GOOGLE TOOLS FOR EDUCATION

Beginning with a concise overview of the benefits of cloud computing, this video introduces Google's integrated suite of Internet-based applications while explaining how these tools—powerful, universally available, and free!—can be used to improve learning. Educators and students alike will benefit from a look at the following Google products: Google Search and Google Accessibility; Google Scholar; Google Docs, with its document, spreadsheet, and presentation software; Blogger; Google Earth, Google Maps, and Google Sky; Google SketchUp; Google Groups; Google Reader; Gmail; Picasa; Google Notebook; Google Video, YouTube, and YouTube EDU; Knol; Google Sites; Google Calculator; Google News; and Google Books. A perfect primer!

OPEN SOURCE REVOLUTION

Once the domain of programmers and tech-savvy hobbyists, open source software has hit the mainstream. How exactly did computer users go from living in a world of purchased programs to a world where many of the most sought after applications are free to use, free to copy, and free to modify? This video traces the open source movement in detail, from its earliest days to the present. Richard Stallman, founder of the Free Software Foundation, is profiled, and open source tools for education and business—Linux, Open Office, Firefox, and GIMP—are discussed.

WIKIS IN THE CLASSROOM

Web 2.0 technologies, such as wikis, have enabled educators and students to become instant creators of shared online content. This video describes what wikis are and how they can be employed as educational tools at both the school and college level. Benefits of wikis are cited, and the use of wikis within academia and far beyond is covered, with examples ranging from student projects, classroom management, and teacher-to-teacher resource sharing to international cultural exchanges. The video also offers cautionary advice about reliance upon Wikipedia as a primary research source.

AFRICA

BLOOD IN THE MOBILE: MINING IN THE CONGO

By Frank Piasecki Poulsen

We all love our mobile phones. They connect us to our family and friends. But they also connect us with the Democratic Republic of Congo, one of the most dangerous places on earth. Inside our mobile phones are illegally mined minerals, minerals that fuel conflict, create child slavery, and support other severe human rights abuses in the Congo.

This riveting documentary reveals a mineral trade plagued with violence and human exploitation. The director takes on the Congolese military and corrupt warlords with barnstorming bravado to gain access to Bisie, a militia-controlled slave mine that produces cassiterite, a tin oxide used in cell phones. As many as 25,000 captive workers live there in unimaginable squalor and fear.

He takes his findings back to the Finnish mobile phone giant Nokia, a company that nets up to $1.6 billion in profits annually. His hope is that Nokia will stand behind its claim that "Sustainability is in everything we do." But Nokia refuses to acknowledge "blood" minerals are used in the manufacture of cellphones. Blood in the Mobile is a film about about human courage, and about hope and the search for solutions.

Reviews

- "Blood in the Mobile brings to light important issues to consider in our race for connectivity." - Heather Haynes, programmer, Hot Docs
- "A disturbing film depicts the high price in African blood paid for the convenience of cell phones, as well as the relative indifference of big corporations that do not know—or at least do not care—where their raw materials come from".

WEST AFRICA TODAY: THE LEBANESE AND CHINESE IN GHANA AND SENEGAL

By Sara Goldblatt

In this age of globalization, here is a cameo portrait of how the local population of a "developing" African nation responds to the advances of foreigners bringing economic growth, but also potential cultural conflict.

The film traces the history of Lebanese settlement in Ghana and Senegal from the 1860's, when the first families arrived in the "new world" thinking they had landed in America. They quickly assimilated, learned the language, established retail stores, and interacted closely with the local population.. The Lebanese prospered until the 1970's when nationalistic governments in Ghana and Senegal started pushing them out of retail business and into wholesale. The arrival of Chinese business owners and shopkeepers in the 1990's further impacted an already weakened Lebanese economic elite.

The Chinese were very competitive and offered wares at far lower prices. into the wholesale market. The Chinese outlook was quite different from the Lebanese. They planned to make money and return to China, whereas the Lebanese, who often considered themselves as "Africans" remained fully tied to their lifestyle in Africa and often intermarried.

In addition to hearing from both immigrant groups, the Africans express resentment towards the foreigners who they feel take their resources. One African says that the Chinese represent a serious world power and can not be "messed with."

The insights this film offers will be useful in many contexts; economics, business, cultural anthropology, and African studies.

AGING / GERONTOLOGY

IN THE END: A MEDICAL DILEMMA

By Charlotte Roseby

Intensive care specialist Dr. Charlie Corke is committed to giving his elderly patients every chance to get better, but he knows that sometimes the treatment is only lengthening the dying process, causing discomfort and distress.

This documentary takes us on a journey of a doctor who is trying to balance his own enthusiasm for medical technology with an acceptance that, after a long and healthy life, it may be time to go.

In the End is a beautiful and profound film that follows the journey of patients, their families and their doctor dealing with a modern-day dilemma, ironically the result of scientific advances.

Reviews

- "In the End shows us, in a simple and moving way, that we need to think harder about end-of-life treatment. The fact that we can prolong life means that we tend to do so without asking ourselves if we are really doing anyone any good. And if we did ask that question, then the answer would often be 'no.'" - Peter Singer
- "The patient-family stories are dealt with in a restrained and poignant manner. The visuals are quietly beautiful and contemplative, allowing the focus of the film to remain on the ethical dilemma at the heart of the story." - Compass, ABC Television
- "...illustrates the importance of the medical profession's acceptance of sensible and compassionate management of the end of life experience." - Prof. Trevor Jones, Clinical Services Director, Western Health (Australia)

MOM'S HOME

By Maureen Judge

The film follows three pairs of mothers and daughters who have been brought together under one roof by reasons such as a father/husband's death, degenerative illness, loneliness, isolation, financial circumstances or cultural tradition. Gloria is caring for her widowed mother May, who is coping with the onset of Alzheimer's disease. Originally from Scotland, they return to their native country and encounter the extra burden of re-adjusting not only to shared living but to a "new" environment.

Charmaine has opened her home to her mom Harrian. Harrian had been living with her son for 15 years, but for the sake of his own family, the son felt it best that Harrian move on... and out.

Pam voluntarily moved in with her daughter Liz to help out with the finances. Now, after 11 years of cohabitation, Pam yearns for her own freedom.

All the women find themselves in an emotional tug-of-war as they grapple with conflicting emotions, changing expectations, social adjustments and a sometimes ill-fated commitment to do what's best. Candid and insightful, the film focuses on the all-too recognizable family dramas brought on by role reversals as Mom now finds herself reliant on her adult child.

ALCOHOL

SECONDHAND HANGOVER

A youth produced program about the effects of growing up with addicted parents.

Drug and alcohol abuse is more than a disease that controls the life of the addict; it affects the lives of all those associated with the person, and is an enormous problem for the child of an addicted parent. This program produced by Reel Grrls, an organization for teenage girls that trains them in video production and media skills, including animation, cinematography, script writing and more. "Secondhand Hangover" tells the real-life stories of life of three young women growing up as the children of alcohol/drug addicted parents, and how they have struggled with their parents' addictions. It will leave the viewer with a better understanding of the effects addiction can have on teens from a teen point of view.

Stories include "Dear Stranger", "Breaking the Cycle" and "Love You, Hate Your Addiction".

