time and resources to try to bring about their visions for a new world. However, activists -- as well as how they fit into the political process -- are often overlooked or misunderstood by their fellow citizens.

The Activists: War, Peace, and Politics in the Streets brings to life the stories of ordinary people who tried to stop and end the U.S. wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. At best, activists had limited influence over the conduct of military policy after 9/11. Yet, their experiences in the antiwar movement helped them to learn about speaking out in the face of injustice. They inspired others to do the same during the Arab Spring and Occupy Wall Street movements. Indeed, democracy requires more than just one vote every four years. It requires continued pressure by citizens on their government. This is what democracy looks like!

Featuring leading activists and scholars including Tom Hayden, Leslie Cagan, Medea Benjamin, and Michael Heaney.

BONSAI PEOPLE: THE VISION OF MUHAMMAD YUNUS

Directed by Holly Mosher
Starring Muhammad Yunus

Bonsai People is a feature length documentary film that explores the work of Nobel Peace Prize winner Muhammad Yunus and his vision from microcredit to social business.

What if you could harness the power of the free market to solve the problems of poverty, hunger, and inequality? To some, it sounds impossible. But Nobel Peace Prize winner Muhammad Yunus is doing exactly that. Bonsai People celebrates Yunus' extraordinary humanitarian work, which started by lending $27 to 42 people out of his own pocket and has now grown to helping 1 out of every 1,000 people on earth. But he didn't stop there - whenever he sees a problem he starts a business, creating a mix between business and social work, which he's coined "social business." By tackling some of the world's most vexing problems from healthcare, education to alternative energy, he is demonstrating to the world that complex problems sometimes do have simple answers. Microcredit is just the tip of the iceberg!

BURDEN OF PEACE

By Joey Boink

Burden of Peace tells the remarkable story of Claudia Paz y Paz, the first woman to lead the Public Prosecutor's Office of Guatemala. A country that has been ravaged for years by a devastating civil war, in which nearly 200,000 Mayan Indians were systematically massacred, is currently one of the most violent countries in the world. Drug cartels, corruption, rape, and violence rule everyday Guatemalan life, with little repercussions for offenders. As prosecutor, Claudia seeks justice for her nation's victims, and begins an assault that starts at the top, with government officials. She manages the extraordinary achievement of convicting former dictator Efraín Ríos Montt on charges of genocide.

Since her first year in office, Claudia bravely gave access to documentary filmmakers, which resulted in an intimate glimpse into the life of a woman who will stop at nothing to break the cycle of violence and seek justice in the name of her nation's people. Her achievements don't come without sacrifices, however, and it isn't long before the government seeks to remove Claudia from office and threatens her life. This intense film shows an unfiltered look at the way those in power will stop at nothing to silence those who threaten their existence. Will Claudia be able to break the cycle of violence and corruption in her country? What will be the burden of the peace she seeks?

DISTURBING THE PEACE

Directed by Stephen Apkon, Andrew Young

A film about people born into conflict, sworn to be enemies, Palestinians and Israelis, who challenged their fate and joined together to say "enough."

In a world torn by conflict--in a place where the idea of peace has been abandoned--an energy of determined optimism emerges. When someone is willing to disturb the status quo and stand for the dream of a free and secure world, who will stand with them?

DISTURBING THE PEACE is a story of the human potential unleashed when we stop participating in a story that no longer serves us and, with the power of our convictions, take action to create new possibilities. DISTURBING THE PEACE follows former enemy combatants--Israeli soldiers from elite units and Palestinian fighters, many of whom served years in prison--who have joined together to challenge the status quo and say "enough."

The film reveals their transformational journeys from soldiers committed to armed battle to nonviolent peace activists, leading to the creation of Combatants for Peace. While based in the Middle East, DISTURBING THE PEACE evokes universal themes relevant to us all and inspires us to become active participants in the creation of our world.

Directed by Eve Marson

The case of Dr. William Hurwitz educates audiences on the complexities involved in opioid painkiller prescriptions.

The story of Dr. William Hurwitz - a preeminent pain specialist sentenced to 25 years in prison for drug trafficking - provides a window into the ethical dilemma of opioid prescriptions. Painkillers give doctors tremendous power to relieve pain, a primary goal of any physician. But this power begets trouble when the same drugs can lead to addiction, abuse and death.

In 2004 Dr. William Hurwitz was convicted of over 50 counts of narcotics distribution and handed a 25-year prison sentence. DR. FEELGOOD traces Dr. Hurwitz's trial and eventual appeal, detailing the events that led to his arrest.

Testimonies from the witnesses in Dr. Hurwitz's case contradict one another - some revere him, while others condemn him. Taken together, their accounts reveal a profile of a compassionate yet flawed doctor. The film, in telling his story, underscores the tension between every patient's right to pain relief and the lawful need for drug control. There could not be a more critical time to spark discussion on the topic, and call for careful thought and action.

