CONGO: THE DOCTOR WHO SAVES WOMEN

By Angele Diabang

Dr. Denis Mukwege is a gynecologist and the founder of Panzi, a hospital whose primary mission is treating women who have been raped - casualties in the Democratic Republic of Congo's decades-long war. At the hospital, in the Kivu district of the country, Mukwege and his mostly female team provide reconstructive surgery and psychological counseling, as well as literacy and other programs designed to help patients reintegrate into a society that has a history of shaming and ostracizing rape survivors.

From Senegalese filmmaker Angele Diabang, CONGO: THE DOCTOR WHO SAVES WOMEN offers the intimate testimonies of women who have been treated at Panzi, along with the perspectives of psychologists and doctors who work there.

Huddled on a bench in a corridor, facing the wall, Annie-Francoise recounts how her family rejected her after she was raped by a militiaman; she is pregnant and hopes to go back to school after having her baby. Regina stares straight ahead and describes how her husband threw her out after she was raped by several soldiers. They are among the thousands of women treated at Panzi, where the model of care is female-centered. In addition to formal therapy, women participate in communal activities. By cooking, singing, and washing together, these shared daily tasks become therapeutic.

Mukwege and others call the rape epidemic in the DRC a crime of war. The widespread sexual assaults create a climate of terror that rival groups use to their advantage - with the ultimate goal of laying their hands on valuable resources.

Through the work of Dr Mukwege, the film highlights the atrocities perpetrated on Congolese women, but also offers vivid accounts of their resilience and determination to not be defined by the crimes committed against them.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION & ECONOMICS

PLANT THIS MOVIE

By Karney Hatch
Narrated by Darryl Hannah

Plant This Movie presents a comprehensive look at the evolution and growing impact of the international urban agriculture movement -- from cities across the United States to diverse countries around the world.

Featuring leading urban farming advocates, the film explores the inspiring success story of Cuba, and travels globally to communities of urban farmers in Shanghai, Calcutta, Addis Ababa, London, and Lima.

In the US, the film visits innovative projects in New York, New Orleans, Los Angeles, Berkeley, Philadelphia and Portland -- including the largest rooftop garden in the world, blighted areas transformed into urban farms, student-run gardens and CSA, and other projects that show the explosion of creative local efforts.

The film begins by tracing the evolution of the household yard in America from a necessary source for food to the ubiquitous lawn, now the # 1 irrigated urban crop. After the highly productive Victory Gardens of WWII, the country moved rapidly to a more centralized food system, and people became divorced from the source of their food.

As Plant This Movie vividly illustrates, the ingredients for scaling up urban farming and reconnecting people to the food we eat are now all around us. The movement provides hope that people across the nation and the world will once again have access to healthier, locally grown food, using the land near where they live as a primary source.

Review

- "Weaves the web of connections between many of the social and environmental problems we face today, and shows that their solution lies in the empowering creative joy of growing our own food." - Chris Summerville, Lecturer, Sustainability & Literature, Kwansei Gakuin University, Japan.

AMERICAN STUDIES

AUTUMN'S WORK

By Anna Grimshaw

This beautifully shot and edited film follows Bill Coperthwaite as he prepares for winter in the woods.

Wrestling with a large felled tree amidst its vast tangle of branches, Bill slowly and methodically breaks it down into expertly sorted piles of wood. He spends his days alone, tackling the great trunk with a cross-cut saw that once belonged to Scott Nearing. He works and rests, the gentle shifts of breeze and light hinting at the passage of time and the changing of seasons.

In an unexpected moment, Bill reflects on the age of the tree and his own age. It serves as a poignant reminder of the span of life and the inseparability of man and nature.

SPRING IN DICKINSON'S REACH

By Anna Grimshaw

This film establishes, literally and metaphorically, the scope of Bill Coperthwaite's world as it explores the unique environment that he has crafted in the Maine forest.

Beginning in early spring, the film follows Coperthwaite through his daily tasks as he tends to his surroundings while one season gives way to another. He pulls weeds, sharpens knives, whittles away at spoons, clears downed trees - an intensely private man whose solitude is occasionally interrupted by the arrival of visitors, young men eager to learn and to share their passion for tools and for making things.

Through its intimate camerawork and careful attention to detail, the film draws the viewer into a remarkable world - one that is painstakingly built and maintained by Coperthwaite. In this world's simplicity and integrity, the film reveals a rare beauty. It stretches from the magnificent wooden yurt, to the workshop, boathouse, forest paths, dense canopy of trees and waters of Mill Pond.

SUMMER TASK, A

By Anna Grimshaw

This tightly-focused film examines the rhythm and tempo of work in the forest. It follows Bill Coperthwaite and his cousin, Steve, as they fell and haul trees to build a bridge and begin charting a new trail through the woods.

The film situates the viewer in the heart of the forest. Through the crafting of distinctive moments of rest and activity, of skill and improvisation, the film explores a complex, collaborative process as it unfolds in time. No longer the energetic men of their youth, Bill and Steve struggle against age and natural obstacles with a wry humor and stubborn determination. Through its focus on a single task, the film deftly opens up questions about time, work, aging, and the ongoing process of life.

WINTER DAYS

By Anna Grimshaw

This evocative film reveals the stillness and quietness of the forest in winter.

Life is lived close to the stove. It's a time for small tasks and chores - making a wedge, sewing a pocket, darning a pair of socks. But the film also offers glimpses of a world beyond. The arrival of a family, animated by the energy and curiosity of children, provokes the viewer to reflect on what it means to live a "handmade life" and raises profound questions about aging and mortality, generations, solitude, and community.

ANTHROPOLOGY

LET'S GET THE RHYTHM: THE LIFE OF MISS MARY MACK

By Irene Chagall

LET'S GET THE RHYTHM invites the viewer to explore the history of hand-clapping games around the world. Through wars and migrations, across language barriers and oceans, young girls connect with each other through thousands of variants—ancient as they are global—the film chronicles these rhythmic and recreational practices. Guided by three eight-year-olds from diverse cultural backgrounds on inner-city playgrounds in New York City, the film is a charming and beautiful survey with universal insight into the budding social mind and of the empowering impact of the practice on the lives of women. The charm of their personal insight is complemented by archival footage collected by Alan Lomax and observations by folklorists, academics, musicians, ethnomusicologists and cognitive neuroscientists. LET'S GET THE RHYTHM is a delightful homage to the beauty of the beat and to storytelling among young girls and is a necessary film for Anthropology and Sociology courses.

ART

BELTRACCHI: THE ART OF FORGERY

By Anne Birkenstock

For nearly 40 years, Wolfgang Beltracchi fooled the international art world and was responsible for the biggest art forgery scandal of the postwar era. An expert in art history, theory and painting techniques, he tracked down the gaps in the oeuvres of great artists - Max Ernst, Fernand Leger, Heinrich Campendonk, Andre Derain and Max Pechstein, above all - and filled them with his own works. He and his wife Helene would then introduce them to the art world as originals. What makes these forgeries truly one-of-a-kind is that they are never mere copies of once-existing paintings, but products of Beltracchi's imagination, works "in the style of" famous early 20th-century artists. With his forgeries, he fooled renowned experts, curators and art dealers. The auctioneers Sotheby's and Christie's were hoodwinked, just like Hollywood star Steve Martin and other collectors throughout the world.

In BELTRACCHI: THE ART OF FORGERY, Wolfgang and his wife Helene Beltracchi chat openly - and with great wit and charm - about their quixotic adventures in an overheated art world ruled by blind greed, and in which apparently no one has an answer to the question as to what is an original, and what is a forgery... Beltracchi is an engaging rogue, a warm-hearted husband and father, and an impossibly self-confident artist. Full of witty dialogues, the film shows Beltracchi's incredible talent as a painter and reveals his expertise in forging paintings from the early 20th century, which were so masterfully done that art experts, museums and auction houses around the world were duped and exposed.

Reviews

- "Without any doubt he is the biggest forger of our times." - Vanity Fair
- "Beltracchi's work on a piece in the style of Max Ernst; this Ernst-Beltracchi" could easily pass for one of the Surrealist's better 'forest' paintings." - The Hollywood Reporter
- "There's something thrillingly Robin Hoodish about an art forger like Wolfgang Beltracchi." - Grolschfilmworks.com

MADAME PHUNG'S LAST JOURNEY

By Tham Nguyen Thi

A former monk who left monastic life because "I saw beautiful fags praying, and felt like running away," Phung is a canny businesswoman who got her start as a singer, and saved her money in the form of gold bars she would bury in the ground. Now she is something of a den mother to her largely transgender troupe - berating them when they drink or fight too much, warning them to stay out of trouble, and dealing with local police and occasionally hostile locals when necessary.

It's the classic canny existence: long hours; setting up and tearing down the stage; exhorting the crowd to buy raffle tickets and play games; putting on a show. But the people we meet in MADAME PHUNG'S LAST JOURNEY are not your ordinary fairground workers.

This verite documentary takes us on a year-long ride with an itinerant troupe of cross-dressing performers led by Bich Phung, as they travel the remote southern regions and central highlands of Vietnam.

MADAME PHUNG'S LAST JOURNEY also captures Phung at a critical moment in her life. Now 40, she is haunted by fears of ageing, concerned with fixing bad karma, and worried about what might happen to her troupe after she is gone.

From change rooms, to on-stage performances, to time spent in tour buses, filmmaker Tham Nguyen Thi develops a remarkable rapport with the performers. They share their fears, expose their vulnerabilities, and talk about the challenges of being gay in Vietnam: including employment discrimination and dealing with audiences who might just as easily throw rocks at the performers as try to hit on them during the show.

ASTRONOMY & SPACE

SHOW ME SCIENCE ADVANCED - ASTRONOMY & SPACE: ASTRONOMY - THE VERY LARGE ARRAY TELESCOPE

The Very Large Array, or VLA, telescope was built by the National Radio Astronomy Observatory to investigate radio waves from a variety of astronomical objects. This enormous array includes 27 antennas that look into deep space to see quasars, pulsars, remnants of supernova, gamma ray bursts, radio-emitting stars, the sun and planets, black holes, and the hydrogen gas that constitutes a large portion of the Milky Way galaxy. This program takes a look at how the telescope works and some of the magnificent images it produces.

BASIC CLINICAL SKILLS

FLUIDS AND ELECTROLYTES BALANCE: FLUID VOLUME IMBALANCES

Fluid volume balance is a crucial measure of the state of a patient's health. The body is constantly losing water through the skin, kidneys, lungs and GI tract. As fluid enters and exits, the simple amount of fluids in the body must remain in balance. This program will introduce various forms of fluid volume imbalances, the conditions that cause them and nursing interventions to correct them.