AMERICAN GOVERNMENT

GUANTANAMO TRAP, THE

At Guantanamo Bay detention camp, history has proved that concepts of right and wrong can all too easily become distorted by expediency and ambiguity. This program examines the lives of high-profile individuals from both sides of the razor wire who have intimate knowledge of the horrors of Gitmo: Murat Kurnaz, a former inmate who was detained without trial for five years; former Navy officer Matthew Diaz, whose career was ruined by disclosing classified names of detainees to the Center for Constitutional Rights; Diane Beaver, author of a notorious memo defending the use of extreme interrogation techniques; and criminal prosecutor Gonzalo Boye, who has set himself the task of bringing representatives of the Bush administration to justice for crimes against humanity. Called "a fascinating study of torture and its wide ranging effects" by RowThree.com.

LET FREEDOM RING: MOMENTS FROM THE CIVIL RIGHTS MOVEMENT, 1954-1965

Despite the colossal and continuing legacy of America's civil rights era, the movement is often best understood through the historical moments in which it took place. This NBC News program presents original coverage from frontline correspondents and camera teams at work during critical junctures in America's battle for racial equality. Hosted by NBC anchor Lester Holt, the video examines the Greensboro sit-ins; the Freedom Rider phenomenon; the efforts by, in support of, and against black students entering southern schools and universities; the March on Washington; and other events and initiatives.

ANTHROPOLOGY

ETRUSCAN ODYSSEY: EXPANDING ARCHAEOLOGY

By Rachel Lyon and Christine Intagliata

The mysterious Etruscan civilization dominated the central region of ancient Italy, around what is now the heartland of Tuscany – before and during the Roman dynasties. While the origins of the Etruscans are lost to pre-written history, Etruria is distinguished from other ancient societies through their remarkable culture, which featured unique language, powerful women, arcane religious beliefs, and magnificent art and architecture.

This film documents the work of Dr. P. Gregory Warden and his team as they search the hilltops of Poggio Colia, Italy, for any clues into the mysterious Etruscan civilization. By restoring and cataloguing the cultural artifacts left behind by ancient settlers, modern archaeologists attempt to reconstruct a picture of daily life in Etruria. Among the issues addressed is what was it like to make the great gold jewels for the ruling families? And to build the complex sarcophagi to hold the remains?

Reviews

- "...a feast of Etruscan art, artifacts and landscapes... a sensitive interpretation by leading excavators of standard Etruscan issues such as origins and disappearance... and the major topic of Etruscan religion." - Nancy de Grummond, Ph.D, Florida State University
- "A fast paced and stunning visual journey through history and material culture of one of Italy's most dynamic civilizations." - Rex Wallace, Prof.,

VILLAGE WITHOUT WOMEN: SEARCHING FOR A WIFE IN RURAL SERBIA

By Srdjan Sarenac

This raucous yet poignant documentary takes us into the lives of three Serbian brothers who are without wives in a remote mountain village of eight inhabitants, all of them single men. Their broken-down house with an earthen floor has no running water, a rickety outhouse, a living room whose walls are covered with Playboy-type pictures, and one bedroom shared by all three men. While Zoran, the eldest, dreams of marrying, he fails to convince a Serbian woman to share this primitive lifestyle.

In nearby Albania there is a surplus of women, and Zoran is willing to pay a matchmaker for the opportunity to meet a group of unattached Albanian women. But at the rendezvous dinner it is obvious that these ladies are not the marrying kind. They certainly would not relish being partnered with a man who may really be looking for a housekeeper. And a further problem is that the scars left by the war in Kosovo makes it difficult for his youngest brother to consider welcoming a former "enemy." Zoran has the opportunity to extend the olive branch to the opponent. Will Zoran's attempt be fruitful? Can he fulfill his dream and renew hope in his village? Filmed with an ironic sense of humor, Village Without Women is a must-see for Anthropology, Gender Studies and Eastern Europe Studies.

FINDING KALMAN: A LIFE RECLAIMED

By Roz Jacobs and Laurie Weisman

How will we tell the story of the Holocaust when the survivors are gone?

In this profoundly touching, intergenerational documentary a charismatic Holocaust survivor inspires her family to connect to relatives they could never meet. Focusing on her brother, Kalman, Anna recounts tales of a mischievous boy who tried to escape the Warsaw ghetto with her.

Her daughter, an artist, devours the stories and paints his portrait over and over again. As Kalman's face emerges on canvas, the film travels back and forth in time from archival Warsaw ghetto footage to summers in a Catskills bungalow colony; from vibrant family life before World War II to now.

Four generations grapple differently with their shared history. In spite of parental attempts to shield their children from the horrors, Roz, the artist grew up very close to her mother's pain, understanding it in stages. Maya, an Israeli-born granddaughter expresses her life's passion playing the viola. Performing with Arab and Israeli youth in Daniel Barenboim's West-Eastern Divan Orchestra, she questions why there has to be war when she sees the natural ease of making music with someone defined as her enemy. Maya performs the original music composed for the film. Eleven year-old great-grandson Roy wonders with concern how the members of his generation will understand the Holocaust when it seems like just another story. Anna, the survivor lives with her pain, but is committed to having a good time, too.

As the loving family that grew from two survivors creates art and music and celebrates together, the film shows how four generations find light even in the darkest of places—with a resiliency that moves us to do the same.

INVITATION TO THE MUSE: EXPLORING CREATIVITY

By Karen Cantor

Theories abound as to why and how humans create art. In this documentary film, made at the Santa Fe Art Institute, we see and hear from a diverse array of artists - sculptors, painters, weavers, musicians, and writers. They share their thoughts and feelings as they journey on a chartless path; whether starting from a slab of stone, a blank canvas, or a pile of wool.

Filed in a poetic style, the filmmaker uses the metaphor of a spider creating its web, endlessly spinning the strands produced from its own body, just as the artists reach into their inner selves and formulate their creations.

Working in a beautiful natural environment we see how nature is incorporated into art. The poet, for instance, is seduced by the rolling fields before her; the rhythm of her poetry captures that. A visual artist and a composer talk about "the grid," the structure underpinning their creations. The tapestry weaver speaks about the colors that appeal to him; we see his personal rainbow resplendent in his work.

While Invitation to the Muse reflects the inner journey, it is also a feast for the eyes and a celebration of the creative force.

LENS & PENS: ART IN AN UNEXPECTED PLACE

By Deborah J. Schull

This inspiring film tells the story of a poetry, painting, and photography workshop and its profound impact on three people deemed by the criminal justice system 'not guilty by reason of insanity.' Relegated to the John Howard Pavilion—the former maximum-security wing of Washington, DC's, historic St. Elizabeths Hospital—patients Ronnie, Pam, and Kevin are chosen by the social worker Ed Washington to participate in the new program: Lens, Pens, Brushes & Friends.

Ed opens the film's narrative as he expresses his intent that the arts workshop begin to bridge the divide between this treatment population and the outside community. Framed by his recollections of the program's evolution, laced with interviews of Ronnie, Pam, and Kevin and the workshop's three volunteer-teachers (representing poetry, photography, and painting) and graced by footage of the students' artwork, the documentary gives every indication that Ed's hopes will be realized. With public exhibits, performances, and even sales of their art, and with substantial leaps in artistic skill and self-confidence, Ronnie, Pam, and Kevin grow beyond anything they could have imagined—and must now balance a newfound freedom with an uncertain future.

ART AND HUMANITIES

CLASSICISM AND ROMANTICISM: THE SOBER AND THE SUBLIME

This program explores Classicism and Romanticism as expressions of divergent human needs—one a leaning toward form, pattern and security; the other a desire for change, fantasy and feeling. It surveys these antithetical influences in architecture, painting, literature and music. Students study Classicism as a way of thought in the writings of Jefferson and Pope and explore Romanticism as a way of feeling in various works by Byron and Shelley.