DREAM ON

Dream On investigates the perilous state of the American Dream after decades of rising income inequality and declining economic mobility. In an epic road trip, political comedian John Fugelsang retraces the journey of Alexis de Tocqueville, whose study of our young country in 1831 came to define America as a place where anyone, of any background, could climb the ladder of economic opportunity. Following in the Frenchman's footsteps, Fugelsang asks whether the optimistic spirit of the American Dream that Tocqueville popularized is alive and well in the twenty-first century, or whether George Carlin was right when he famously quipped, "It's called the American Dream because you have to be asleep to believe it."

EAST OF SALINAS

Directed by Laura Pacheco, Jackie Mow

Jose Anzaldo is an excellent student with a bright future except that he is undocumented, the child of migrant farm laborers in California's Salinas Valley.

EAST OF SALINAS begins with 3rd grader Jose Anzaldo telling us what he wants to be when he grows up. His parents work from sun up to sun down in the heart of California's "Steinbeck Country," the Salinas Valley. With little support available at home, Jose often turns to his teacher, Oscar Ramos, once a migrant farm kid himself. In fourth grade his teacher told him if he worked hard he could have a different life. Oscar won a scholarship to the University of California, Berkeley. The day he earned his degree, he bought a car and drove home to the fields. He's been teaching ever since.

Jose is Oscar's most gifted student. But how do you teach students like Jose who have no place to do their homework? How do you teach a kid who moves every few months? This is what Oscar is up against every day. Oscar not only teaches his students reading, math and science, he gives them access to a world beyond their reach.

But Jose was born in Mexico--and he's on the cusp of understanding the implications of that. As we watch this play out over three years, we begin to understand the cruelty of circumstance--for Jose and the many millions of undocumented kids like him.

EAST OF SALINAS asks, What is lost when kids like Jose are denied opportunities?

EL POETA

Directed by Katie Galloway, Kelly Duane de la Vega

After his only son is murdered in the Mexican drug war, a mystic poet launches an international crusade to save his country.

EL POETA tells the story of renowned Mexican poet Javier Sicilia, who ignited mass protests and an ongoing movement for peace after the brutal murder of his 24-year-old son Juan Francisco - collateral damage in a drug war that has left 60,000+ dead since 2006 - the majority civilians.

Drawing on the philosophical, artistic and spiritual dimensions of Sicilia and his movement, EL POETA reinterprets the "hard news" horror story of the Mexican drug war as a deeply personal, poetic and at times even hopeful one, tracing Sicilia's path from poet and father to movement leader and international symbol of grief and redemption.

FARMER AND THE CHEF, THE

David Kinch of Manresa Restaurant is a world famous chef with a new project, aiming to create a two-star Michelin dining experience that reflects the Northern Californian culture he loves. Cynthia Sandberg of Love Apple Farms is a farmer who has dedicated her life to creating sustainably produced and impeccably nurtured ingredients. Will the collaboration between these two food geniuses create a world-class restaurant, or will their differences destroy both the farmer and the chef?

The Farmer & The Chef follows this ambitious pair as they work together to make the perfect biodynamic meal. It delves into their shared passion for sustainable farming and quality product, showing their return to the old values of farm-grown produce while never shying away from the latest techniques. The film provides excellent examples of how farms and restaurants do business, following Cynthia's move from a 2-acre garden to an 80-acre farm with over 300 products to keep up with Chef Kinch as he increases his cooking ten-fold.

The documentary details the in-depth interdependence of farms and restaurants, and, above all, emphasizes the respectful relationship between the chef, the farmer, and the land they both depend on for survival.

FIRST DEGREE

By Roger Weisberg

Nationwide, nearly half of released inmates return to prison within 5 years. First Degree takes viewers inside Sing Sing Prison, one of the nation's most infamous maximum-security prisons, and presents a remarkable program that has dropped the recidivism rate to under 2%. Mercy College has partnered with the prison to provide an opportunity for inmates to earn a college degree, and with it, an entirely new life upon release. This inspiring documentary introduces us to the inmates who are actively choosing to change their life paths by participating in the college program, including convicted murderers and gang members who have now become role models for other inmates. First Degree shows how the diploma these men earn is far more than just a piece of paper; it is a second chance at life itself.

GERMANS & JEWS

Director: Janina Quint

Today, Europe's fastest growing Jewish population is in Berlin. Germany is considered one of the most democratic societies in the world, assuming the position of moral leader of Europe as they embrace hundreds of thousands of refugees. Through hard work, grassroots action, and productive confrontation of the moral responsibilities of democratic citizenship, the German people have given Hitler his greatest defeat.

Through personal stories, Germans & Jews explores Germany's transformation as a society, from silence about the Holocaust to facing it head on. Unexpectedly, a nuanced story of reconciliation emerges. What began as a private conversation between the two filmmakers and friends, Tal Recanati (Jewish) and Janina Quint (non-Jewish German), grew into a cultural exchange among many. Sitting in on a dinner party of the Germans and Jews featured in the film, we see a people whose lives are inextricably linked through the memory of the Holocaust. What does it mean to take responsibility for the past? How can we do it? The scholars, intellectuals, and citizens in this film are diligently and actively seeking thoughtful and honest answers.