This program describes:

- The basics of dehydration
- Hypovolemia
- Hyperolemia
- Water intoxication
- General causes of volume imbalances
- Interventions
- Total parenteral nutrition (TPN)
- Blood product infusions

FLUIDS AND ELECTROLYTES: BASICS

Fluids are the basis of life. Water makes up about 60% of the average human body by weight. The body maintains a delicate balance between fluid being drained out of the body and fluid constantly being replenished in the body. Disturbances in this balance can both indicate and be caused by a variety of pathologies. Therefore, understanding and monitoring a patient's fluid balance, electrolyte balance and acid-base balance is critical to providing care.

This program, the first of a three part series, provides nursing students, new nurses, and others with the basics of fluid balance, electrolyte balance, the main electrolytes in the body, and maintaining the acid-base balance in the human body.

After completing this course, you should be able to describe:

- Basics of fluid balance
- Basics of electrolyte balance
- Main electrolytes in the body
- Acid-base balance in the human body

FLUIDS AND ELECTROLYTES: ELECTROLYTE IMBALANCES

Body fluids are filled with dissolved salts and minerals called electrolytes that are ionized with an electrical charge. The electrolyte balance in the body's fluids is absolutely crucial to many body processes, and imbalances can cause pathological conditions and even be life threatening. This program will discuss imbalances in some of the main electrolytes in the body.

After completing this course, you should be able to:

- Sodium, hyponatremia, hypernatremia
- Potassium, hypokalemia, hyperkalemia
- Magnesium, hypomagnesemia, hypermagnesemia
- Calcium, hypocalcemia, hypercalcemia
- Phosphorous, hypophosphatemia, hyperphosphatemia
- Chloride, hypochloremia, hyperchloremia

FAMOUS AUTHORS: CONFUCIUS

Confucius 551 -479bc

Confucius was not exactly an author in the way that other writers in the series are. His ideas however, expressed in his Analects (reported sayings), have been the backbone of the Chinese psyche ever since he uttered them. He was very concerned that people should read history and poetry, with the result that the Chinese for most of their existence have been the most literate society on earth. The well-read man has always been considered at the pinnacle of society. This DVD tells what is known of his life and gives an introduction to his ideas and his importance in Chinese life. It is followed by an overview with leads to books he had a hand in, or that will help to understand him.

INSIDE HER SEX

By Sheona McDonald

While we live in a highly sexualized society, the messaging around female sexuality is distorted and rife with shame. What women should look like, who women should want, what women should desire...in fact, who women should be, is dictated to us from screens and pages and people. INSIDE HER SEX is a thought-provoking, feature-length documentary that explores female sexuality and shame through the eyes and experiences of three women from different walks of life, each brave enough to chart her own course of sexual discovery: Elle Chase, a popular sex blogger, Candida Royalle, the creator of Femme Productions Inc., a feminist, adult film company designed to speak with a woman's voice and Samantha Allen, the ex-devout Mormon and current gender, sex, and tech writer for The Daily Beast. Through varied, candid and intensely personal interviews, INSIDE HER SEX will delve to the core of these three women and their sexuality, beginning a much needed conversation around female sexuality and shame. Essential viewing for Gender and Sexuality Studies.

CARDIOLOGY

EKG INTERPRETATION AND RESPONSE: ANATOMY OF THE HEART, READING AN EKG

This course provides a brief summary and overview of the heart's components and functional properties as background for a discussion about electrocardiogram (EKG) interpretation. It also provides guidance on calculating heart rate on the EKG, autonomic nervous system effects, and how to assess sinus rhythm.

After completing this course, you should be able to:

- Define the heart's electrophysiologic properties, electrical conduction and mechanical response systems
- Interpret normal EKG waveforms
- Calculate heart rate on the EKG
- Assess the effects of the autonomic nervous system
- Assess normal sinus rhythm

EKG INTERPRETATION AND RESPONSE: ATRIAL DYSRHYTHMIAS, JUNCTIONAL DYSRHYTHMIAS, HEART BLOCK

The purpose of this course is to provide nurses with information that is key to understanding the characteristics and interventional protocols for treating atrial dysrhythmias, junctional dysrhythmias and the various types of heart block. This information is extremely valuable to the nurse's ability to identify and analyze these conditions when they occur in patients.

After completing this course, you should be able to:

- Define and assess the characteristics of premature atrial contractions
- Define and assess the characteristics of paroxysmal atrial tachycardia
- Define and assess the characteristics of atrial fibrillation
- Define and assess the characteristics of atrial flutter
- Define and assess the characteristics of a junctional rhythm
- Define and assess the characteristics of a junctional tachycardia
- Define and assess the characteristics of the different types of heart block, including Mobitz type I and Mobitz type II

EKG INTERPRETATION AND RESPONSE: SINUS DYSRHYTHMIAS

The purpose of this course is to provide nurses with an explanation of terms that are key to understanding dysrhythmias, as well as important information about each type of dysrhythmia. This information is extremely valuable to the nurse's ability to identify and analyze sinus dysrhythmias when they occur in patients.

After completing this course, you should be able to:

- Explain the 7-Step Method to analyzing dysrhythmias
- Define and assess the characteristics of sinus dysrhythmias
- Define and assess the characteristics of sinus arrhythmia
- Define and assess the characteristics of sinus bradycardia
- Define and assess the characteristics of sinus tachycardia
- Define and assess the characteristics of sinus pause, sinus arrest and sinus block

EKG INTERPRETATION AND RESPONSE: VENTRICULAR DYSRHYTHMIAS AND PATIENT CARE

The purpose of this course is to provide nurses with information that is key to understanding the characteristics and general treatment protocols for different types of ventricular dysrhythmias. It also covers the general responsibilities that nurses have in caring for patients with dysrhythmias. This information is extremely valuable to the nurse's role in identifying and managing these conditions when they occur.

After completing this course, you should be able to:

- Define and assess the characteristics of premature ventricular contractions
- Define and assess the characteristics of ventricular tachycardia
- Define and assess the characteristics of ventricular fibrillation
- Define and assess the characteristics of ventricular asystole
- Define and assess the characteristics of pulseless electrical activity
- Explain and execute the responsibilities involved in caring for patients with various types of dysrhythmias

IRON MINISTRY, THE

By J.P. Sniadecki

Filmed over three years on China's railways, THE IRON MINISTRY traces the vast interiors of a country on the move: flesh and metal, clangs and squeals, light and dark, language and gesture. Scores of rail journeys come together into one, capturing the thrills and anxieties of social and technological transformation. THE IRON MINISTRY immerses audiences in fleeting relationships and uneasy encounters between humans and machines on what will soon be the world's largest railway network.

- "The train has always been a major metaphor for change, but here there is an especially interesting sense of ambiguity...The danger of hurtling to modernity is always present, rattling along the ever-lengthening tracks." - Daniel Walber, NONFICS
- "The real focus of THE IRON MINISTRY isn't the train but the world zipping past it." - Eric Kohn, Indiewire

- "Shot over three years of riding the rails throughout all parts of China, but edited to seem like it's one fluid trip, J.P. Sniadecki's THE IRON MINISTRY starts off as a collection of these interior impressions, establishing atmosphere, sound, image, and also the smells - of garbage, meat, sweat, and ever-present cigarettes." - Mark Peranson, Festival del Film Locarno

CLASSIC DRAMA

GHOSTS

By Henrik Ibsen

In this production of Ibsen's ghosts you will not see 'a new version specially prepared for modern audiences.' Ibsen is either digestible as he stands or he is not. It is fairly unlikely that he would enjoy his work being modified or tampered with by opinionated directors. Modern audiences are just as intelligent and probably better informed than audiences of Ibsen's day. There is nothing to equal a live performance, however not many people are able to see Ibsen's plays well acted in a theatre, because theatres are few and far between. We certainly hope that in giving a complete performance of this play Ghosts we are enabling a lot more people to see Ibsen's work more or less as he intended.

COGNITIVE-BEHA VIORAL THERAPY

SPECIFIC TREATMENTS FOR SPECIFIC POPULATIONS: COGNITIVE BEHAVIORAL THERAPY FOR OBSESSIVE-COMPULSIVE DISORDER

With Eric A. Storch, PhD

Obsessive-compulsive disorder (OCD) is characterized by unwanted, distressing and repeated thoughts and images that lead to compulsive actions. In the past, OCD was considered a complex disorder that was challenging to diagnose and effectively treat. More recently, there has been substantial progress in terms of both treating and assessing this once illusive disorder.

Cognitive behavioral therapy (CBT) with exposure and response prevention is an evidence-based approach to treating OCD that encourages the client to be gradually and systematically exposed to the distress provoking trigger without engaging in rituals. This video features a discussion and demonstration of this proven CBT technique that involves first exposing the client to fear-producing stimuli and then encouraging the client to refrain from engaging in compulsive behaviors.

In this video, Dr. Eric Storch takes an active role in encouraging and directing a female client to help prevent habitual obsessive-compulsive responses to her fear of contamination.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE

LIFE AFTER MANSON

By Olivia Klaus

Life After Manson is an intimate portrait of one of the world's most infamous crimes and notorious killers. At 21 years old, Patricia Krenwinkel callously murdered three people at the command of Charles Manson. Now 66 years old, she continues to be demonized by the public and haunted by the suffering she caused over four decades ago. Through an exclusive interview with and never before seen footage of Krenwinkel, filmmaker Olivia Klaus (SIN BY SILENCE), frames a historically irreconcilable story through a complex emotional lens, offering insight into what led a suburban girl to commit crimes the world will never forget. A provocative and powerful character study, LIFE AFTER MANSON reveals a broken woman struggling with her past, her arduous effort to evaluate the cost of her choices, and the possibility of self-forgiveness.