MAN AND WOMAN: MYTHS AND STEREOTYPES

This timely program examines male and female stereotypes and shows how literature, art, movies, media and pop songs perpetuate artificial masculine and feminine roles. Shakespeare, Wordsworth, and Byron eulogize the stereotypical woman—fair-haired, beautiful, unobtainable—and songs like "The Girl That I Marry" cherish this same myth. The history of sexual stereotypes is traced through passages from Gary Shaw's "Meat On The Hoof," Sylvia Plath's "The Bell Jar," and Simone de Beauvoir's "The Second Sex," among others.

ART HISTORY

WORLDS OF THE MASTERS: FROM CARAVAGGIO TO CANALETTO

Masterpieces of Carravaggio and Rembrandt exemplify the dramatic use of strong chiaroscuro. A detailed look at the work of art historians shows the process of determining authorship of a painting previously attributed to Rembrandt. Flemish paintings of the 17th century attest to the prosperity of the Netherlands in the Age of Exploration and dawn of travel, with genre paintings and landscapes coming into fashion with the emerging bourgeoisie

WORLDS OF THE MASTERS: FROM DORER TO RUBEN

Albrecht Durer mastered the Florentine style of painting and spread its influence to northern Europe. Development of the European printing press made him a pioneer publisher and printmaker. German and Flemish portrait painters documented the lives of the European nobility and wealthy merchants, while the Bruegel workshops captured with poignant satire the day-to-day peasant life, conflicts surrounding the Reformation and the booming flower business. The painterly re-imagining of classical motifs by Rubens were the artist's commentary on war.

WORLDS OF THE MASTERS: FROM VAN EYCK TO TITIAN

Breaking away from stylistic canon of medieval religious art, artists of the early Renaissance turned to oil painting, visual perspective and realism. Flemish 15th century master van Eyck introduced unprecedented realism to the rendering of light. Artists of the Florentine school turned to classical motifs and naturalism that ushered in the art of the Italian Renaissance. Oil painting continued to replace tempera and realistic modeling of form infused religious art with a humanist subtlety.

CITIES ON SPEED - SHANGHAI: SPACE

By Danish Radio

Soon more than 550 cities world wide will have a population of more than one million. In 2030 eighty percent of the world's population will live in cities. Megacities have traditionally been economic and political power centers but today the fastest growing cities are in developing nations.

The new challenge is that cities are growing helter skelter rather than planned. There is an acute need for new models of city planning to prevent collapses under such huge social, economic and environmental pressure. If cities are to remain livable, the problems of population increase must be understood and dealt with. Cities on Speed shows how four different megacities are dealing with this challenge. What are the visions and the solutions and how do they affect the inhabitants?

Shanghai

Shanghai is not just a city - it's an explosion of 4,000 skyscrapers, thousands of miles of highway, millions of citizens and thousands of government planners. Vast communities need to be expropriated to make way for new skyscrapers, roads and industries. The government tries to control it, the citizens try to use it but Shanghai is beyond control.

GODS OF RICE, THE

By Galen Yeo

Through the eyes of an anthropologist this beautifully produced film explores the rich culture of rice, still the basis of survival for most people throughout the world.

In the central Philippines lies a village where its indigenous people have lived among their rice terraces for over 2,000 years. If placed end to end, the rice terraces would circle nearly half the globe. In Bali, the Subak water temples foster a unique blend of technological efficiency and religious ritual that together create a perfect ecological balance.

A growing problem, however, is that the world will soon run short of the free land required to grow enough rice to meet demand. To address this issue, scientists at the International Rice Research Institute are developing rice grains with improved nutritional value. The most successful strain is Golden Rice, called the "Rosetta Stone" of genetically modified crops. This new strain has triggered an ongoing fight between the scientists and the farmers. The scientists, here labelled "The New Gods of Rice," claim that the genetically engineered rice will eliminate disease and poverty. The farmers, in turn, fear the influence of a monopoly owned by biotech companies they worry are looking to drive them out of business. In Thailand, this battle has already begun with the companies patenting their own potent grains, a practice which may change the nature of rice forever.

GOOGLE BABY

Directed by Zippi Brand Frank

Google Baby is a journey across three continents telling the story of the up-and-coming baby production industry in the age of globalization. Doron, an Israeli entrepreneur with a high tech background proposes a new service – baby production. The baby producer (as he introduces himself) provides customers with a turn-key, cost effective solution using outsourcing of the surrogacy element to India as a way to lower prices. The preferred genetic material is selected by the clients and the rest is left in the hands of the producer: sperm and eggs are purchased online and multiple embryos are produced and frozen. Packed in liquid nitrogen, only the embryos that fit the customers' preferences are shipped to India where they are implanted into the wombs of local women. These surrogates are kept in a closed clinic under constant supervision by Dr. Nanya Patel. She sees her participation as sisterly, "one woman helping another." The customers arrive at the end of the nine month pregnancy period to pick up their babies.

In the 60's, the introduction of the contraceptive pill turned sex into an act independent of the risk of pregnancy. Today, technology has turned 'making a baby' into an act independent of sex. Globalization is making "baby producing" affordable – and all one needs is a credit card.

The film raises many issues but the presentation is non-judgmental. Discussions of medical ethics, racism, and exploitation may follow. A valuable addition for women's studies, bioethics, and globalization courses.

Reviews

- "A compelling documentary. An amazingly neutral hand as Ms. Brand Frank deftly avoids the cliches that typically materialize in any journalistic look at atypical reproduction." - The New York Times
- "Will freeing sex and propagation from traditional blood-bound structures like race and family, lead to a new understanding of mankind, or are we just shifting onto another level of racism and colonialism? Brilliantly made, "Google Baby" raises scary questions of our time..." - Docaviv

MOTHERS' WAY, DAUGHTERS' CHOICE

By Kyoko Gasha

"I love my mother, but I just don't want to be like her." Why would successful women from the world's second largest economic power choose to start their lives over in New York City? The documentary Mother's Way, Daughters' Choice explores how several Japanese women struggled to reconcile their traditional upbringing with their desire to create unique lives. To understand these struggles, the director, Kyoko Gasha, shows the deep, powerful influences of Japanese culture on her own life. Kyoko also uncovers stories of other Japanese women in New York City, weaving parallel tales of guilt, denial, sacrifice, success and joy. This is a story of cultures clashing on a personal level.

Kyoko's own story illustrates the difficulties associated with being a traditional Japanese wife and mother while pursuing a demanding career as a broadcast journalist. Kyoko moved to New York where she succeeded as a broadcast journalist for the world's largest news organization and an active parent to her daughter. Her story is echoed by other women in Mother's Way, Daughters' Choice: Nozomi, a banker, Akiko, a corporate lawyer, Sumie a travel agent and Noriko a director of a non-government organization. They all experienced the influences of their birth culture and concluded that they would have to move to a different environment to breathe. Beautifully crafted, this film tells a universal story of the influences of mothers on their daughters and how growth can at once be a painful and rewarding experience.

QUIET REVOLUTION, A: SINGAPORE'S WORLD CLASS EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM

Many say Singapore has the best education system in the world. This film shows how this system has produced such amazing results and how it differs from the educational philosophy as practiced here in the United States. The system acknowledges that not everyone is "college material" and steers students into the appropriate training or educational course.