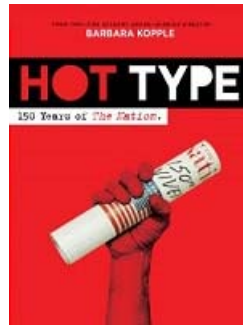

This is a lesson in modern history, as well as a measured study in the most radically successful example of social and cultural reconciliation in modern times. Watch and learn how tolerant and thoughtful confrontation of the past can radically re-form the social fabric of the present and create a shared vision for a united and enlightened future. Great mechanisms of democracy - the school classrooms, public discourse, public art - are productively at work. As movements in the United States such as Black Lives Matter shed light on persisting racial injustice and the deep trauma of unresolved conflict, those who want to imagine what it would look like to successfully encounter the legacy of white privilege can look to Germans & Jews as an essential roadmap to meaningful progress.

Germans & Jews is at once uncomfortable and provocative, unexpected and enlightening.

HOT TYPE: 150 YEARS OF THE NATION

Director: Barbara Kopple

Hot Type: 150 Years of The Nation is a vivid, inside look at America's oldest continuously published weekly magazine. Shot over three years in intimate, cinema verite style, the film captures the day-to-day pressures and challenges of publishing the progressive magazine as it follows reporters out into the field, the editors who shape their work, and the editor-in-chief who tries to keep all of the plates spinning.

Writers are the heart and soul of the magazine, and the film follows them extensively. Sasha Abramsky travels to West Texas to report on the years-long drought that has gripped the region and the devastating economic impact on farmers and residents. John Nichols unpacks what's going on behind the effort to recall Wisconsin governor Scott Walker. Amy Wilentz visits the "temporary" tent camps of Haiti, three years after the earthquake, to shed light on the dire conditions and lackluster international response. And Dani McClain reports on the Moral Monday movement in North Carolina, and its dynamic leader Rev. William Barber, as they push back against an extreme right-wing takeover of the state legislature.

In all of the current-day reported stories, The Nation's incredible trove of archival articles - and roster of writers - acts as an historical touchstone and illuminates how the past continuously ripples through and shapes current events.

At a fascinating moment in American history - politically, socially and culturally - the media landscape is changing at breathtaking speed. The film charts the journey of The Nation - and the nation - evolving into the future, as it is guided by its remarkable past.

IN OUR SON'S NAME

Directed by Gayla Jamison

Phyllis and Orlando Rodríguez's lives shatter when their son, Greg dies with thousands of others in the World Trade Center on September 11, 2001. Instead of seeking revenge, the grieving parents begin a journey of reconciliation that transforms their lives. The film follows their odyssey, which thrusts them reluctantly into the public eye as they speak out against war in Iraq and Afghanistan, oppose the death penalty for 9/11 conspirator Zacarias Moussaoui, and befriend his mother.

Seeking to understand the nature of violence, they engage in an emotional dialog with men incarcerated at Sing Sing prison for violent crimes, who themselves seek reconciliation. Over time Phyllis and Orlando reach a new understanding of their rebellious son, who had just begun to find his way when his life was cut short.

The film mixes in-depth interviews with on-location footage and striking archival photographs and video to create a deeply personal story that invites us to re-consider conventional concepts of justice and healing.

INCARCERATING US

Directed by Regan Hines

Exposes America's prison problem and explores various criminal justice reforms.

Incarcerating US exposes America's prison problem and explores ways to unshackle the "land of the free" through vital criminal justice reforms. With 2.3 million people behind bars, the U.S. has the largest prison population in the history of the world.

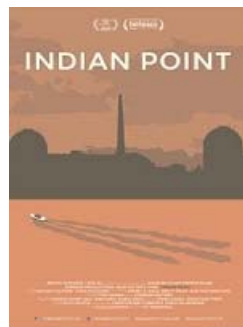

Through dramatic first-hand accounts, expert testimony, and shocking statistics, Incarcerating US asks fundamental questions about the prison system in America: What is the purpose of prison? Why did our prison population explode in the 1970s? What can make our justice system more just?

The film begins with a brief overview of U.S. prisons and the flawed policies that fueled unprecedented overincarceration. In many cases, these laws exacerbate problems they were designed to solve. Through both empirical evidence and the eyes of those tragically affected by the system for committing minor crimes, we see the failures of two major initiatives: the War on Drugs and mandatory minimum sentences.

Incarcerating US tells the story of America's broken criminal justice system through the eyes of those who created it, those who have suffered through it, and those who are fighting to change it. After decades of failures, now is the time to unshackle the land of the free.