DENTISTRY

CELL-TO-CELL COMMUNICATION: PERIODONTAL REGENERATION

Edited by: Bernd Stadlinger, Henfrik Terheyden

Unlike bone, which undergoes remodeling by resorption followed by bone apposition, teeth are not subject to physiological remodeling. They are remarkably resistant to physiological remodeling processes. The reason for this is found in the periodontium and cementum. The mechanisms that take effect in this area and the effectiveness of the periodontal system - consisting of gingiva, alveolar bone, periodontium and cementum - after injuries will be visualized in the new scientific 3D film, "Periodontal Regeneration". The visualization of these complex processes is of great interest for academic teaching as well as for the clinician and general practitioner as the cellular interactions are presented in the context of four phases. For the first time scanning electron microscopic images of real cells will be visualized allowing the comparison of their characteristics with computer animated simulations.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AND SEXUAL ASSAULT

INDIA'S DAUGHTER

By Leslee Udwin

INDIA'S DAUGHTER is the powerful story of the 2012, brutal gang rape on a Delhi bus of a 23 year old medical student, who later died from her injuries. In 2012, it made international headlines and ignited protests by women in India and around the world. This month India's government banned the film while the BBC moved their planned broadcast up by days and ignited a new controversy. BAFTA winning filmmaker Leslee Udwin, herself a victim of rape, went to India inspired by the protests against sexual assault. With an all Indian crew, Udwin got exclusive, first time on camera interviews with the rapists and defense attorney, none of whom express remorse. The defense attorney goes even further, stating that "immodest" women deserve what happens to them. An impassioned plea for change, INDIA'S DAUGHTER pays tribute to a remarkable and inspiring young woman and explores the compelling human stories behind the incident and the political ramifications throughout India. But beyond India, the film lays bare the way in which societies and their patriarchal values have spawned such acts of violence globally.

Reviews

- "This film does what the politicians should be doing... this documentary's determination to shed light on the country's rape crisis should inspire change." - The Guardian
- "India's Daughter is a necessary watch – not just for women of India but for women across the world." - The Independent
- "Ms. Udwin's film has increased worldwide awareness of attitudes that beget sexual violence against women." - The New York Times

SCIENCE: PROPERTIES OF WATER

Over seventy percent of the Earth is covered with water around 326 million trillion gallons! Water is essential for life it gives plants ability to create sugar for food and it helps humans regulate temperatures and nourishes and protects the brain, spinal cord and other tissues. Water is equally important to the environment due to the intricate balance of the water cycle. This program takes an in-depth look at the chemistry of water and its different states and how each of them affects the world around us.

ECOLOGY

BANKING NATURE

By Denis Delestrac & Sandrine Feydel

"Buying landscapes, protecting landscapes, accumulating new landscapes - it's a phenomenal opportunity." -- Steve Morgan, CEO, Wildlands Inc.

After years of working to undermine environmental regulations, governments and corporations are starting to think about the value of nature - and how they can profit from it.

BANKING NATURE is a provocative documentary that looks at the growing movement to value the natural world - and to turn endangered species and threatened areas into instruments of profit. It's a worldview that sees capital and markets not as a threat to the planet, but as its salvation - turning nature into "natural capital" and fundamental processes such as pollination and oxygen generation into "ecosystem services."

In the film we meet economist and former banker Pavan Sukhdev is perhaps the world's leading authority on the valuation of nature (one square kilometre of Hawaiian coral reef: $600,000). In his view, the best way to protect endangered species and ecosystems is to assign them a value - because if we can't measure the services nature provides, we can't recognize them within our current models.

In Uganda, we meet men who measure trees to determine how much carbon they store - and a banker from the German firm that sells the resulting carbon credits. Meanwhile in Brazil, steel giant Vale destroys rainforest, replaces it with tree plantations, and reaps the benefits of environmental credits.

Once we start measuring the value of nature, we can start turning it into securitized financial products. BANKING NATURE asks, can we trust the very same people whose management of the mortgage market nearly led to a global economic collapse to safeguard nature by turning it into financial instruments for speculators?

ENDANGERED SPECIES / SPECIES DECLINE

FROM BILLIONS TO NONE: THE PASSENGER PIGEON'S FLIGHT TO EXTINCTION

By David Mrazek and Joel Greenberg

From Billions to None tells the compelling, little-known story of the rapid extinction of the once abundant passenger pigeon, and explores its lessons for today with the alarming decline of many species worldwide.

These sleek and beautiful birds darkened entire skies, like nothing in existence today. Yet in a matter of decades human activity drove the species from billions to extinction.

For millennia, the passenger pigeon was the most abundant bird in North America, and likely the world. Then as its forest habitats were cut down for lumber, it was hunted to extinction both as a cheap source of protein and as targets for sport shooting. By 1912, after a nationwide search, not a single bird could be found living in the wild. The last pigeon in captivity died in the Cincinnati Zoo in 1914.

Naturalist and author Joel Greenberg is the film's guide, explaining the biology of the passenger pigeon and taking us through the birds' tragic history. In one scene, Greenberg visits a nature preserve in Wisconsin that was once the largest ever passenger pigeon nesting site, where an estimated 136 million birds nested in an area equal in size to 37 Manhattan Islands.

Through computer animation, the film recreates the breathtaking natural phenomenon of massive flocks of passenger pigeons. One animated sequence recreates a passenger pigeon flock estimated by John James Audubon to be at least one billion birds. In 1813, while in Kentucky, Audubon wrote, "The light of the noonday was obscured as by an eclipse. The pigeons passed in undiminished number, and continued to do so for three days."

The film briefly explores the De-Extinction movement, a controversial attempt to bring back extinct species, and features an interview with the young scientist who has been tasked to bring back the lost bird.

The film also highlights scientists like Dr. Boris Worm at Dalhousie University in Nova Scotia, whose research is raising alarm about other species, including sharks. According to the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN), one quarter of the world's sharks and rays are currently threatened with extinction due to overfishing.

"We're doing the same thing to our children and our grandchildren that our ancestors did to us," concludes David Blockstein, Senior Scientist at the National Council for Science and the Environment, "But we don't have the same excuse of ignorance."

Reviews

- "Compelling and cautionary...Powerfully makes its point. Chilling history...filled with information and passion and does a remarkably good job of using computer-generated animation to show us what it must have been like to see a passenger pigeon flock." - Chicago Tribune
- "Recommended. This heartfelt program works as an informative retrospective on passenger pigeons and a cautionary account of extinction....Teens will be touched by the story of the demise of a species." - Booklist

ENDODONTICS

FRACTURED INSTRUMENT REMOVAL: A SYSTEMATIC APPROACH

Edited by: Michael Arnold

Instrument breakage is a possible complication of mechanical preparation and widening of complex root canal systems. The more difficult the endodontic treatment, the greater the risk of instrument fracture. Recent studies show that more than 90% of all broken endodontic instruments can be successfully removed without surgical intervention. However, before undertaking a removal attempt, clinicians must know how to determine when a broken instrument should be removed and when it should be left in place; the appropriate methods for broken instrument removal; and which instruments should be used for each level of difficulty. This DVD provides a simple, step-by-step strategy to instrument removal that is illustrated by numerous images and clinical case demonstrations. This systematic approach can help significantly improve the odds of successfully removing broken endodontic instruments from the root canal. The accompanying booklet includes insightful articles on minimally invasive fragment removal using CBCT as well as a systematic approach to orthograde removal of fractured instruments.

After years of working to undermine environmental regulations, governments and corporations are starting to think about the value of nature - and how they can profit from it.

BANKING NATURE is a provocative documentary that looks at the growing movement to value the natural world - and to turn endangered species and threatened areas into instruments of profit. It's a worldview that sees capital and markets not as a threat to the planet, but as its salvation - turning nature into "natural capital" and fundamental processes such as pollination and oxygen generation into "ecosystem services."

In the film we meet economist and former banker Pavan Sukhdev is perhaps the world's leading authority on the valuation of nature (one square kilometre of Hawaiian coral reef: $600,000). In his view, the best way to protect endangered species and ecosystems is to assign them a value - because if we can't measure the services nature provides, we can't recognize them within our current models.

In Uganda, we meet men who measure trees to determine how much carbon they store - and a banker from the German firm that sells the resulting carbon credits. Meanwhile in Brazil, steel giant Vale destroys rainforest, replaces it with tree plantations, and reaps the benefits of environmental credits.

Once we start measuring the value of nature, we can start turning it into securitized financial products. BANKING NATURE asks, can we trust the very same people whose management of the mortgage market nearly led to a global economic collapse to safeguard nature by turning it into financial instruments for speculators?

ENVIRONMENTAL DESIGN

JENS JENSEN THE LIVING GREEN

By Carey Lundin and Mark Frazee

Jens Jensen The Living Green profiles the unsung pioneer landscape architect who became one of the nation's most influential urban designers and early conservationists, shaping the Midwest's physical and cultural landscape in an enduring way.

Danish born Jensen rose from immigrant street sweeper in the 1880's to "dean of American landscape architects", as the New York Times called him upon his death in 1951.

When Jensen arrived in Chicago in 1885, it was one of the fastest growing cities in human history, and one of the least livable, especially for the working poor. Inspired by the Midwest prairie and plains, Jensen believed that urban dwellers needed the beauty of nature in their lives and "green space to survive", and he found creative ways to bring it to them.

Jensen revered the region's indigenous scenery and native plants, creating the "Prairie style" of landscape architecture, and leading a movement to conserve threatened natural areas. He created Columbus Park on the western edge of Chicago, now a national historic landmark, as well as over 600 parks and gardens throughout the Midwest and other regions.

As a devout conservationist, Jensen led opposition to Andrew Carnegie and JP Morgan's industrialization of the Indiana shoreline, which later became Indiana Dunes National Park.

Jens Jensen The Living Green is illustrated with archival footage, photos and interviews, including with Jensen himself, that trace his remarkable rise, career, and lasting influence as a man ahead of his time.

Half a century after his death, Jensen is now hailed as a pioneer of sustainable design, an early champion of native species, and an unsung American hero.

Narrated by Jens Jensen's Great Granddaughter, Jensen Wheeler Wolfe

ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE

FROM BILLIONS TO NONE: THE PASSENGER PIGEON'S FLIGHT TO EXTINCTION

By David Mrazek and Joel Greenberg

From Billions to None tells the compelling, little-known story of the rapid extinction of the once abundant passenger pigeon, and explores its lessons for today with the alarming decline of many species worldwide.

These sleek and beautiful birds darkened entire skies, like nothing in existence today. Yet in a matter of decades human activity drove the species from billions to extinction.

For millennia, the passenger pigeon was the most abundant bird in North America, and likely the world. Then as its forest habitats were cut down for lumber, it was hunted to extinction both as a cheap source of protein and as targets for sport shooting. By 1912, after a nationwide search, not a single bird could be found living in the wild. The last pigeon in captivity died in the Cincinnati Zoo in 1914.

Naturalist and author Joel Greenberg is the film's guide, explaining the biology of the passenger pigeon and taking us through the birds' tragic history. In one scene, Greenberg visits a nature preserve in Wisconsin that was once the largest ever passenger pigeon nesting site, where an estimated 136 million birds nested in an area equal in size to 37 Manhattan Islands.

Through computer animation, the film recreates the breathtaking natural phenomenon of massive flocks of passenger pigeons. One animated sequence recreates a passenger pigeon flock estimated by John James Audubon to be at least one billion birds. In 1813, while in Kentucky, Audubon wrote, "The light of the noonday was obscured as by an eclipse. The pigeons passed in undiminished number, and continued to do so for three days."