The film follows the inspiring stories of two

Singaporean school children facing the highest stakes exam of their lives - the primary school leaving exam, or PSLE. It determines where you go to secondary school - and in credential-driven Singaporean society, it is a grade that stays with you for life. We see the hard studies, the tears, the testing grind, the passes and the failures - and learn the surprising way success-driven Singapore handles academic failure -- in a country where the 'Tiger' mom or dad is nothing new. This is an in-depth look at high-stakes testing - and how it affects the lives and psyches of the children.

CHINESE BUBBLE, THE: PREDICTIONS AND PERSPECTIVES

Has China circumvented the economic woes of America and Europe, or is the "Chinese miracle" headed for similar implosions in its housing and financial markets? For answers, this film seeks out the opinions of several Chinese commentators—from respected economists who offer complex analysis to ordinary Beijing citizens who describe their day-to-day struggles with the country's rapid changes. Real estate tycoon Feng Lun, one of the world's most successful developers, is also featured, insisting that opportunities are equal for all in China. But more nuanced views come from a taxi driver, a car salesman, and a construction worker, as well as from Dr. Wang Jianmao of the China Europe International Business School and Shanghai-based economist Dr. Andy Xie.

SACRED AND SECRET: RITES OF PASSAGE IN BALI

Religion in Bali is marked by rituals of high artistry aimed at harmonizing the forces of darkness and light, as this program shows. Ancestor worship, karma, and other key concepts are illustrated through lavish, rare, high-definition footage of a cremation ceremony—considered a joyous prelude to reincarnation—a birth ceremony, a puberty rite, and a wedding. A priest explains the interplay between humans and the spirit world, with input from scholar Graeme MacRae; anthropologist Urs Ramseier discusses the rites of the indigenous Bali Aga; and Gill Marais, on whose book this film is based, comments on the sacred trance-dances performed by young girls.

SACRED AND SECRET: SPIRIT POSSESSION IN BALI

The elaborate rituals and timeless pageantry of Bali make the island unforgettable for visitors, yet few really understand what lies behind the dances, the costumes, and the ceremonies. With gorgeous, high-definition footage this program delves into the spiritual beliefs at the heart of Balinese traditions. Viewers observe the powerful Barong dance, in which participants fall into a trance and are later revived by mantras, and witness a frenetic invocation of the goddess of death not performed for tourists. In addition, the video documents the four months of preparation leading up to a spectacular cremation ceremony for three members of the royal family of Ubud, including the man known as Bali's Last King.

TROPICAL STORMS AND FLOODING IN BANGLADESH: FLOODING IN BANGLADESH - CAUSES, IMPACTS, AND MANAGEMENT

Taking viewers deep inside a devastated landscape, this program examines physical forces directly tied to flooding in Bangladesh as well as the broader causes of such disasters, including climate change. It also explores the social, economic, and environmental impact of intense flooding through the personal accounts of people living by major rivers and on Bangladesh's char lands, areas built up from river sediment. Examples of flood management strategies are explored,

TROPICAL STORMS AND FLOODING IN BANGLADESH: TROPICAL STORMS - BANGLADESH'S CYCLONE AILA

With extraordinary footage shot during and after Severe Cyclonic Storm Aila, this program looks at the causes and effects of the violent weather event in Bangladesh. Viewers learn how cyclones take shape and develop, witness scenes of Aila striking coastal areas, and explore the social, economic, and ecological consequences through expert commentary and first-hand accounts. The film returns to specific areas a year after the storm and provides examples of how NGOs and government agencies are working together to reduce both the short- and long-term impact of cyclones through better monitoring, predictions, preparation, disaster relief, and poverty alleviation strategies. Eye-catching graphics help explain scientific concepts.

TRUE BELIEVERS: RELIGION IN TODAY'S CHINA

China is on the rise economically, but the post-Mao era has also seen an increasing hunger for something beyond material prosperity. From the novice Daoist monk honing tai chi skills atop a sacred mountain to the uncountable worshippers of the underground house church movement, this program reports on modern China's emboldened—yet still cautious—religious population. In the city of Wenzhou, evangelical pastor Zheng Datong agrees to be interviewed, despite secret police looking on. Pastor Samuel Lamb, another lightning rod for security surveillance, insists that "oppression simply leads to more believers," while Pastor Joseph Gu, leader of a mainstream Three-Self Patriotic Movement church, describes the rapid growth of his congregation. For a much different yet equally spiritual perspective, the film turns to Daoist kung-fu master Zhong Yunlong at the Wudong Mountain monastery, where a sacred shrine still attracts pupils and travelers.

AUTOMOTIVE TECHNOLOGY

BMW: A DRIVING OBSESSION

Reported by award-winning correspondent Carl Quintanilla, this documentary tells the fascinating story of a small, struggling company that transformed itself into a global luxury-car powerhouse—and is now going all-out to maintain its edge. Viewers go inside BMW's secretive Tech Center, where teams of engineers obsess over the smallest of details. The program then profiles BMW's chief designer and explains the fascinating process that starts with a pencil sketch and ends with a new model on the showroom floor. Other segments feature discussions of environmental sustainability and competition from Chinese automakers; a conversation with David Champion, senior director of the Auto Test Division at Consumer Reports, who questions the value of some BMW features; and a journey to the village of Goodwood, England—home to the most precious gem in BMW's crown, the Rolls-Royce.

BRAKING SYSTEMS ASE CERTIFICATION: BRAKE FUNDAMENTALS, ABS, AND FLARING

The laws of physics are central to brake technology, but you've got to put theory into practice when servicing a braking system. This video helps automotive students and trainees build a solid knowledge base in brake diagnosis and repair, from the wonders of ABS technology's three modes of operation to the nitty-gritty of flaring a brake line. Illustrating the basic roles of the master cylinder and the brake booster, the video looks at antilock systems, traction control, and the basics of inputs and outputs. Scan tool testing is also illustrated. Then, viewers learn the proper way to bend, cut, flare, and install a brake line, including both double flare and ISO or bubble flare techniques, as well as how to troubleshoot brake hose problems.

BRAKING SYSTEMS ASE CERTIFICATION: DISC AND DRUM BRAKES

Although a car technician needs to become familiar with both disc and drum brakes, each brake type has its own service-related quirks and challenges. This video features both disc and drum instruction for automotive students and service trainees. The disc brake section shows viewers different types of disc pads, rotors, and calipers; how to cut rotors using either a standard or on-car brake lathe; how to visually inspect the lines; how to disassemble the front disc and remove the rotor; and how to reassemble in a professional manner. The drum brake section covers drum shoes, springs, hold-downs, wheel cylinders, and other parts, with insight on cutting drums, disassembly, and reassembly. Staying alert for problems during a test-drive is also emphasized.

The ins and outs of brake system maintenance require skilled hands, a sharp eye, and a focused mind. This video serves as a guide to performing work on master cylinders, valves, and power assist components. Dissecting the master cylinder in order to look at its hydraulic components, compensating port, vent port, step bore cylinder, and other parts, the video also examines metering valves, combination valves, proportion valves, and their functions, while discussing pedal force, mechanical advantage, hydraulic advantage, vacuum suspended boosters, atmospheric suspended boosters, tandem boosters, single diaphragm boosters, check valves, and more. All four modes of bleeding are covered.

To understand whether or not a vehicle is functioning properly and determine its potential problems, a service provider now has to understand computers. This video offers guidance in the complex workings of a car's nerve center and the sensors that bring information, from mass air flow to engine coolant temperature, into an automotive computer system. Viewers can sharpen their skills and knowledge in interpreting real-time scan tool readings for cars that often boast over 50 microprocessors. Examples of modules that technicians frequently deal with are shown as the video discusses OBD II procedures and a variety of sensors, such as those for throttle position, heated oxygen, manifold absolute pressure, intake air temperature, and more.