INDIAN POINT

Director: Ivy Meeropol

Indian Point Nuclear Power Plant looms just 35 miles from Times Square. With over 50 million people living in close proximity to the aging facility, its continued operation has the support of the plant's operators and the NRC - Nuclear Regulatory Commission - yet has stoked a great deal of controversy in the surrounding community, including a vocal anti-nuclear contingent concerned that what happened at Japan's Fukushima nuclear plant could happen here. In the brewing fight for clean energy and the catastrophic possibilities of government complacency, director Ivy Meeropol presents a balanced argument about the issues surrounding nuclear energy and offers a startling reality check for our uncertain nuclear future.

INVISIBLE SCARS

Director: Johnna Janis & Sergio Myers

"I am Johnna Janis and 'Invisible Scars' is based on my life as a survivor of child sexual abuse. Many years ago someone shared their personal story of abuse, and urged me to begin focusing on healing from my past. Years later, this gave me strength and courage to begin my own healing journey." - Johnna Janis, Filmmaker

Although she projects strength and confidence, Johnna reveals the life-long struggles she has faced from the events that have haunted her since childhood.

With the help of experts and leaders in the fight against CSA, she comes to understand how her emotional trauma has negatively impacted her self-image, her inter-personal relationships, and nearly all significant decisions in her life. Armed with this awareness, she explores tools and resources which are available to help CSA victims overcome the debilitating effects of their childhood experiences.

Every child deserves to be loved, and the opportunity to lead a happy and healthy life. Unfortunately, statistics show that childhood sexual abuse is rampant in our society: one in four girls and one in six boys will be sexually abused by the age of 18. There are currently somewhere around 40 million adult survivors of CSA; the odds are we all know someone who was targeted.

Those children who are victimized carry 'invisible scars' throughout their adult lives. Child sexual abuse is difficult for people to talk about, causing fear, shame, and anxiety, all of which promote silence. Predators rely on that silence to remain undetected and perpetrate their abuse, while imposing a lifetime of suffering on their innocent victims. The first step in the fight against CSA is to raise awareness of the devastating traumatic impact on its victims - to shatter the silence that protects the perpetrators. Invisible Scars opens that dialogue.

LAW NOT WAR: BEN FERENCZ'S FIGHT FOR JUSTICE

By Ulabrith Horn

Law Not War is a moving portrait of the last surviving Chief Prosecutor of the Nuremberg Trials, 95-year-old Benjamin Ferencz. The film offers both a look back into history as well as an examination of current issues of war, justice and the International Criminal Court (ICC). From historic Court Room 600 in Nuremberg, Benjamin Ferencz relives his memories of the famous trials through intimate interviews, which are interwoven with historic film footage and statements from other international leaders in the field.

Ferencz's life is defined by his remarkable journey from a poor, immigrant family in Hell's Kitchen, New York through Harvard Law School, to become Chief Prosecutor at the Nuremberg trials at the age of 27. At an age when most people's careers have not even begun, Ferencz was prosecuting the Einsatzgruppen, the group of Nazi soldiers who were known as death squads, and who were responsible for mass killings that took place during the Holocaust.

After the Nuremberg Trials, Ferencz became a tireless fighter for the ideals that they represented. He devoted his life to the principle that war crimes should be prosecuted, and he worked relentlessly for the ICC to actualize that, despite the fact that the political climate during the Cold War was not favourable to his position.

Ferencz still travels the world today, 70 years after the Nuremberg Trials, seeking both peace and justice for those who commit war crimes. 70 years later, his struggle is as relevant now as it was in 1945. As Ferencz himself says, "We have to turn to law instead of war. Or else we will destroy the whole world."

LOVE & SOLIDARITY: JAMES LAWSON & NONVIOLENCE IN THE SEARCH FOR WORKERS' RIGHTS

Directed by Michael Honey

An exploration of nonviolence and organizing through the life and teachings of Rev. James Lawson.

LOVE & SOLIDARITY is an exploration of nonviolence and organizing through the life and teachings of Rev. James Lawson. Lawson provided crucial strategic guidance while working with Martin Luther King, Jr., in southern freedom struggles and the Memphis sanitation strike of 1968. Moving to Los Angeles in 1974, Lawson continued his nonviolence organizing in multi-racial community and worker coalitions that have helped to remake the LA labor movement.

Through interviews and historical documents, acclaimed labor and civil rights historian Michael Honey and award-winning filmmaker Errol Webber put Lawson's discourse on nonviolent direct action on the front burner of today's struggles against economic inequality, racism and violence, and for human rights, peace, and economic justice.

MONEY TALKS: PROFITS BEFORE PATIENT SAFETY

By Kathleen Slattery-Moschkau, Holly Mosher, John Wellington Ennis

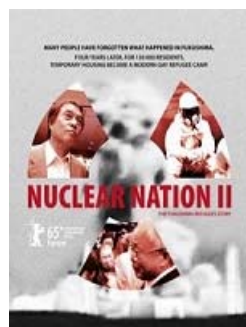

Award winning documentary on the marketing tactics of drug companies.