The film briefly explores the De-Extinction movement, a controversial attempt to bring back extinct species, and features an interview with the young scientist who has been tasked to bring back the lost bird.

The film also highlights scientists like Dr. Boris Worm at Dalhousie University in Nova Scotia, whose research is raising alarm about other species, including sharks. According to the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN), one quarter of the world's sharks and rays are currently threatened with extinction due to overfishing.

"We're doing the same thing to our children and our grandchildren that our ancestors did to us," concludes David Blockstein, Senior Scientist at the National Council for Science and the Environment, "But we don't have the same excuse of ignorance."

Reviews

- "Compelling and cautionary...Powerfully makes its point. Chilling history...filled with information and passion and does a remarkably good job of using computer-generated animation to show us what it must have been like to see a passenger pigeon flock." - Chicago Tribune
- "Recommended. This heartfelt program works as an informative retrospective on passenger pigeons and a cautionary account of extinction....Teens will be touched by the story of the demise of a species." - Booklist

ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCES AND PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY

SHOW ME SCIENCE: ASTRONOMY & SPACE - ASTRONOMY: DISCOVER THE ALMA TELESCOPE

The ALMA or Atacama Large Millimeter/Sub-millimeter Array is a powerful radio telescope observatory. The large array probes the first stars and galaxies and directly images the formation of planets. The ALMA is composed of 66 high precision antennas and has a much higher sensitivity and resolution than other telescopes. It has unprecedented sensitivity and resolution, giving astronomers incredibly detailed views of distant objects in space. Based in Chile, South America, The ALMA is an international astronomy facility operated by countries from Europe, North America and East Asia in cooperation with the Republic of Chile. The location was chosen as the home of the ALMA Telescope because a high and dry site is required for millimeter wavelength operations. The Array was constructed on the Chajnantor plateau at an altitude of 5,000 meters. It explores the physics of the cold universe and probes the first stars and galaxies.

FOOD / NUTRITION

PLANT THIS MOVIE

By Karney Hatch
Narrated by Darryl Hannah

Plant This Movie presents a comprehensive look at the evolution and growing impact of the international urban agriculture movement -- from cities across the United States to diverse countries around the world.

Featuring leading urban farming advocates, the film explores the inspiring success story of Cuba, and travels globally to communities of urban farmers in Shanghai, Calcutta, Addis Ababa, London, and Lima.

In the US, the film visits innovative projects in New York, New Orleans, Los Angeles, Berkeley, Philadelphia and

Portland -- including the largest rooftop garden in the world, blighted areas transformed into urban farms, student-run gardens and CSA, and other projects that show the explosion of creative local efforts.

The film begins by tracing the evolution of the household yard in America from a necessary source for food to the ubiquitous lawn, now the # 1 irrigated urban crop. After the highly productive Victory Gardens of WWII, the country moved rapidly to a more centralized food system, and people became divorced from the source of their food.

As Plant This Movie vividly illustrates, the ingredients for scaling up urban farming and reconnecting people to the food we eat are now all around us. The movement provides hope that people across the nation and the world will once again have access to healthier, locally grown food, using the land near where they live as a primary source.

Review

- "Weaves the web of connections between many of the social and environmental problems we face today, and shows that their solution lies in the empowering creative joy of growing our own food." - Chris Summerville, Lecturer, Sustainability & Literature, Kwansei Gakuin University, Japan.

GENDER

WINNING GIRL

By Kimberlee Bassford

From award-winning Hawaiian filmmaker Kimberlee Bassford (PATSY MINK: AHEAD OF THE MAJORITY) comes WINNING GIRL, an inspirational film that follows the four-year journey of Teshya Alo, a part-Polynesian, teenage judo and wrestling phenomenon from Hawai'i. Teshya is only 16 years old and 125 pounds, but on the judo and wrestling mats, she dominates women twice her age and pounds heavier! Now Alo has her sights set on taking the Olympic gold at both the judo and wrestling world championships - and in doing so would be the first to accomplish that feat. WINNING GIRL tells the dynamic story of an elite athlete on her ascent, a girl facing the challenges of puberty and growing up with an entire family dedicated to a single dream. A great companion piece to any discussion on Title IX and gender.

GENDER STUDIES

MADAME PHUNG'S LAST JOURNEY

By Tham Nguyen Thi

A former monk who left monastic life because "I saw beautiful fags praying, and felt like running away," Phung is a canny businesswoman who got her start as a singer, and saved her money in the form of gold bars she would bury in the ground. Now she is something of a den mother to her largely transgender troupe - berating them when they drink or fight too much, warning them to stay out of trouble, and dealing with local police and occasionally hostile locals when necessary.

It's the classic canny existence: long hours; setting up and tearing down the stage; exhorting the crowd to buy raffle tickets and play games; putting on a show. But the people we meet in MADAME PHUNG'S LAST JOURNEY are not your ordinary fairground workers.

This verite documentary takes us on a year-long ride with an itinerant troupe of cross-dressing performers led by Bich Phung, as they travel the remote southern regions and central highlands of Vietnam.

MADAME PHUNG'S LAST JOURNEY also captures Phung at a critical moment in her life. Now 40, she is haunted by fears of ageing, concerned with fixing bad karma, and worried about what might happen to her troupe after she is gone.

From change rooms, to on-stage performances, to time spent in tour buses, filmmaker Tham Nguyen Thi develops a remarkable rapport with the performers. They share their fears, expose their vulnerabilities, and talk about the challenges of being gay in Vietnam: including employment discrimination and dealing with audiences who might just as easily throw rocks at the performers as try to hit on them during the show.

GREECE

PARTHENON, THE

Have you seen the Parthenon?

The film explores the development of democracy in ancient Greece using the remains of the great city of Athens and the vases and decorative arts which can still be seen today. The film was shot in 1974 when modern Greece was stumbling into the vibrant democracy it now is; so to some extent it is a part of history itself. Democracy is of course about people and ideals so the struggles of the societies of today are part of the ongoing course which stretches back to the Athens of the fourth century bc. Democracy emphasises that every individual in a society is as important as the next one and this is the theme of the film. The ancient Greeks are so much with us today in their art and literature as well as their political ideals just because their society began to give the individuals there a say in government and the possibility of individual expression.

MENTAL HEALTH IN HOSPITALS AND

TREATMENT CENTERS: CONDUCTING A MENTAL STATUS EXAMINATION

By Brad Hagen

How do you get the essential mental status information you need from patients who mistrust your intentions? Featuring two contrasting scenarios, this video offers practical and relational tools you can use to assess patients who are difficult to engage.

As video host Brad Hagen notes, most mental health practitioners at some point will need to conduct a mental status examination. Moreover, this may need to happen not just once, but continually, to monitor a patient's ongoing mood, thought patterns, speech, communication, degree of suicidal ideation, and potential for violence, among other important factors. Thus it's imperative for clinicians to stay focused while engaging patients as effectively as possible.

This video presents two contrasting vignettes in which a novice and an experienced nurse conduct respective mental status interviews with a suicidal hospital patient. In both cases, the patient exhibits borderline dynamics and a potentially aggressive affect, and you'll see how the confidence, directiveness, and empathy that comes with proficiency leads to greater compliance and a sense of safety.

Although these videos are designed for mental health and psychiatric nurses, the skills demonstrated apply for any mental health care worker dealing with patients with these psychiatric conditions. If you're a therapist, counselor, psychiatric nurse, or other helping professional conducting intakes or mental status exams, this video will give you valuable takeaways you can start using today.

By watching this video, you will:

- Learn about the challenges of conducting thorough mental status examinations.
- Understand how novice interventions can disrupt treatment goals and exacerbate patient distress.
- Identify effective skills and interventions that build patient rapport and increase the likelihood of compliance.

MENTAL HEALTH IN HOSPITALS AND TREATMENT CENTERS: MANAGING AGGRESSION AND DELUSIONS

By Brad Hagen

When patients threaten to become verbally or physically aggressive, it takes a special set of skills to work safely and effectively. In this video, watch two health care providers demonstrate how these skills—or the lack thereof—impact their work.

Whether a patient is suffering from the delusions of a thought disorder or spiraling into verbally or physically aggressive behavior, clinicians must employ effective techniques to reduce their distress, redirect their focus, and gain their trust—all while maintaining the patient's (and their own) sense of dignity. These aren't easy tasks, which this video affirms while presenting contrasting vignettes that demonstrate what can happen when these essential duties are performed well—and not so well.

Although these videos are designed for mental health and psychiatric nurses, the skills demonstrated apply for any mental health care worker dealing with patients with these psychiatric conditions. If you're a therapist, counselor, psychiatric nurse, or other helping professional working with aggressive and/or delusional patients, you'll find valuable takeaways to enhance your skill set. Be sure to add this important video to your library today.

By watching this video, you will:

- Learn about the challenges of working with delusions and verbal or physical aggression.
- Understand how novice interventions can inadvertently exacerbate aggressive or delusional inclinations.
- Identify proficient skills and interventions that diffuse potential danger and preserve a patient's dignity.

MENTAL HEALTH IN HOSPITALS AND TREATMENT CENTERS: MANAGING DEMENTIA AND ANXIETY

By Brad Hagen

In this video, learn to work calmly and efficiently with patients experiencing the severe agitation of dementia or anxiety. Here, two vignettes contrast the differences between inexperienced and experienced providers, including a counterintuitive method for soothing dementia patients.

Without proper training or experience, novice mental health practitioners risk alienating, or worse, traumatizing patients especially prone to agitation. This two-part video examines the subtle yet profound differences between inexperienced and proficient treatment for anxiety and dementia, two conditions characterized by impaired judgment and potentially high distress.

Underscoring the clinical challenges of working with patients with either condition, we are presented with two separate vignettes that feature a nurse working with an elderly Alzheimer's patient and an anxious female patient, respectively. In the former case, an inexperienced nurse attempts to console and reassure the Alzheimer's patient, but only serves to further disorient him by insisting upon the delusional nature of his narrative. The proficient nurse corrects this by joining with his storyline—a counterintuitive intervention that disarms and relieves the patient.

In the anxiety scenario, the novice nurse conveys disinterest in his patient by immersing himself in his paperwork, avoiding eye contact, and making only cursory mentions of relaxation exercises while trying to send her back to her room. In contrast, the proficient nurse fully acknowledges her presence and teams with her to deepen rapport and support her inner resourcing.