A car's ignition gives it the spark of life—but, as any good technician knows, figuring out how ignition and fuel systems really work isn't that simple. This video sheds light on the daunting maintenance challenges found in ignition distributors, distributorless ignition systems, and fuel systems. Viewers learn about diagnosing problems with several components—including distributors, distributor caps, distributor rotors, spark plugs, and spark plug wires—and how to build an ignition system. The next section covers the computers, triggering devices, coil packs, modules, and other elements of a distributorless ignition system, while the subsequent chapter looks at fuel pumps, fuel injectors, fuel filters, fuel pressure tests, injector testing, and more.

WELDING PROCESSES AND FUNDAMENTALS: GAS METAL ARC WELDING (GMAW)

Also referred to as "MIG" (metal inert gas) welding, GMAW creates an arc with a solid wire fed through a MIG gun and melted to form a weld. This video guides students through the basics of gas metal arc welding, which is often used in automotive, structural, and production manufacturing. Helping students identify the correct duty cycle for the job at hand, the video explains the function and specifications of the electrode or "filler wire" as well as the other GMAW tool components. Safety, transfer modes, general set-up procedures, laying and reading beads, and other topics are featured. A troubleshooting segment helps deal with problems like an erratic puddle, excessive spatter, porosity, poor penetration, and excessive penetration, with advanced GMAW techniques also explored.

GTAW is also known as "TIG" or tungsten inert gas welding, and uses a non-consumable electrode to make high-quality welds on both ferrous and non-ferrous metals. This video shows students how to properly and safely apply GTAW techniques. Pointing out tungsten's high melting temperature (the highest of any metal) and the general advantages of GTAW, the video explains AC or DC power source options as well as other system components, including the torch, foot switch, shielding gas, and ground clamp. Viewers learn how to select and prepare the right electrode (an AWS chart is illustrated), how to ensure safe working conditions, and how to set up the GTAW system for quality welds. An advanced segment covers joint types from butt to tee and helps troubleshoot problems like excessive tungsten wear, tungsten spitting, a porous weld, and an unstable arc.

WELDING PROCESSES AND FUNDAMENTALS: OXY-FUEL AND PLASMA CUTTING

Preparing for a welding project usually involves cutting metal into specific shapes and pieces, a task that requires many of the same tools and know-how used in welding. This video serves as a basic guide to two popular heat-based cutting methods: oxy-fuel and plasma. Beginning with an overview of safety procedures, the video shows how to set up an oxy-acetylene system and demonstrates correct coupling distance, travel speed, torch angle, machine finishing, and other aspects of handheld cutting. Additional fuel choices are listed, too. The plasma segment includes a basic definition of what plasma is and how it is used in cutting. Viewers learn the fine points of setting up and cutting with a plasma system and are given numerous tips and guidelines, from one- and two-hand torch manipulation to troubleshooting various problems.

WELDING PROCESSES AND FUNDAMENTALS: SHIELDED METAL ARC WELDING (SMAW)

Often referred to as "stick welding," SMAW has been used for decades to weld most metals and alloys. This video helps students learn the basics of the SMAW method, in which the electrode is consumable and becomes part of the weld. Identifying critical system components, the video explains different power types and power levels and includes a discussion of DCRP, DCSP, and AC modes. It then shows how to choose the correct welding rod, make sure that all equipment and working conditions meet professional safety standards, set up the system to begin work, correctly lay a bead, and read or inspect a bead. A segment on advanced techniques looks at several types of joints—edge, corner, lap, and tee joints as well as various butt joints—in addition to root, fill, and cap passes. Solving the problem of arc blow is also covered.

BIOETHICS

BODY CORPORATE: WHO OWNS YOUR GENES?

Right now across the globe there is a major legal and scientific war raging over one simple question: should we allow individuals and corporations to patent genes? Everyday we walk around, encountering a genetic whirlpool of people of different shapes and colors, barely conscious that 4000 of the 20,000 genes inside each of us belong to biotech companies. Some biotech companies claim patents reward medical research and promote the investigation of life saving treatments. Others see it very differently, describing patenting as a biotech land-grab that's less about patients and more about greed. For example, if a person carries the breast cancer gene, he/she has a 50 to 85 per cent chance of contracting the disease. But the cost of this testing is prohibitive.

In Body Corporate, reporter Andrew Fowler travels in the United States and Australia to hear from both sides in this high-stakes controversy. Who is right? Can the very basis of life itself be patented and sold? Is it possible that a unique gene that makes us what we are could be patented by someone we don't know and then franchised out to a major corporation? These questions will be resolved in the courtrooms as companies with multi-million dollar investments are prepared to battle all the way to the Supreme Court.

IN THE END: A MEDICAL DILEMMA

By Charlotte Roseby

Intensive care specialist Dr. Charlie Corke is committed to giving his elderly patients every chance to get better, but he knows that sometimes the treatment is only lengthening the dying process, causing discomfort and distress.

This documentary takes us on a journey of a doctor who is trying to balance his own enthusiasm for medical technology with an acceptance that, after a long and healthy life, it may be time to go.

In the End is a beautiful and profound film that follows the journey of patients, their families and their doctor dealing with a modern-day dilemma, ironically the result of scientific advances.

Reviews

- "In the End shows us, in a simple and moving way, that we need to think harder about end-of-life treatment. The fact that we can prolong life means that we tend to do so without asking ourselves if we are really doing anyone any good. And if we did ask that question, then the answer would often be 'no'." - Peter Singer
- "The patient-family stories are dealt with in a restrained and poignant manner. The visuals are quietly beautiful and contemplative, allowing the focus of the film to remain on the ethical dilemma at the heart of the story." - Compass, ABC Television

- "...illustrates the importance of the medical profession's acceptance of sensible and compassionate management of the end of life experience." - Prof. Trevor Jones, Clinical Services Director, Western Health (Australia)

Also referred to as "MIG" (metal inert gas) welding, GMAW creates an arc with a solid wire fed through a MIG gun and melted to form a weld. This video guides students through the basics of gas metal arc welding, which is often used in automotive, structural, and production manufacturing. Helping students identify the correct duty cycle for the job at hand, the video explains the function and specifications of the electrode or "filler wire" as well as the other GMAW tool components. Safety, transfer modes, general set-up procedures, laying and reading beads, and other topics are featured. A troubleshooting segment helps deal with problems like an erratic puddle, excessive spatter, porosity, poor penetration, and excessive penetration, with advanced GMAW techniques also explored.

WELDING PROCESSES AND FUNDAMENTALS: GAS TUNGSTEN ARC WELDING (GTAW)

GTAW is also known as "TIG" or tungsten inert gas welding, and uses a non-consumable electrode to make high-quality welds on both ferrous and non-ferrous metals. This video shows students how to properly and safely apply GTAW techniques. Pointing out tungsten's high melting temperature (the highest of any metal) and the general advantages of GTAW, the video explains AC or DC power source options as well as other system components, including the torch, foot switch, shielding gas, and ground clamp. Viewers learn how to select and prepare the right electrode (an AWS chart is illustrated), how to ensure safe working conditions, and how to set up the GTAW system for quality welds. An advanced segment covers joint types from butt to tee and helps troubleshoot problems like excessive tungsten wear, tungsten spitting, a porous weld, and an unstable arc.