Money Talks exposes the questionable tactics that big drug companies use to make record profits by playing with the safety of our family's health care. Using misleading advertising, attractive "drug reps" who wine and dine doctors and other unethical practices, the drug industry makes billions of dollars every year selling us unsafe, unnecessary and overpriced drugs. If you want to protect the people you love from their dangerous practices that compromise the safety and quality of our health care, Money Talks is a must-see film.

- American Library Association (ALA) honors Money Talks as one of the most important films of 2008.

NUCLEAR NATION II

Director: Atsushi Funahashi

Nuclear Nation II follows a new group of people exiled from Futaba, the region occupied by the crippled Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant. Since the 1960s, Futaba had been promised prosperity with tax breaks and major subsidies to make up for the presence of the plant... until the townspeople lost their homeland on March 11, 2011.

The film portrays their lives as refugees in an abandoned high school, and in temporary housing. The political fallout from the nuclear disaster results in conflict between residents, and the mayor is forced to resign. Many decide to move back to Fukushima prefecture, just outside the evacuation zone. The town finds itself divided by the arbitrariness of evacuation, radiation levels, and compensation guidelines from the plant's operator. And then, the Japanese government announces a plan to turn Futaba into an official, literal wasteland.

Is it possible to truly compensate the townspeople for what they have lost? Through their agonies and frustrations, the film questions the real cost of nuclear energy and unbridled capitalism. But perhaps more important, this film gives a fully textured, all-access account of governmental bureaucracy's attempt and ultimate incapacity to adequately deal with displaced peoples. This is a problem we continue to face: Hurricane Katrina uprooted over a million people in the Gulf Coast region, more than a million migrants and refugees entered Europe in 2015, and over 11 million unauthorized immigrants seek home in the United States. There are over 60 million refugees worldwide.

Teachers and students looking to understand the depth of challenges facing the fair and efficient administration of human rights in times of crisis will be pleased to find Nuclear Nation II.

OKINAWA: THE AFTERBURN

Director: John Junkerman

Okinawa: The Afterburn is the first documentary to provide a comprehensive look at the battle and the ensuing 70-year occupation of Okinawa by the United States military.

On April 1, 1945, American troops landed on Okinawa, beginning a battle that lasted 12 weeks and claimed the lives of some 240,000 people. The film depicts the Battle through the eyes of Japanese and American soldiers who fought each other on the same battlefields, along with Okinawa civilians who were swept up in the fighting, with carefully selected footage from the U.S. National Archives.

The film also conveys the complex postwar fate of Okinawa, an island that has had to live side-by-side with an extensive array of US bases, and the related crimes, accidents, and pollution they have caused, while coexisting, on a personal level, with the occupying soldiers.

In Okinawa, the legacy of the war translates into a deeply rooted aversion to military force. This has been expressed in recent years by the island-wide rejection of the plan to build a new US base at Henoko, a source of controversy to this day. Okinawa: The Afterburn explores the roots of this resistance and Okinawa's vision for the future.

THE FILM IS DIVIDED INTO FOUR PARTS:

PART 1: The Battle of Okinawa depicts the ferocious battle through the testimony of Japanese and American soldiers who faced off in the conflict.

PART 2: Occupation reveals how military occupation policies were implemented.

PART 3: The Afterburn confronts the history of sexual violence that has accompanied the American military presence on Okinawa.

PART 4: To the Future explores the Japanese government's decision to build a new base in Henoko.

OUR MOCKINGBIRD

Directed by Sandy Jaffe

Harper Lee's novel, and the story of a remarkable high school production of the adapted play, are used as a lens to examine race, class, gender, and justice - then and now.

OUR MOCKINGBIRD is a documentary that uses Harper Lee's 1960 novel To Kill a Mockingbird as a lens to view race, class, gender and justice, then and now. Woven through the film is the story of two extraordinarily different high schools in Birmingham, Alabama - one black, one white - who collaborate on a remarkable production of the adapted play, To Kill a Mockingbird.

In addition to this unique collaboration, we hear the voices of political leaders (Congressman John Lewis, former Attorney General Eric Holder), journalists (Katie Couric, Rick Bragg), actors (Mary Badham "Scout", Phillip Alford "Jem" in the 1962 movie), writers (Diane McWhorter, Rick Bragg), scholars (Charles Ogletree, Wayne Flynt, Cynthia E. Jones, Marshall Ganz), lawyers (Doug Jones, Reginald Lindsay, Richard Jaffe) and activists (Bryan Stephenson, Rev. Joseph Lowery, Morris Dees) mingle with those of students and teachers. Together these diverse voices reveal that as a country we have made progress but are still struggling with the issues of race, class and justice addressed in the novel.