Although these videos are designed for mental health and psychiatric nurses, the skills demonstrated apply for any mental health care worker dealing with patients with these psychiatric conditions. If you're a therapist, counselor, psychiatric nurse, or other helping professional working with anxiety disorders or people experiencing dementia, you'll find a number of valuable lessons here, as well as cautionary tales to consider.

By watching this video, you will:

- Learn about the challenges of treating anxious or demented patients.
- Understand how novice interventions can disrupt treatment goals and exacerbate patient distress.
- Identify proficient skills and interventions that build patient rapport and increase the likelihood of compliance.

MENTAL HEALTH IN HOSPITALS AND TREATMENT CENTERS: MANAGING DEPRESSION

By Brad Hagen

What are the most essential skills and techniques for working with severely depressed patients? Find out what to do—and what not to do—in this two-part demonstration of a mental health practitioner interviewing a suicidally depressed hospital patient.

The skills it takes to support depressed patients, particularly suicidal ones, don't always come easily to us, even those of us called to the helping professions. This informative video helps demystify the techniques— as well as the attitude—necessary to bring about positive outcomes. In two consecutive, contrasting scenarios with the same patient/nurse combination, you'll see how differences in rapport, tone of voice, empathy level, eye contact, and psychoeducational style can lead to marked differences in the therapeutic relationship and in clinical results.

Although these videos are designed for mental health and psychiatric nurses, the skills demonstrated apply for any mental health care worker dealing with patients with these psychiatric conditions. If you're a therapist, counselor, psychiatric nurse, or other helping professional working with depressed or suicidal patients, you'll find valuable takeaways to enhance your skills. HUMAN RIGHTS

By Angele Diabang

Dr. Denis Mukwege is a gynecologist and the founder of Panzi, a hospital whose primary mission is treating women who have been raped - casualties in the Democratic Republic of Congo's decades-long war. At the hospital, in the Kivu district of the country, Mukwege and his mostly female team provide reconstructive surgery and psychological counseling, as well as literacy and other programs designed to help patients reintegrate into a society that has a history of shaming and ostracizing rape survivors.

From Senegalese filmmaker Angele Diabang, CONGO: THE DOCTOR WHO SAVES WOMEN offers the intimate testimonies of women who have been treated at Panzi, along with the perspectives of psychologists and doctors who work there.

Huddled on a bench in a corridor, facing the wall, Annie-Francoise recounts how her family rejected her after she was raped by a militiaman; she is pregnant and hopes to go back to school after having her baby. Regina stares straight ahead and describes how her husband threw her out after she was raped by several soldiers. They are among the thousands of women treated at Panzi, where the model of care is female-centered. In addition to formal therapy, women participate in communal activities. By cooking, singing, and washing together, these shared daily tasks become therapeutic.

Mukwege and others call the rape epidemic in the DRC a crime of war. The widespread sexual assaults create a climate of terror that rival groups use to their advantage - with the ultimate goal of laying their hands on valuable resources.

Through the work of Dr Mukwege, the film highlights the atrocities perpetrated on Congolese women, but also offers vivid accounts of their resilience and determination to not be defined by the crimes committed against them.

INDIA'S DAUGHTER

By Leslee Udwin

INDIA'S DAUGHTER is the powerful story of the 2012, brutal gang rape on a Delhi bus of a 23 year old medical student, who later died from her injuries. In 2012, it made international headlines and ignited protests by women in India and around the world. This month India's government banned the film while the BBC moved their planned broadcast up by days and ignited a new controversy. BAFTA winning filmmaker Leslee Udwin, herself a victim of rape, went to India inspired by the protests against sexual assault. With an all Indian crew, Udwin got exclusive, first time on camera interviews with the rapists and defense attorney, none of whom express remorse. The defense attorney goes even further, stating that "immodest" women deserve what happens to them. An impassioned plea for change, INDIA'S DAUGHTER pays tribute to a remarkable and inspiring young woman and explores the compelling human stories behind the incident and the political ramifications throughout India. But beyond India, the film lays bare the way in which societies and their patriarchal values have spawned such acts of violence globally.

Reviews

- "This film does what the politicians should be doing... this documentary's determination to shed light on the country's rape crisis should inspire change." - The Guardian
- "India's Daughter is a necessary watch - not just for women of India but for women across the world." - The Independent

- "Ms. Udwin's film has increased worldwide awareness of attitudes that beget sexual violence against women." - The New York Times

IMMUNOLOGY

HUMAN IMMUNE SYSTEM, THE: OVERVIEW OF ANATOMY AND FUNCTION

The human immune system is perhaps the most complicated system in our bodies. It is composed of organs and chemicals that interact with one another to perform the miracle of defending us against pathogenic invaders. This program, the first of three, will explore the components of the immune system and describe how they work together to protect us.

After completing this course, the learner should be able to:

- Discuss the main organs that comprise the human immune system - the thymus, the bone marrow and the cells it produces, the lymph system and the spleen
- Explain the role and importance of leukocytes.
- Identify and discuss the two main functional divisions of the immune system - the innate system and the adaptive system
- Describe the innate immune system and its main sentinels and warriors, including macrophages, neutrophils, NK cells and others
- Describe the purposes and functions of the adaptive immune system

HUMAN IMMUNE SYSTEM, THE: THE IMMUNE RESPONSE

Our bodies are the perfect breeding ground for pathogenic invaders. Some of these microorganisms can make people sick, some critically ill, and some are so virulent they can even kill their host. The human body responds with the organs and specialized cells of the immune system to defend itself and try to return to a state of good health. This second program in the series on the immune system will describe this defense process against the most common pathogens: bacteria and viruses.

- After completing this course, the learner should be able to:
- Discuss the major cells, chemicals

- and proteins that work together to fight off invading bacteria and viruses
- Explain in detail the process of the human body's immune response to bacteria
- Explain in detail the process of the human body's immune response to viruses

HUMAN IMMUNE SYSTEM, THE: THE IMMUNE RESPONSE

Our bodies are the perfect breeding ground for pathogenic invaders. Some of these microorganisms can make people sick, some critically ill, and some are so virulent they can even kill their host. The human body responds with the organs and specialized cells of the immune system to defend itself and try to return to a state of good health. This second program in the series on the immune system will describe this defense process against the most common pathogens: bacteria and viruses.

- After completing this course, the learner should be able to:
- Discuss the major cells, chemicals and proteins that work together to fight off invading bacteria and viruses
- Explain in detail the process of the human body's immune response to bacteria
- Explain in detail the process of the human body's immune response to viruses

LABOR STUDIES

IRON MINISTRY, THE

By J.P. Sniadecki

Filmed over three years on China's railways, THE IRON MINISTRY traces the vast interiors of a country on the move: flesh and metal, clangs and squeals, light and dark, language and gesture. Scores of rail journeys come together into one, capturing the thrills and anxieties of social and technological transformation. THE IRON MINISTRY immerses audiences in fleeting relationships and uneasy encounters between humans and machines on what will soon be the world's largest railway network.

- "The train has always been a major metaphor for change, but here there is an especially interesting sense of ambiguity...The danger of hurtling to modernity is always present, rattling along the ever-lengthening tracks." - Daniel Walber, NONFICS
- "The real focus of THE IRON MINISTRY isn't the train but the world zipping past it." - Eric Kohn, Indiewire
- "Shot over three years of riding the rails throughout all parts of China, but edited to seem like it's one fluid trip, J.P. Sniadecki's THE IRON MINISTRY starts off as a collection of these interior impressions, establishing atmosphere, sound, image, and also the smells – of garbage, meat, sweat, and ever-present cigarettes." - Mark Peranson, Festival del Film Locarno

MEDICAL RESEARCH

SHOW ME SCIENCE: PHYSIOLOGY - THE MEDICAL SERIES: AUDIOLOGY - COCHLEAR IMPLANTS

Approximately 12,000 babies are born annually in the United States with a hearing impairment. With impressive advancements in technology, cochlear implants are giving these children the ability to hear. A cochlear implant is a small, complex electronic device that can provide the sense of hearing to patients who are profoundly deaf or are severely hard of hearing. The cochlear implant helps patients hear by using electrodes that stimulate the remaining auditory nerve fibers in the patient's cochlea. The electrical sound information is sent through the auditory system to the brain for interpretation. In this program, students will learn about the benefits of cochlear implants and how the ear works, as well as the different parts of the inner and outer ear.

MEDICATION ADMINISTRATION

MODERATE OR PROCEDURAL SEDATION: PATIENT ASSESSMENT AND MONITORING

The nurse has an important role in caring for patients who receive moderate, or procedural, sedation before, during, and after diagnostic and therapeutic procedures. This program focuses on intravenous administration of moderate, or procedural sedation as this route shortens recovery times and reduces risk for patients having minor surgery and endoscopic procedures.

After completing this course, the learner should be able to:

- Define the degrees of sedation and anesthesia.
- Describe the nurse's pre-operative responsibilities in moderate sedation.
- Describe the nurse's peri-operative responsibilities in moderate sedation.
- Describe the nurse's post-operative responsibilities in moderate sedation.

MODERATE OR PROCEDURAL SEDATION: PREVENTING AND MANAGING COMPLICATIONS: SEDATION IN CHILDREN

Not all patients are good candidates for moderate, or procedural, sedation. Pregnant women, and patients with kidney, liver, and cardiac disease may be excluded from receiving sedating drugs, as well as those patients with respiratory compromise, acute narrow angle glaucoma, unstable arrhythmias. In addition, young children, infants, neonates must be treated with caution.

The purpose of this program is to provide nurses and others an understanding of monitoring and managing complications of moderate sedation, and the special responsibilities of performing moderate sedation on children.

After completing this course, the learner should be able to:

- Identify complications of moderate sedation.
- Describe the safe use of reversal drugs.
- Define the nurse's responsibilities during moderate sedation of children.
- Describe discharge criteria after moderate sedation of children.

MINDFULNESS

INTEGRATING MINDFULNESS INTO COUNSELING AND PSYCHOTHERAPY

By Ronald D. Siegel

What is "mindfulness" and how can we actually use it with our clients? Understand the principles of mindfulness-oriented psychotherapy and its application for a range of clinical issues in this new video with mindfulness expert Dr. Ronald D. Siegel.

As a mindfulness-oriented clinician, Ronald Siegel encourages us to help clients "befriend" their inner experiences rather than fight them—and even their resistance can be similarly identified and approached with acceptance. Siegel defines mindfulness as "the awareness of one's unfolding moment-to-moment experience with acceptance"; this attitude also characterizes the mindful approach to psychotherapy, which Siegel illustrates repeatedly throughout this informative video.