WELDING PROCESSES AND FUNDAMENTALS: OXY-FUEL AND PLASMA CUTTING

Preparing for a welding project usually involves cutting metal into specific shapes and pieces, a task that requires many of the same tools and know-how used in welding. This video serves as a basic guide to two popular heat-based cutting methods: oxy-fuel and plasma. Beginning with an overview of safety procedures, the video shows how to set up an oxy-acetylene system and demonstrates correct coupling distance, travel speed, torch angle, machine finishing, and other aspects of handheld cutting. Additional fuel choices are listed, too. The plasma segment includes a basic definition of what plasma is and how it is able to cut.

Viewers learn the fine points of setting up and cutting with a plasma system and are given numerous tips and guidelines, from one- and two-hand torch manipulation to troubleshooting various problems.

WELDING PROCESSES AND FUNDAMENTALS: SHIELDED METAL ARC WELDING (SMAW)

Often referred to as "stick welding," SMAW has been used for decades to weld most metals and alloys. This video helps students learn the basics of the SMAW method, in which the electrode is consumable and becomes part of the weld. Identifying critical system components, the video explains different power types and power levels and includes a discussion of DCRP, DCSP, and AC modes. It then shows how to choose the correct welding rod, make sure that all equipment and working conditions meet professional safety standards, set up the system to begin work, correctly lay a bead, and read or inspect a bead. A segment on advanced techniques looks at several types of joints—edge, corner, lap, and tee joints as well as various butt joints—in addition to root, fill, and cap passes. Solving the problem of arc blow is also covered.

BULLYING

COMING OUT

A youth produced program about heterosexism and homophobia.

Have you ever wondered what it would be like if straight people had to "come out" in a gay world? "Coming Out", a youth-produced DVD, turns normal expectations upside down, and deftly illuminates the impact of heterosexism and homophobia on the identities of queer youth. The DVD was produced by a team of queer and straight young women as part of the Reel Grrls program which partners teen girls with women media professionals who teach them digital filmmaking in order to create self-affirming media images about teen identity. As the video was conceived and produced by teens it is a fresh and humorous approach that encourages audiences to examine previous held prejudices in a clever and non-threatening manner.

PUT THIS ON THE MAP

An award-winning program about young people and gender identity.

Family, school, and social pressures create educational and health disparities for queer/trans youth, and for those questioning their gender or sexual identity. Yet talking about gender and sexuality diversity in schools and youth-serving organizations can bring up concerns among leadership about liability, community reaction, or saying the wrong thing. These concerns often overshadow the daily repercussions of an inexperienced or inactive faculty or staff.

Research indicates that queer and transgender young people are more than four times as likely to have attempted suicide in the past year than their peers, as well as face an increased risk of harassment at school, drug and alcohol use, and of being the victims of physical violence. Queer and transgender youth are also over-represented in the juvenile justice system and in systems of state care, where policies and practices often don't meet the most basic safeguards. Educators, health providers, service organizations, and state agencies often lack confidence and competency to help or to address structural issues related to gender and sexuality.

MONEY AND SPEED: INSIDE THE FLASH CRASH

On May 6, 2010, the Dow Jones took a dramatic nosedive but recovered 20 minutes later. Now known as the 2010 Flash Crash, the incident left financial players and Wall Street commentators agape. What triggered the economic tsunami, and could it happen again? In this program a data analyst, a fund manager, and others explain the computerized trading that precipitated the historic Flash Crash. Mathematician Paul Wilmott is wary of this algorithmic method that replaces human decision-making, while fund manager Rishi Narang supports it. The video includes commentary from computer-historian George Dyson and from Gregg Berman, the SEC regulator who led the investigation into the Flash Crash.

COGNITIVE-BEHAVIORAL THERAPY

RELATIONSHIPS: COGNITIVE-BEHAVIORAL FAMILY THERAPY

With Frank M. Dattilio, PhD, ABPP

When applied to families, the cognitive-behavioral therapeutic approach examines the interactional dynamics of family members and how they contribute to family functioning and dysfunction. In Cognitive-Behavioral Family Therapy, Dr. Frank M. Dattilio demonstrates a single-session intervention with a single mother and her three sons, identifying some of the automatic thoughts and schemas that exist among these family members.

This DVD depicts the manner in which a cognitive-behavioral approach can be addressed within a family structure, with the therapist engaging the family and highlighting issues that involve emotions, beliefs, and behavioral exchange.

SYSTEMS OF PSYCHOTHERAPY: COGNITIVE-BEHAVIORAL THERAPY STRATEGIES

With Keith S. Dobson, PhD

Cognitive-behavioral therapy (CBT), a system of treatment involving a focus on thinking and its influence on both behavior and feelings, is one of the dominant approaches to psychotherapy. CBT is based on a model of psychopathology that emphasizes the role of dysfunctional beliefs and situational cognitions and their influence on emotional and behavioral outcomes, which in turn reinforce negative beliefs and thought patterns.

Cognitive-Behavioral Therapy Strategies illustrates multiple aspects of the CBT system of psychotherapy, including the setting conditions (e.g., the therapy relationship), parameters around the techniques, and the techniques themselves.

Using selected vignettes from actual therapy sessions, Keith S. Dobson explores the key techniques used in cognitive-behavioral therapy, including developing a therapeutic alliance, case conceptualization, psychoeducation, assigning homework, and assessing automatic thoughts.

COUPLE THERAPY

RELATIONSHIPS: EMOTIONALLY FOCUSED COUPLE THERAPY FOR CLIENTS DEALING WITH INFIDELITY

With Sue Johnson, CPsych, EdD

In Emotionally Focused Couple Therapy for Clients Dealing With Infidelity, Sue Johnson demonstrates this experiential, integrative approach for helping couples deal more effectively with feelings of distress and negative interaction patterns so that they may restore trust and develop more secure attachment bonds.

Emotionally focused couple therapy centers on emotions and how partners communicate their emotions to one another. This is a collaborative approach in which the therapist focuses on sitting with the couple as they make sense of their emotions, creating a secure base that facilitates the forgiveness process and the sharing of core fears and needs. The ultimate goal of therapy is to help couples to learn to speak in a direct and open way about their feelings so that they may state their needs and develop a deeper, richer attachment bond.

In this video, Johnson helps a couple as they struggle with issues surrounding infidelity.

CRIMINOLOGY

GUANTANAMO TRAP, THE

At Guantanamo Bay detention camp, history has proved that concepts of right and wrong can all too easily become distorted by expediency and ambiguity. This program examines the lives of high-profile individuals from both sides of the razor wire who have intimate knowledge of the horrors of Gitmo: Murat Kurnaz, a former inmate who was detained without trial for five years; former Navy officer Matthew Diaz, whose career was ruined by disclosing classified names of detainees to the Center for Constitutional Rights; Diane Beaver, author of a notorious memo defending the use of extreme interrogation techniques; and criminal prosecutor Gonzalo Boye, who has set himself the task of bringing representatives of the Bush administration to justice for crimes against humanity. Called "a fascinating study of torture and its wide ranging effects" by RowThree.com.

SACRED AND SECRET: RITES OF PASSAGE IN BALI

Religion in Bali is marked by rituals of high artistry aimed at harmonizing the forces of darkness and light, as this program shows. Ancestor worship, karma, and other key concepts are illustrated through lavish, rare, high-definition footage of a cremation ceremony—considered a joyous prelude to reincarnation—a birth ceremony, a puberty rite, and a wedding. A priest explains the interplay between humans and the spirit world, with input from scholar Graeme MacRae; anthropologist Urs Ramseier discusses the rites of the indigenous Bali Aga; and Gill Marais, on whose book this film is based, comments on the sacred trance-dances performed by young girls.