RETURN, THE

Directed by Kelly Duane de la Vega, Katie Galloway

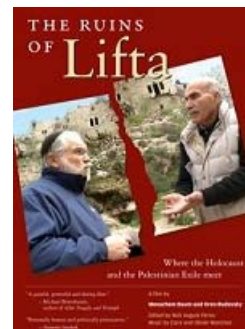

After California's "Three Strikes" law was amended, thousands of lifers were suddenly freed, but re-entry presented problems for the lifers, their families and their communities.

In 2012, California amended its "Three Strikes" law--one of the harshest criminal sentencing policies in the country. The passage of Prop. 36 marked the first time in U.S. history that citizens voted to shorten sentences of those currently incarcerated. Within days the reintegration of thousands of "lifers" was underway.

THE RETURN examines this unprecedented reform through the eyes of those on the front lines--prisoners suddenly freed, families turned upside down, reentry providers helping navigate complex transitions, and attorneys and judges wrestling with an untested law. At a moment of reckoning on mass incarceration, what can California's experiment teach the nation?

RUINS OF LIFTA, THE

Directors: Menachem Daum and Oren Rudavsky

Lifta is the only Arab village abandoned in the 1948 Arab-Israeli war that has not been completely destroyed or repopulated by Jews. Its ruins are now threatened by an Israeli development plan that would convert it into an upscale Jewish neighborhood. Discovering that his parents' Holocaust experiences may have distorted his views of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, Menachem - the filmmaker and an Orthodox Jew from Brooklyn - sets out to establish a personal relationship with a Palestinian. He meets Yacoub, who was expelled from Lifta and now leads the struggle to save the haunting ruins of his village from Israeli plans to build luxury villas on the site. Learning that Lifta was once a place where Jews and Arabs got along, Menachem joins Yacoub's campaign in the hopes that Lifta can serve as a place of reflection and reconciliation. This sets up a climactic encounter between a Holocaust survivor and a Nakba refugee amidst the ruins of Lifta.

SECRET LIFE OF YOUR CLOTHES, THE

Directed by Andy Wells

The revealing story of what happens to the mountain of clothes--castoffs in today's world of fast fashion--that are donated to charity. Few make it to your local charity thrift store.

Each year, we give thousands of tons of our unwanted clothes to charity. But where do they actually go? It turns out most are exported to Africa. And even though we have given them away for free, our castoffs have created a multimillion-dollar industry and some of the world's poorest people pay good money to buy them.

In this revealing film, charismatic paralympian Ade Adepitan tells the fascinating story of the afterlife of our clothes. He follows the trail to Ghana, the biggest importer of our castoffs where thousands of tons of our old clothes arrive every week. Ade meets the people who make a living from our old clothes, from wholesalers and markets traders to the importers raking in more than the average yearly wage in a single day!

But not everyone is profiting. With cheaply made western clothes flooding the market, the local textile industry has been decimated. And the deluge of our clothes isn't just destroying jobs; it has an effect on Ghanaian culture. Western outfits are fast replacing traditional garb. Prepare to open your eyes...to the secret life of your clothes.

STRAY DOG

Directed by Debra Granik

Oscar-nominated filmmaker Debra Granik ("Winter's Bone") returns to SW Missouri for her first documentary, looking at the life of Vietnam vet, Ron "Stray Dog" Hall, and shattering some stereotypes.

Ron "Stray Dog" Hall lives in Southern Missouri where he owns and operates the At Ease RV Park. After years of living alone with his dogs, he is adjusting to life with his wife, Alicia, who is newly arrived from Mexico. Anchored by his small dogs and big bikes, Stray Dog seeks to strike a balance between his commitment to his family, neighbors, biker brotherhood, and fellow veterans. As part of the legacy of fighting in the Vietnam War, he wrestles with the everlasting puzzle of conscience, remorse, and forgiveness.

With Stray Dog as our guide, we experience the restlessness of ex-warriors as he tries to make peace with what he can't change and weathers the incomprehension of those who have never been to war. Stray Dog navigates the pressures of everyday life including the economic survival of his grandchildren and the increasing poverty of his community. The arrival of Alicia's twin sons from Mexico throws into harsh relief the current state of opportunity that newcomers seek and that America can or cannot offer.

Stray Dog continues to tally the cost of war, bearing witness to the soldiers coming home from Iraq and Afghanistan: both the dead and the living. The questions of contemporary American life loom larger and thornier, leaving us to wonder what is next for Stray Dog and his blended, multi-ethnic family.

UNLOCKING THE CAGE

Director: Chris Hegedus and DA Pennebaker

Unlocking the Cage follows animal rights lawyer Steven Wise in his unprecedented challenge to break down the legal wall that separates animals from humans. Arguing that cognitively complex animals such as chimpanzees, whales, dolphins and elephants have the capacity for limited personhood rights, Steve and his legal team are making history by filing the first lawsuits that seek to transform a chimpanzee from a "thing" with no rights to a "person" with legal protections. Unlocking the Cage captures a monumental shift in our culture, as the public and judicial system show increasing receptiveness to Steve's impassioned arguments. It is an intimate look at a lawsuit that could forever transform our legal system, and one man's lifelong quest to protect "nonhuman" animals.