Over the course of four live demonstrations, post-session debriefs, and plenty of commentary, you'll get a sense of the guiding principles of the approach, including practices you can start using with your clients right away. You'll see how the somatic elements of mindfulness support treatment for issues ranging from anxiety to chronic pain to childhood trauma, and you'll watch Siegel debrief with Victor Yalom after every session.

Addressing the various types of mindfulness practices available and their respective uses, formal meditation vs. mindfulness, and how mindfulness can inform both our personal lives and our relationship to our clients, Siegel offers much to chew on in this definitive video. Be sure to add this one to your library today.

By watching this video, you will:

- Understand what mindfulness is, and how the therapeutic approach differs from formal meditation.
- Discover tools and practices to use with clients exhibiting a range of clinical issues.
- Learn ways to integrate mindfulness into other therapeutic orientations, either with experiential practices or an overarching stance.

MINDFULNESS AND SPIRITUALITY

SPECIFIC TREATMENTS FOR SPECIFIC POPULATIONS: MINDFULNESS FOR WELL-BEING

With Rezvan Ameli, PhD

For most people, even the ordinary demands of life can cause some feelings of unease and stress, and these stressful thoughts and feelings may result in chronic mental and physical fatigue or anxiety.

The seemingly simple act of mindfulness may help reduce the impact of stress, anxiety, depression, and chronic pain. Mindfulness is the act of paying attention to moments of experience with an accepting and friendly attitude so as to observe with all the senses what is happening in each moment. The practice of mindfulness is an effective means of enhancing and maintaining optimal mental health and overall well-being, and can be implemented in every aspect of daily living. Mindfulness has been applied to a variety of mental and physical disorders and has also been useful within educational, military, and corporate settings.

In this video, Dr. Rezvan Ameli demonstrates three mindfulness exercises within a group therapy setting and also discusses the science and practice of mindfulness.

NUCLEAR ENERGY AND NUCLEAR WEAPONS

POLYGON, THE

By Kimberley Hawryluk & Adam Schomer

The Polygon reveals the untold legacy of the Soviet Union's extensive Cold War nuclear testing program at the Semipalatinsk Test Site in Kazakhstan. Over 600 nuclear bombs were detonated at the formerly secret site, known as "The Polygon", from 1949 to 1991, including 116 above ground explosions.

The massive mushroom clouds were witnessed by hundreds of thousands of nearby unprotected Kazakh villagers, unaware that nuclear fallout was raining down on them, their land and water.

More than 18,000 square kilometers remain heavily contaminated. The radiation silently devastated three generations who have suffered serious health problems, including thyroid disease, cancer, birth defects, and more. Life expectancy in the region is seven years less than the national average in Kazakhstan.

The full impact of radiation exposure was hidden by Soviet authorities, and only came to light after the test site was closed in 1991 after major protests.

The tragic story is told in part by the villagers themselves, including Bolat Baltabek, a teacher and town leader, who lost his sister, brother, son, and countless neighbors to radiation-related diseases.

Shot over 3 years, The Polygon revisits the history of these tragic Cold War experiments, and profiles the unfortunate victims that remain today, still suffering with little or no compensation, or global recognition of their plight.

NURSING MANAGEMENT

CONFIDENTIALITY: HIPAA REGULATIONS

Protecting personal health information is not only the law, but also an ethical and moral obligation of all healthcare professionals. This program will concentrate on HIPAA Title II, the Administrative Simplification section of HIPAA. This regulation focuses on two things: the security and privacy of protected health information and the national standards for its transfer.

After completing this course, you should be able to:

- Describe the Administrative Simplification guidelines and codes.
- Define PHI.
- Provide examples of when patient authorization is needed for the release of PHI.
- List exemptions to the Privacy Rule.
- Name and describe the three safeguards of the Security Rule.

CONFIDENTIALITY: HOW TO MAINTAIN PATIENT CONFIDENTIALITY

Confidentiality is the foundation for trust in the patient-caregiver relationship. Efforts to maintain and protect confidential information once focused solely on paper medical records. But as communication technology has made it possible to easily store and transmit enormous amounts of medical information through computerized databases, fax machines, and the internet, there is an increased danger that confidential information may be revealed to inappropriate individuals.

After completing this course, you should be able to:

- Describe various ways to preserve confidentiality in daily practice.
- Identify ways to keep electronically stored information private.
- Follow guidelines for maintaining confidentiality when leaving messages.
- Describe how privacy rules govern conversations with coworkers.

CONFIDENTIALITY: VIGNETTES

Nurses are required to protect the confidentiality of patient healthcare and personal information as part of their professional duties. Not only is this required by federal law, but it is foundational to the trust in a patient-caregiver relationship. However, it is not always easy to know precisely what to do in every situation.

To help learners think through and prepare for these situations, this program presents a number of scenarios, in a variety of nursing situations, and asks the learner to use critical thinking skills to decide if the correct decision about confidentiality is being made in each case.

After completing this course, you should be able to:

- Identify different types of actions and responses that constitute breach of privacy.
- Describe some of the consequences of breach of privacy.
- Identify privacy rules in special settings.
- Describe some exceptions to the privacy laws.

The DVD-Video covers the following topics as E-Learning Lessons presented by the authors Otto Zuhre and Marc Hurler.

Pre-Operative Soft Tissue Management

- Which clinician should consider pre-operative soft tissue improvements?
- Are there different opinions about the functional versus the esthetic sites?
- How can it be achieved clinically?
- What materials could be used?

Peri-Operative Soft Tissue Management

- What is the key for success during peri-operative soft tissue management?
- How can the clinician influence the healing potential?
- What do we need to consider in the functional area and esthetic zone?

Post-Operative Soft Tissue Management

- What are the requirements for a well-functioning peri-implant mucosa?
- How can these requirements be achieved clinically?
- Implant uncoverage in the upper and lower posterior area?
- What are the requirements for the peri-implant mucosa in esthetic areas?
- How can these requirements be achieved clinically?
- What kind of technique can be used in a given clinical situation?

PHYSICAL SCIENCE / PHYSICS

SIMPLE NATURE

By David Anthony Alvarado

In Simple Nature, world famous physicist Dr. Leonard Susskind introduces The Anthropic Principle in an entertaining, accessible and informative way.

Proposed in the 1970's, The Anthropic Principle attempts to explain how the physics of the universe may be perfectly tuned for life to evolve. Any small tweak in gravity or quantum mechanics would make all matter, planets, stars and life-forms impossible, yet it all is in perfect working order. Why?

The Anthropic Principle poses a simple yet plausible explanation, and is at the heart of a growing debate in the world of physics, philosophy and religion. Is it the answer to the "why" of the universe, or does it ignore the traditional methodology of physics and science?

In the age of the Large Hadron Collider and breathtaking scientific exploration of atomic particles, physics may be about to revolutionize our view of humankind's place in the universe.

Shot on 16 MM film, Simple Nature is illustrated with animated graphics, visuals and music.

A good discussion starter to explore the Anthropic Principle in physics, philosophy, religious studies, cosmology and astronomy classes.

PSYCHOLOGY

INSIDE HER SEX

By Sheona McDonald

While we live in a highly sexualized society, the messaging around female sexuality is distorted and rife with shame. What women should look like, who women should want, what women should desire...in fact, who women should be, is dictated to us from screens and pages and people. INSIDE HER SEX is a thought-provoking, feature-length documentary that explores female sexuality and shame through the eyes and experiences of three women from different walks of life, each brave enough to chart her own course of sexual discovery: Elle Chase, a popular sex blogger, Candida Royalle, the creator of Femme Productions Inc., a feminist, adult film company designed to speak with a woman's voice and Samantha Allen, the ex-devout Mormon and current gender, sex, and tech writer for The Daily Beast. Through varied, candid and intensely personal interviews, INSIDE HER SEX will delve to the core of these three women and their sexuality, beginning a much needed conversation around female sexuality and shame. Essential viewing for Gender and Sexuality Studies.

LIFE AFTER MANSON

By Olivia Klaus

Life After Manson is an intimate portrait of one of the world's most infamous crimes and notorious killers. At 21 years old,

32

Patricia Krenwinkel callously murdered three people at the command of Charles Manson. Now 66 years old, she continues to be demonized by the public and haunted by the suffering she caused over four decades ago. Through an exclusive interview with and never before seen footage of Krenwinkel, filmmaker Olivia Klaus (SIN BY SILENCE), frames a historically irreconcilable story through a complex emotional lens, offering insight into what led a suburban girl to commit crimes the world will never forget. A provocative and powerful character study, LIFE AFTER MANSON reveals a broken woman struggling with her past, her arduous effort to evaluate the cost of her choices, and the possibility of self-forgiveness.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

IRON MINISTRY, THE

By J.P. Sniadecki

Filmed over three years on China's railways, THE IRON MINISTRY traces the vast interiors of a country on the move: flesh and metal, clangs and squeals, light and dark, language and gesture. Scores of rail journeys come together into one, capturing the thrills and anxieties of social and technological transformation. THE IRON MINISTRY immerses audiences in fleeting relationships and uneasy encounters between humans and machines on what will soon be the world's largest railway network.

- "The train has always been a major metaphor for change, but here there is an especially interesting sense of ambiguity...The danger of hurtling to modernity is always present, rattling along the ever-lengthening tracks." - Daniel Walber, NONFICS
- "The real focus of THE IRON MINISTRY isn't the train but the world zipping past it." - Eric Kohn, Indiewire
- "Shot over three years of riding the rails throughout all parts of China, but edited to seem like it's one fluid trip, J.P. Sniadecki's THE IRON MINISTRY starts off as a collection of these interior impressions, establishing atmosphere, sound, image, and also the smells - of garbage, meat, sweat, and ever-present cigarettes." - Mark Peranson, Festival del Film Locarno

LET'S GET THE RHYTHM: THE LIFE OF MISS MARY MACK

By Irene Chagall

LET'S GET THE RHYTHM invites the viewer to explore the history of hand-clapping games around the world. Through wars and migrations, across language barriers and oceans, young girls connect with each other through thousands of variants—ancient as they are global—the film chronicles these rhythmic and recreational practices. Guided by three eight-year-olds from diverse cultural backgrounds on inner-city playgrounds in New York City, the film is a charming and beautiful survey with universal insight into the budding social mind and of the empowering impact of the practice on the lives of women. The charm of their personal insight is complemented by archival footage collected by Alan Lomax and observations by folklorists, academics, musicians, ethnomusicologists and cognitive neuroscientists. LET'S GET THE RHYTHM is a delightful homage to the beauty of the beat and to storytelling among young girls and is a necessary film for Anthropology and Sociology courses.