SECRETS OF THE ARABIAN NIGHTS

Since their appearance in Europe some 300 years ago, the stories of The Thousand and One Nights have entranced Western readers with visions of an exotic, magical Middle East. In this program, actor and director Richard E. Grant revisits the book he loved as a child and seeks to understand its persistent hold on the collective imagination. Grant travels to Paris to discover how the Arabist Antoine Galland imported the tales of Sinbad, Ali Baba, and Aladdin in the early 18th century. In Cairo, Grant explores the medieval Islamic world that gave birth to the beloved narratives while he examines present-day controversies over their sexually explicit content. Ultimately, Grant poses a question—can The Arabian Nights still enrich and possibly change Western perceptions of the Arab world?

DANCE

AMERICAN SWAN IN PARIS

By Arantxa Aguirre

"If there ever was a test for not letting fear hold you back, that was mine!" - Kathleen Thielhelm

American Swan in Paris is both a love letter to Paris and to dance. It features the charming Kathleen Thielhelm from Wisconsin, nine years a dancer with the Joffrey Ballet in Chicago, and a recent addition to the Bejart Ballet Lausanne. Not long after her arrival, the company is to perform at the Palais Garnier in Paris (the old Paris Opera) and the excitement and tension is palpable.

We watch the company as they rehearse. Kathleen, whose emotions are transparent, is alternately awed, frustrated, and delirious with excitement. Transported to Paris the dancers are awestruck by the city and their new performance venue.

As though the tension were not enough, Kathleen is called at the last minute to perform opening night substituting for a dancer who is ill. In the grandeur of the opera house with its gilded balconies rising like wedding cake and filled with dance aficionados, the girl from Wisconsin does her country proud!

GIL ROMAN AND THE BEJART BALLET LAUSANNE: OF HEART AND COURAGE

By Arantxa Aguirre

Selected by his mentor to lead the Bejart Ballet Lausanne (BBL) forward -- and not just as a vehicle for the Bejart repertory -- Roman is well aware of the dauntingly large shoes he's expected to fill. His own choreography, as well as leadership, must prove worthy to secure the future of a beloved institution hitherto unimaginable without its founder's active guidance.

Daringly, Roman chooses to prove his mettle by staging BBL's first-ever bill sans any Bejart works. We glimpse rehearsals and other behind-the-scenes aspects, with dancers past and present interviewed. New dances excerpted look exciting, as does the climactic gala. Bejart himself is heard on archival tape and seen in stills, but the focus here is on the present magnificent company.

Review

- "Not the straightforward tribute to a famed ballet company and its recently deceased founder one might expect, Gil Roman... finds a compelling narrative hook in the high-pressure transitional moment as succeeding artistic director Gil Roman prepares the BBL's first, crucial post-Bejart program." - Dennis Harvey, Variety.

RUDY PEREZ - COUNTDOWN: REFLECTIONS ON A LIFE IN DANCE

Directed by Rachel Perez Bitan

For over forty years the choreographer and dancer Rudy Perez has invigorated the dance scene. In the 1960s he was hailed as a postmodern pioneer at the groundbreaking Judson Dance Theater in New York. He garnered critical acclaim for his solos as well as for the choreography he created for his own dance ensembles, which often included unusual humorous elements.

The documentary follows the fascinating rehearsal of one of Perez' signature dances, Countdown with the talented dancer Victor Quijada* in Los Angeles. Throughout the rehearsal process, Rudy's life and career are revealed through evocative home movies, archival videos of his body of work and rare footage of New York in the '50s and '60s. After enduring an impoverished childhood, Perez left his Puerto Rican family at seventeen and began his dance training with the legendary New Dance Group, studying with Martha Graham, Merce Cunningham and Mary Anthony, among others. Included are interviews with dance critics, dancers and collaborators who discuss Perez' impact on the East and West Coast dance scene.

Review

- "'Countdown,' Perez's celebrated 1964 solo -- and the title of an excellent documentary -- is that magical amalgam of music, imagery, atmosphere and powerful movement-suggestion we call drama." -- Donna Perlmutter, LA City Beat

DEPRESSION

MEN AND MASCULINITY: MEN AND DEPRESSION

With Fredric E. Rabinowitz, PhD

Fredric E. Rabinowitz demonstrates the "deepening psychotherapy" approach with men, integrating a psychodynamic developmental perspective with a gender role strain perspective.

Dr. Rabinowitz works with a young man who shows characteristics of masked depression, in which the symptoms of depression are obscured to some degree but perceptible just beneath the surface of the patient's affect. With the use of empathy, along with asking questions and reflecting, Dr. Rabinowitz draws out the underlying sadness, anger, and feelings of emptiness related to the client's early life experiences.

DISABILITIES

BALL, THE

By Jessica Laski

This charming film takes us into the world of students with special needs as they prepare for their school's debutante ball. Most high schoolers take their prom for granted but these young people have the challenge of overcoming disability in order to make a glamorous presentation that night.

The pupils at the Ashwood School are all mildly intellectually disabled, although their abilities vary. These children are on the threshold of adulthood physically. They are starting to be interested in the opposite sex, are craving more independence and looking forward to earning a living, making a home, even starting a family. First loves, fist fights and falls on the dance floor are intercut with interviews with parents, the school principal, and intimate moments in their day-to-day lives at home.

As the day approaches we share their trepidation that everything be perfect. It is a significant night for both them and their parents, who will be watching with pride. As they mark the end of their schooling with this grand finale, the question is raised: What will be possible for them?

DISABILITIES AT WORK: SUCCESSFUL JOB HUNTING FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES - SMART RESUMES AND APPLICATIONS FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES

A resume must be impressive. But for people with disabilities, there's always an extra concern. At what stage of the process should the disability be mentioned—in the resume? On an application? Is it better to wait until a face-to-face interview? While there's no easy answer, this video helps job seekers sift through the many challenges and decisions of completing resumes, cover letters, references, and applications. Illustrating the differences between chronological, functional, and combination resumes, as well as the specific uses of a targeted resume, the program explains why a candidate with a disability might choose one type or another and explores ways to submit an application package that is positive, professional, and proactive.

I HEAR WITH MY EYES

Julie loves the glorious colors associated with the sound of a rooster crowing, while Mandi remembers phone numbers by their hues. Until John read a newspaper article about synesthesia in later life, he thought that everyone saw the days of the week as various shades of blue. In this program people with synesthesia describe their experiences and perceptions, and the benefits and drawbacks of having a condition in which the barriers between the senses are dissolved. While it might seem like a psychedelic drug trip to the 96 percent of the population who don't have synesthesia, those who do report that "You don't go around saying, 'Oh, wow!'... it's just the way we perceive life."

JOINT REACTION: HIP REPLACEMENT

TECHNOLOGY GONE AWRY

Ron was an active 76-year-old when he underwent articular surface replacement, or ASR, for one of his hips. Soon after his surgery a lump the size of a grapefruit developed on the side of his leg. Five operations later, he can barely walk. Another case study features Catherine, who had ASR in her early 40s and now suffers from toxic levels of cobalt in her system. Ron and Catherine are among the multitude of patients worldwide facing a painful, uncertain future due to the chromium and cobalt components of ASR. Produced in Australia, this program overviews how the metal-to-metal technology was intended to work and asks much-needed questions about its trial phase—which appears to have been wholly inadequate. Contains graphic surgical imagery.