WHEN TWO WORLDS COLLIDE

Directors: Heidi Brandenburg & Mathew Orzel

In this tense and immersive Sundance award-winner, audiences are taken directly into the line of fire between powerful, opposing Peruvian leaders who will stop at nothing to keep their respective goals intact. On the one side is President Alan Garcia, who, eager to enter the world stage, begins aggressively extracting oil, minerals, and gas from untouched indigenous Amazonian land. He is quickly met with fierce opposition from indigenous leader Alberto Pizango, whose impassioned speeches against Garcia's destructive actions prove a powerful rallying cry to throngs of his supporters. When Garcia continues to ignore their pleas, a tense war of words erupts into deadly violence.

POWER OF CHOICE, THE: VOLUME 10 - DEPRESSION AND SUICIDE

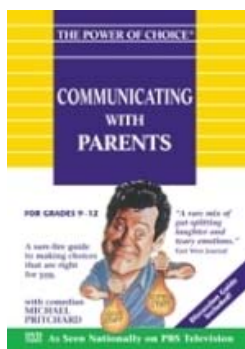

Featuring Michael Pritchard

This program, which was videotaped in two high schools still reverberating from recent suicides, presents a clear minded look at what to do if you or someone you care about is at risk. Host Michael Pritchard and teens in Phoenix and South Bend, Indiana identify the signs frequently exhibited by people who are at risk for suicide and discuss the recommended procedures for intervening. In addition, they examine ways of coping with the depression and stress that often leads to suicide, and encourage people to ask for help when they feel themselves at risk. As one student emphatically puts it, "Suicide is a permanent solution to a temporary problem."

Objectives: To sensitize young people to some of the warning signs of suicide. To provide some guidelines for how to respond to a potential suicide victim. To suggest ways of getting help when they, or someone they care about, is at risk.

POWER OF CHOICE, THE: VOLUME 12 - RAISING YOUR PARENTS

Featuring Michael Pritchard

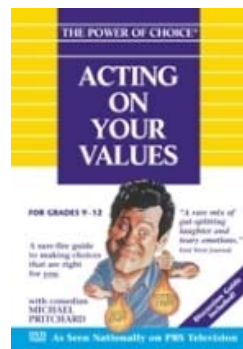

In this program, host Michael Pritchard and high school students in Washington, D.C.; San Rafael, CA; Columbia, S.C.; Boston, and Atlanta take on the age old question of how to make their relationship with their parents work better. By defining what they want in their relationship with their parents, and examining how their own actions affect that relationship, these teenagers uncover some of the keys to getting what they want in the teen/parent alliance.

Objectives: To stimulate teenagers to think critically about their relationships with their parents. To help them see that they have the power to improve their relationships by making the right choices. To encourage them to take the initiative in improving their relationships with their parents by looking at what they can do differently to cause the change.

POWER OF CHOICE, THE: VOLUME 3 - SELF-ESTEEM

Featuring Michael Pritchard

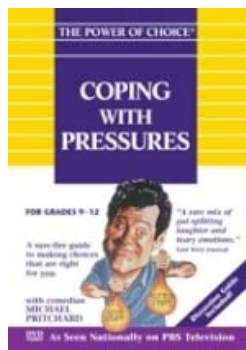

In this program, host Michael Pritchard and high school students from Albuquerque, Detroit, Dallas, Wichita, and Columbia, S.C., discuss self-esteem: what is it, what it does for us, how we can enhance it, how we can undermine it, and how we affect the self-esteem of those around us. The underlying message of this show is that good self-esteem leads to good choices, and good choices lead to higher self-esteem. As one boy in Detroit said, "Really, the only thing that you can really count on in your life is that you know yourself. I have my self-esteem. I know what I can do. You have to take it from there."

Objectives: To stimulate young people to think about their level of self-esteem. To make them aware of the relationship between their self-esteem and the quality of the choices they make. To uncover some of the factors that can enhance or diminish their self-esteem. To sensitize them to the affect their own actions have on the self-esteem of others.

POWER OF CHOICE, THE: VOLUME 5 - DRUGS AND ALCOHOL - PART 1

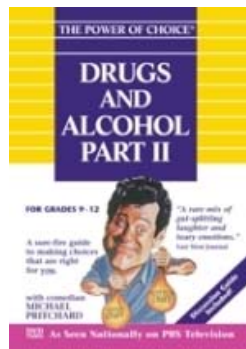

Featuring Michael Pritchard

In this program, host Michael Pritchard encourages teenagers to come to grips with the question of what to do when "just say no" and "just say yes" just won't do. Students from high schools in Atlanta and Albuquerque talk openly and honestly about the choices (good and bad) they have made with alcohol and drug use. As one teenager relates, "I look back, it felt good then. Now I could cry. Once it wore off, I had to face myself again."