MADAME PHUNG'S LAST JOURNEY

By Tham Nguyen Thi

A former monk who left monastic life because "I saw beautiful fags praying, and felt like running away," Phung is a canny businesswoman who got her start as a singer, and saved her money in the form of gold bars she would bury in the ground. Now she is something of a den mother to her largely transgender troupe - berating them when they drink or fight too much, warning them to stay out of trouble, and dealing with local police and occasionally hostile locals when necessary.

It's the classic canny existence: long hours; setting up and tearing down the stage; exhorting the crowd to buy raffle tickets and play games; putting on a show. But the people we meet in MADAME PHUNG'S LAST JOURNEY are not your ordinary fairground workers.

This verite documentary takes us on a year-long ride with an itinerant troupe of cross-dressing performers led by Bich Phung, as they travel the remote southern regions and central highlands of Vietnam.

MADAME PHUNG'S LAST JOURNEY also captures Phung at a critical moment in her life. Now 40, she is haunted by fears of ageing, concerned with fixing bad karma, and worried about what might happen to her troupe after she is gone.

From change rooms, to on-stage performances, to time spent in tour buses, filmmaker Tham Nguyen Thi develops a remarkable rapport with the performers. They share their fears, expose their vulnerabilities, and talk about the challenges of being gay in Vietnam: including employment discrimination and dealing with audiences who might just as easily throw rocks at the performers as try to hit on them during the show.

SOUTH ASIA/INDIA

INDIA'S DAUGHTER

By Leslee Udwin

INDIA'S DAUGHTER is the powerful story of the 2012, brutal gang rape on a Delhi bus of a 23 year old medical student, who later died from her injuries. In 2012, it made international headlines and ignited protests by women in India and around the world. This month India's government banned the film while the BBC moved their planned broadcast up by days and ignited a new controversy. BAFTA winning filmmaker Leslee Udwin, herself a victim of rape, went to India inspired by the protests against sexual assault. With an all Indian crew, Udwin got exclusive, first time on camera interviews with the rapists and defense attorney, none of whom express remorse. The defense attorney goes even further, stating that "immodest" women deserve what happens to them. An impassioned plea for change, INDIA'S DAUGHTER pays tribute to a remarkable and inspiring young woman and explores the compelling human stories behind the incident and the political ramifications throughout India. But beyond India, the film lays bare the way in which societies and their patriarchal values have spawned such acts of violence globally.

Reviews

- "This film does what the politicians should be doing... this documentary's determination to shed light on the country's rape crisis should inspire change." - The Guardian
- "India's Daughter is a necessary watch – not just for women of India but for women across the world." - The Independent
- "Ms. Udwin's film has increased worldwide awareness of attitudes that beget sexual violence against women." - The New York Times

WINNING GIRL

By Kimberlee Bassford

From award-winning Hawaiian filmmaker Kimberlee Bassford (PATSY MINK: AHEAD OF THE MAJORITY) comes WINNING GIRL, an inspirational film that follows the four-year journey of Teshya Alo, a part-Polynesian, teenage judo and wrestling phenomenon from Hawai'i. Teshya is only 16 years old and 125 pounds, but on the judo and wrestling mats, she dominates women twice her age and pounds heavier! Now Alo has her sights set on taking the Olympic gold at both the judo and wrestling world championships - and in doing so would be the first to accomplish that feat. WINNING GIRL tells the dynamic story of an elite athlete on her ascent, a girl facing the challenges of puberty and growing up with an entire family dedicated to a single dream. A great companion piece to any discussion on Title IX and gender.

SUSTAINABILITY

BANKING NATURE

By Denis Delestrac & Sandrine Feydel

"Buying landscapes, protecting landscapes, accumulating new landscapes - it's a phenomenal opportunity." -- Steve Morgan, CEO, Wildlands Inc.

After years of working to undermine environmental regulations, governments and corporations are starting to think about the value of nature - and how they can profit from it.

BANKING NATURE is a provocative documentary that looks at the growing movement to value the natural world - and to turn endangered species and threatened areas into instruments of profit. It's a worldview that sees capital and markets not as a threat to the planet, but as its salvation - turning nature into "natural capital" and fundamental processes such as pollination and oxygen generation into "ecosystem services."

In the film we meet economist and former banker Pavan Sukhdev is perhaps the world's leading authority on the valuation of nature (one square kilometre of Hawaiian coral reef: $600,000). In his view, the best way to protect endangered species and ecosystems is to assign them a value - because if we can't measure the services nature provides, we can't recognize them within our current models.

In Uganda, we meet men who measure trees to determine how much carbon they store - and a banker from the German firm that sells the resulting carbon credits. Meanwhile in Brazil, steel giant Vale destroys rainforest, replaces it with tree plantations, and reaps the benefits of environmental credits.

Once we start measuring the value of nature, we can start turning it into securitized financial products. BANKING NATURE asks, can we trust the very same people whose management of the mortgage market nearly led to a global economic collapse to safeguard nature by turning it into financial instruments for speculators?

SYSTEMS OF PSYCHOTHERAPY

SYSTEMS OF PSYCHOTHERAPY: CASE FORMULATION IN PSYCHOTHERAPY

With Tracy D. Eells, PhD

How does a therapist know what to do next during a session? One key method for determining what to do in therapy is case formulation, a systematic process for developing hypotheses about and plans to address the causes and precipitants of a client's presenting problems.

Dr. Tracy Eells presents an evidence-based, integrative method of psychotherapy case formulation that can be adapted to single-theory approaches to therapy, any specific treatment manual, or any component of a theory or manual. This pragmatic case formulation model works for simple and straightforward cases as well as those involving many problems in many spheres of life.

In this video, Dr. Eells explains his case formulation model, works with a client in a therapy demonstration, then uses examples from the demonstration to illustrate how to apply his case formulation model.

THAILAND

BANGKOK, THE DIVINE CITY

A documentary history of the city of Bangkok from its foundation at the end of the 18th century up to the last quarter of the twentieth.

The film was shot in 1973 when Thailand was on the cusp of its astounding development into the vibrant and astonishingly modern city it now is with skyscrapers and expressways on every hand. By showing glimpses of a time long gone the film is itself now a piece of history.

With the founding of Bangkok came the founding of the remarkable Chakri dynasty of absolute kings who have led the country so ably through the complexities of the last two centuries; the film outlines some of their major contributions up to those of the present king. Still today the place of the now constitutional monarchy is kernel as the country struggles to establish its fragile democracy and the film goes some way to explain this. It also brings out the lives of ordinary people and some of the many distinctive elements of the Bangkok world.

KING RAMA 6TH OF THAILAND

RAMA 6th King of Siam

The video follows the life of King Vajiravudh, Rama 6th of the Chakri dynasty of Siam, modern Thailand. Thailand is the only Southeast Asian country never to have been colonised by a western power and King Vajiravudh was the first Thai king to have been educated in the west. In the eyes of the world rather overshadowed by his charismatic father King Chulalongkorn (best known to the world at large as the king in the musical the King and I) King Vajiravudh was an unusually talented and sensitive man who learned a great deal from his life in England and who committed himself to continuing the reform of his country begun by his father. Trying to be a democrat and a monarch with absolute power was a difficult act. He soon began appointing people on merit and not because they were his brothers or cousins. This was not the way to win the support of the ruling clique. However up to his sudden and unexpected death in 1926 he clung tenaciously to his beliefs and worked tirelessly and often very effectively for his country. The programme was made with the support of the Museum to his memory in Bangkok and is dedicated to the remarkable school he founded, Vajiravudh College.

NONDUK'S FINGER & THE ABDUCTION OF SITA

The Khon - Two complete ballets

Complete performances of the ballets Nonduk's Finger and The Abduction of Sita performed by artists and musicians from the College of Music and Dramatic arts in Chiang Mai Thailand, filmed and edited by Malcolm Hossick with subtitles and commentary in English.

Nonduk's Finger (duration: 53') concerns the difficulties of Nonduk, gatekeeper to the great god Shiva, and how the help Shiva gives him turns against him. Revenge and retribution and the vagaries of power are the subject of this charming fantasy.

In The Abduction of Sita (duration: 63') Lust and jealousy almost destroy the wonderful relationship between the noble god Rama and his beautiful wife Sita but with the help of the kindly and wily monkey god Hanuman, all is resolved.

These two ballets display the charm and colour of the Classical Dance of Thailand known as the Khon. Mask, movement, gesture, song and music combine to give a strange but timeless parade of human weakness and virtue which reflect in a remarkable way the struggles of modern Thailand to come to terms with the demands of democracy and the weight of tradition.

RAMA & SITA

The Khon - Documentary on Thai Classical Dance

At the end of the 18th century Thailand was defeated by its arch enemy Burma and the capital Ayudhya destroyed. A new beginning was made further down river at Bangkok. Along with new palaces and temples the kings brought back the old forms of dance which had graced the court of Ayudhya. A Thai version of the Indian epic of the doings of King Rama called in Thailand the Ramakien was produced and through the preservation of the dance and the development of these stories, Thai culture was given a new treasure all its own.

Modern times always view the past differently and the traditional arts in Thailand can be easily swamped and forgotten just as elsewhere in the world. Fortunately there are still talented and devoted dancers and musicians and artists who keep it all alive and in the Academy of Music and Dance which thrives today in Chiang Mai film maker Malcolm Hossick has found a treasure to record for the outside world to see.

This documentary film follows the training and development of young dancers and musicians along with parts of finished performances of two stories from the Ramakien.

TREATMENT PLANNING

MENTAL HEALTH IN HOSPITALS AND TREATMENT CENTERS: CONDUCTING A MENTAL STATUS EXAMINATION

By Brad Hagen

How do you get the essential mental status information you need from patients who mistrust your intentions? Featuring two contrasting scenarios, this video offers practical and relational tools you can use to assess patients who are difficult to engage.

As video host Brad Hagen notes, most mental health practitioners at some point will need to conduct a mental status examination. Moreover, this may need to happen not just once, but continually, to monitor a patient's ongoing mood, thought patterns, speech, communication, degree of suicidal ideation, and potential for violence, among other important factors. Thus it's imperative for clinicians to stay focused while engaging patients as effectively as possible.

This video presents two contrasting vignettes in which a novice and an experienced nurse conduct respective mental status interviews with a suicidal hospital patient. In both cases, the patient exhibits borderline dynamics and a potentially aggressive affect, and you'll see how the confidence, directiveness, and empathy that comes with proficiency leads to greater compliance and a sense of safety.

Although these videos are designed for mental health and psychiatric nurses, the skills demonstrated apply for any mental health care worker dealing with patients with these psychiatric conditions. If you're a therapist, counselor, psychiatric nurse, or other helping professional conducting intakes or mental status exams, this video will give you valuable takeaways you can start using today.

By watching this video, you will:

- Learn about the challenges of conducting thorough mental status examinations.
- Understand how novice interventions can disrupt treatment goals and exacerbate patient distress.
- Identify effective skills and interventions that build patient rapport and increase the likelihood of compliance.

MENTAL HEALTH IN HOSPITALS AND TREATMENT CENTERS: MANAGING AGGRESSION AND DELUSIONS

By Brad Hagen

When patients threaten to become verbally or physically aggressive, it takes a special set of skills to work safely and effectively. In this video, watch two health care providers demonstrate how these skills—or the lack thereof—impact their work.

Whether a patient is suffering from the delusions of a thought disorder or spiraling into verbally or physically aggressive behavior, clinicians must employ effective techniques to reduce their distress, redirect their focus, and gain their trust—all while maintaining the patient's (and their own) sense of dignity. These aren't easy tasks, which this video affirms while presenting contrasting vignettes that demonstrate what can happen when these essential duties are performed well—and not so well.

Although these videos are designed for mental health and psychiatric nurses, the skills demonstrated apply for any mental health care worker dealing with patients with these psychiatric conditions. If you're a therapist, counselor, psychiatric nurse, or other helping professional working with aggressive and/or delusional patients, you'll find valuable takeaways to enhance your skill set. Be sure to add this important video to your library today.

By watching this video, you will:

- Learn about the challenges of working with delusions and verbal or physical aggression.
- Understand how novice interventions can inadvertently exacerbate aggressive or delusional inclinations.
- Identify proficient skills and interventions that diffuse potential danger and preserve a patient's dignity.

MENTAL HEALTH IN HOSPITALS AND TREATMENT CENTERS: MANAGING DEMENTIA AND ANXIETY

By Brad Hagen

In this video, learn to work calmly and efficiently with patients experiencing the severe agitation of dementia or anxiety. Here, two vignettes contrast the differences between inexperienced and experienced providers, including a counterintuitive method for soothing dementia patients.

Without proper training or experience, novice mental health practitioners risk alienating, or worse, traumatizing patients especially prone to agitation. This two-part video examines the subtle yet profound differences between inexperienced and proficient treatment for anxiety and dementia, two conditions characterized by impaired judgment and potentially high distress.

Underscoring the clinical challenges of working with patients with either condition, we are presented with two separate vignettes that feature a nurse working with an elderly Alzheimer's patient and an anxious female patient, respectively. In the former case, an inexperienced nurse attempts to console and reassure the Alzheimer's patient, but only serves to further disorient him by insisting upon the delusional nature of his narrative. The proficient nurse corrects this by joining with his storyline—a counterintuitive intervention that disarms and relieves the patient.

In the anxiety scenario, the novice nurse conveys disinterest in his patient by immersing himself in his paperwork, avoiding eye contact, and making only cursory mentions of relaxation exercises while trying to send her back to her room. In contrast, the proficient nurse fully acknowledges her presence and teams with her to deepen rapport and support her inner resourcing.

Although these videos are designed for mental health and psychiatric nurses, the skills demonstrated apply for any mental health care worker dealing with patients with these psychiatric conditions. If you're a therapist, counselor, psychiatric nurse, or other helping professional working with anxiety disorders or people experiencing dementia, you'll find a number of valuable lessons here, as well as cautionary tales to consider.

By watching this video, you will:

- Learn about the challenges of treating anxious or demented patients.
- Understand how novice interventions can disrupt treatment goals and exacerbate patient distress.
- Identify proficient skills and interventions that build patient rapport and increase the likelihood of compliance.

MENTAL HEALTH IN HOSPITALS AND TREATMENT CENTERS: MANAGING DEPRESSION

By Brad Hagen

What are the most essential skills and techniques for working with severely depressed patients? Find out what to do—and what not to do—in this two-part demonstration of a mental health practitioner interviewing a suicidally depressed hospital patient.

The skills it takes to support depressed patients, particularly suicidal ones, don't always come easily to us, even those of us called to the helping professions. This informative video helps demystify the techniques—as well as the attitude—necessary to bring about positive outcomes. In two consecutive, contrasting scenarios with the same patient/nurse combination, you'll see how differences in rapport, tone of voice, empathy level, eye contact, and psychoeducational style can lead to marked differences in the therapeutic relationship and in clinical results.

Although these videos are designed for mental health and psychiatric nurses, the skills demonstrated apply for any mental health care worker dealing with patients with these psychiatric conditions. If you're a therapist, counselor, psychiatric nurse, or other helping professional working with depressed or suicidal patients, you'll find valuable takeaways to enhance your skills. Be sure to add this compelling video to your library today.

By watching this video, you will:

- Understand the challenges of being with patients suffering from major depression and suicidality.
- Learn how novice interventions can undermine a supportive relationship and clinical outcomes.
- Identify proficient skills and interventions that support clinical needs and a patient's sense of hope.

MENTAL HEALTH IN HOSPITALS AND TREATMENT CENTERS: MANAGING MANIA

By Brad Hagen

When working with patients experiencing mania, clear boundaries and goal-oriented communication can help you maintain control. Learn from a pro—and empathize with a novice—in this two-part video demonstrating successful treatment of manic patients.

Manic episodes are notoriously challenging on many levels, and getting the information you need during the initial assessment can be daunting without the skills to manage the interaction. This informative video helps demystify the techniques and attitudes necessary to bring about positive outcomes. In two consecutive, contrasting scenarios with the same patient/nurse combination, you'll see how differences in confidence level, tone of voice, empathy level, eye contact, and directiveness can lead to marked differences in the overall clinical results.

Although these videos are designed for mental health and psychiatric nurses, the skills demonstrated apply for any mental health care worker dealing with patients with these psychiatric conditions. If you're a therapist, counselor, psychiatric nurse, or other helping professional working with manic patients, you'll find valuable takeaways to enhance your skills. WILDLIFE AND ECOLOGY STUDIES

By David Mrazek and Joel Greenberg

From Billions to None tells the compelling, little-known story of the rapid extinction of the once abundant passenger pigeon, and explores its lessons for today with the alarming decline of many species worldwide.

These sleek and beautiful birds darkened entire skies, like nothing in existence today. Yet in a matter of decades human activity drove the species from billions to extinction.

For millennia, the passenger pigeon was the most abundant bird in North America, and likely the world. Then as its forest habitats were cut down for lumber, it was hunted to extinction both as a cheap source of protein and as targets for sport shooting. By 1912, after a nationwide search, not a single bird could be found living in the wild. The last pigeon in captivity died in the Cincinnati Zoo in 1914.

Naturalist and author Joel Greenberg is the film's guide, explaining the biology of the passenger pigeon and taking us through the birds' tragic history. In one scene, Greenberg visits a nature preserve in Wisconsin that was once the largest ever passenger pigeon nesting site, where an estimated 136 million birds nested in an area equal in size to 37 Manhattan Islands.

Through computer animation, the film recreates the breathtaking natural phenomenon of massive flocks of passenger pigeons. One animated sequence recreates a passenger pigeon flock estimated by John James Audubon to be at least one billion birds. In 1813, while in Kentucky, Audubon wrote, "The light of the noonday was obscured as by an eclipse. The pigeons passed in undiminished number, and continued to do so for three days."

The film briefly explores the De-Extinction movement, a controversial attempt to bring back extinct species, and features an interview with the young scientist who has been tasked to bring back the lost bird.

The film also highlights scientists like Dr. Boris Worm at Dalhousie University in Nova Scotia, whose research is raising alarm about other species, including sharks. According to the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN), one quarter of the world's sharks and rays are currently threatened with extinction due to overfishing.

"We're doing the same thing to our children and our grandchildren that our ancestors did to us," concludes David Blockstein, Senior Scientist at the National Council for Science and the Environment, "But we don't have the same excuse of ignorance."

Reviews

- "Compelling and cautionary...Powerfully makes its point. Chilling history...filled with information and passion and does a remarkably good job of using computer-generated animation to show us what it must have been like to see a passenger pigeon flock." - Chicago Tribune
- "Recommended. This heartfelt program works as an informative retrospective on passenger pigeons and a cautionary account of extinction....Teens will be touched by the story of the demise of a species." - Booklist

WOMEN'S HEALTH

CONGO: THE DOCTOR WHO SAVES WOMEN

By Angele Diabang

Dr. Denis Mukwege is a gynecologist and the founder of Panzi, a hospital whose primary mission is treating women who have been raped - casualties in the Democratic Republic of Congo's decades-long war. At the hospital, in the Kivu district of the country, Mukwege and his mostly female team provide reconstructive surgery and psychological counseling, as well as literacy and other programs designed to help patients reintegrate into a society that has a history of shaming and ostracizing rape survivors.

From Senegalese filmmaker Angele Diabang, CONGO: THE DOCTOR WHO SAVES WOMEN offers the intimate testimonies of women who have been treated at Panzi, along with the perspectives of psychologists and doctors who work there.

Huddled on a bench in a corridor, facing the wall, Annie-Francoise recounts how her family rejected her after she was raped by a militiaman; she is pregnant and hopes to go back to school after having her baby. Regina stares straight ahead and describes how her husband threw her out after she was raped by several soldiers. They are among the thousands of women treated at Panzi, where the model of care is female-centered. In addition to formal therapy, women participate in communal activities. By cooking, singing, and washing together, these shared daily tasks become therapeutic.

Mukwege and others call the rape epidemic in the DRC a crime of war. The widespread sexual assaults create a climate of terror that rival groups use to their advantage - with the ultimate goal of laying their hands on valuable resources.

Through the work of Dr Mukwege, the film highlights the atrocities perpetrated on Congolese women, but also offers vivid accounts of their resilience and determination to not be defined by the crimes committed against them.

YOUNG WOMEN

LET'S GET THE RHYTHM: THE LIFE OF MISS MARY MACK

By Irene Chagall

LET'S GET THE RHYTHM invites the viewer to explore the history of hand-clapping games around the world. Through wars and migrations, across language barriers and oceans, young girls connect with each other through thousands of variants—ancient as they are global—the film chronicles these rhythmic and recreational practices. Guided by three eight-year-olds from diverse cultural backgrounds on inner-city playgrounds in New York City, the film is a charming and beautiful survey with universal insight into the budding social mind and of the empowering impact of the practice on the lives of women. The charm of their personal insight is complemented by archival footage collected by Alan Lomax and observations by folklorists, academics, musicians, ethnomusicologists and cognitive neuroscientists. LET'S GET THE RHYTHM is a delightful homage to the beauty of the beat and to storytelling among young girls and is a necessary film for Anthropology and Sociology courses.