Objectives: To stimulate teens to think critically about their choices involving drugs and alcohol. To help them see that they have the power to make those choices for themselves, regardless of social pressures. To make them aware of how drugs and alcohol can take over their power of choice and reduce the amount of control they have over their own lives.

POWER OF CHOICE, THE: VOLUME 6 - DRUGS AND ALCOHOL - PART 2

Featuring Michael Pritchard

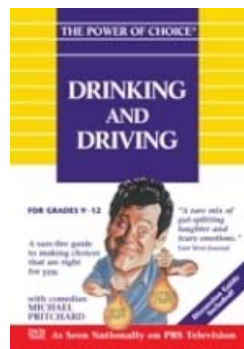

In this program, Pritchard and high school students in Albuquerque; Atlanta; Cleveland; Madison, Wisconsin; and Fremont, California, examine how chemical abuse damages relationships, what you can and cannot do about it, and how to respond when a chemically dependent person asks you for help. It is a useful and enlightening look at what to do when someone you care about is hooked.

Objectives: To show how drug and alcohol abuse affects friends and family members of the user. To reveal some ways of responding or intervening that often do work. To clarify what power friends and family members do and do not have in the situation. To show them they can make a difference and inform them about where they can go for help.

POWER OF CHOICE, THE: VOLUME 7 - DRINKING AND DRIVING

Featuring Michael Pritchard

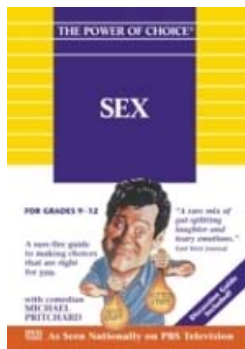

In this program, comedian/teen counselor Michael Pritchard visits with teenagers in Los Angeles; Nashville; and Madison, Wisconsin, to talk about how to stay out of (or get out of) drinking/driving predicaments and still be cool. As one boy so honestly put it, "It's hard for guys like me who aren't very popular. Friendships I have with guys who brag about dope, drinking, and wild parties are important. A lot of times you just go along with it and tell yourself next time you won't do it. But then you go along with them anyway."

Objectives: Build young people's awareness of the issue of drunk driving. Show them that driving drunk, or going along with others who do, is always a matter of choice. Encourage them to anticipate when a drinking/driving situation may arise and plan alternatives. Help them to see themselves as having the power to prevent drunk driving.

POWER OF CHOICE, THE: VOLUME 9 - FRIENDSHIP AND DATING

Featuring Michael Pritchard

In this program, host Michael Pritchard and high school students in Detroit, Wichita, Brooklyn, and Gainesville, Florida take a heartwarming look at how to create and maintain quality relationships. They identify the ingredients of good friendships, consider how their own actions affect those friendships, examine the dynamics and expectations of romantic and dating relationships, and discuss how these relationships change as we grow up. As one boy in Brooklyn said, "When I started dating, my Mom told me to treat girls the way I'd want boys to treat my sister." Pritchard's response: "You have a great mother."

Objectives: To stimulate young people to look critically at the nature of their relationships with others, and to choose for themselves what they want in a relationship. To empower them take the initiative in shaping their relationships the way they want.

SAFE WORKPLACE FOR ALL, A

A comprehensive overview of making Australian workplaces safe.

1- A Safe Workplace for All.

In Brian's first day at work, an accident happens- and he is seriously injured. An accident affects the victim and family both physically and emotionally. Further, there is a financial cost to them, the organisation, and the entire nation. Accident statistics and costs, both direct and indirect, are explored. A case study follows of how one organisation, though an innovative safety program has saved over $1.25 million annually. Explaining Duty of Care is just part of a wider program towards an improved safety culture. Also suitable for accident investigation exercises.

2- A Safe Workplace for All - Managers and Supervisors

Explores risk management programs, newer regulations with increased penalties, the wider responsibilities including the concept of health and well being, the managerial, physical and behavioural OH&S systems. This video also covers the statistics of the costs of accidents and examines the case study where Workers Compensation costs fell over three years by more than $1.25 million. The ingredients of a positive safety culture and how it can be achieved are outlined.

WORKSITE COMMUNICATION SKILLS

This program comprises basic communication skills as they are applied within industrial or commercial trade settings such as construction sites, engineering or fabrication workshops and manufacturing enterprises. We explore why clear communication is critical in ensuring that the working environment poses minimal or no risk to workers, and work tasks are completed correctly and quality is maintained. Workers can come from a wide range of cultural and linguistic backgrounds. It is vital that communication in all its forms is appropriate and inclusive for all. Communication with CALD workers is examined as well as using the phone and face-to-face verbal communication.

Units Of Competency:
BSBCMM101A - Apply basic communication skills
CPCPCM2039A - Carry out interactive workplace communication.