DIVERSITY TRAINING

WHAT EVERYONE NEEDS TO KNOW ABOUT SEXUAL HARASSMENT

The Supreme Court made sexual harassment training essentially mandatory in 1998. Not only did it say that employers are liable for the actions of their managers whether they knew about them or not, but it also outlawed same-sex sexual harassment. Large & small companies alike face an increasing number of sexual harassment cases each year. The average verdict for a sexual harassment suit is $350,000. The average cost to defend a suit is $150,000 per plaintiff. Every organization owes each employee the opportunity to work in an environment that is free from unlawful discrimination that can be, and must be, prevented. With the help of our Sexual Harassment Players, the viewer is provided with workplace scenarios that examine both clear-cut harassment situations and also common gray-area occurrences. In the "What Can You Do?" section of this video, the viewer is given simple and direct steps to take in order to combat sexual harassment in their own workplace-before there is a lawsuit.

DRUGS, ALCOHOL AND SMOKING

POWER OF CHOICE, THE: VOLUME 5 - DRUGS AND ALCOHOL - PART 1

Featuring Michael Pritchard

In this program, host Michael Pritchard encourages teenagers to come to grips with the question of what to do when "just say no" and "just say yes" just won't do. Students from high schools in Atlanta and Albuquerque talk openly and honestly about the choices (good and bad) they have made with alcohol and drug use. As one teenager relates, "I look back, it felt good then. Now I could cry. Once it wore off, I had to face myself again."

Objectives:To stimulate teens to think critically about their choices involving drugs and alcohol. To help them see that they have the power to make those choices for themselves, regardless of social pressures. To make them aware of how drugs and alcohol can take over their power of choice and reduce the amount of control they have over their own lives.

POWER OF CHOICE, THE: VOLUME 6 - DRUGS AND ALCOHOL - PART 2

Featuring Michael Pritchard

In this program, Pritchard and high school students in Albuquerque; Atlanta; Cleveland; Madison, Wisconsin; and Fremont, California, examine how chemical abuse damages relationships, what you can and cannot do about it, and how to respond when a chemically dependent person asks you for help. It is a useful and enlightening look at what to do when someone you care about is hooked.

Objectives:To show how drug and alcohol abuse affects friends and family members of the user. To reveal some ways of responding or intervening that often do work. To clarify what power friends and family members do and do not have in the situation. To show them they can make a difference and inform them about where they can go for help.

POWER OF CHOICE, THE: VOLUME 7 - DRINKING AND DRIVING

Featuring Michael Pritchard

In this program, comedian/teen counselor Michael Pritchard visits with teenagers in Los Angeles; Nashville; and Madison, Wisconsin, to talk about how to stay out of (or get out of) drinking/driving predicaments and still be cool. As one boy so honestly put it, "It's hard for guys like me who aren't very popular. Friendships I have with guys who brag about dope, drinking, and wild parties are important. A lot of times you just go along with it and tell yourself next time you won't do it. But then you go along with them anyway."

Objectives:Build young people's awareness of the issue of drunk driving. Show them that driving drunk, or going along with others who do, is always a matter of choice. Encourage them to anticipate when a drinking/driving situation may arise and plan alternatives. Help them to see themselves as having the power to prevent drunk driving.

EARTH SCIENCE

HAWAII: ROOTS OF FIRE

Directed by Diane LaMacchia and Doug Prose

HAWAII: ROOTS OF FIRE is a new documentary about the hidden forces that drive the planet's largest and most active volcanic system, the Hawaiian Islands.

The film follows earth scientists as they work among the volcanoes of the Big Island Hawaii, pursuing clues and compiling evidence in a quest to shed light on the mysterious inner-Earth process that has been producing giant volcanoes in the middle of the Pacific Ocean for more than 75 million years.

Scientists have long been puzzled over the source of the huge quantities of lava erupting out of Hawaii's massive volcanoes. Does the lava come from just below the Earth's crust? Or does it come from much deeper, perhaps even as far down as the Earth's core, some 1,800 miles below the surface?

The film focuses on an international team of scientists who take on these key questions with a major drilling project into the flanks of Mauna Kea, Hawaii's tallest volcano.

After years of painstaking research, startling new discoveries are made. Not only have the scientists determined where the lava is coming from, but they have solved other long-standing mysteries about the workings of Hawaii's magnificent volcanoes.

This project was funded by the National Science Foundation Continental Dynamics and Informal Science Education Programs.

Reviews

- "This entertaining and educational film is a must-see for both students and educators in the earth sciences." - Dr. Michael Zhdanov, Professor, Geology and Geophysics, The University of Utah
- "Excellent presentation on the causes of volcanoes in Hawaii and the modern theory of mantle plumes. Interviews with prominent scientists are suitable for middle school students to the adult public." - Dr. Norman Sleep, Professor of Geophysics, Stanford University, Author, Principles of Geophysics

CHINATOWN: AN ATTEMPT AT GLOBALIZATION IN SWEDEN

By Ronja Yu

Kalmar is a small town in the south of Sweden, facing problems of unemployment and a dwindling population. It really needed an economic boost. The local authorities signed an agreement with ambitious Chinese businessman Luo Jingxing, who planned to set up a commercial center in Kalmar. Here is an ideal globalization project, that unfortunately did not work out as envisioned. This amusing and relevant film shows the problems that emerge when the tigers of the developing world try to expand into Europe

The inhabitants of Kalmar prepare happily to receive their new neighbors. But the Chinese construction workers are told by their boss "you don't spit on the ground in Sweden." There's the strict Swedish Health and Safety Inspectorate, which clashes with the Chinese desire to get things done fast. Swedish safety officers will not allow the Chinese to work without the proper work shoes. The workers laugh with bemusement. The Chinese wanted to start building before getting their permits. The project pitted Chinese raw capitalism against Swedish bureaucracy. In the end, the center failed, money disappeared, and both sides lost out. The harsh reality of the cultural clash defeated this vision of globalization.

CHINESE BUBBLE, THE: PREDICTIONS AND PERSPECTIVES

Has China circumvented the economic woes of America and Europe, or is the "Chinese miracle" headed for similar implosions in its housing and financial markets? For answers, this film seeks out the opinions of several Chinese commentators—from respected economists who offer complex analysis to ordinary Beijing citizens who describe their day-to-day struggles with the country's rapid changes. Real estate tycoon Feng Lun, one of the world's most successful developers, is also featured, insisting that opportunities are equal for all in China. But more nuanced views come from a taxi driver, a car salesman, and a construction worker, as well as from Dr. Wang Jianmao of the China Europe International Business School and Shanghai-based economist Dr. Andy Xie.

GODS OF RICE, THE

By Galen Yeo

Through the eyes of an anthropologist this beautifully produced film explores the rich culture of rice, still the basis of survival for most people throughout the world.

In the central Philippines lies a village where its indigenous people have lived among their rice terraces for over 2,000 years. If placed end to end, the rice terraces would circle nearly half the globe. In Bali, the Subak water temples foster a unique blend of technological efficiency and religious ritual that together create a perfect ecological balance.

A growing problem, however, is that the world will soon run short of the free land required to grow enough rice to meet demand. To address this issue, scientists at the International Rice Research Institute are developing rice grains with improved nutritional value. The most successful strain is Golden Rice, called the "Rosetta Stone" of genetically modified crops. This new strain has triggered an ongoing fight between the scientists and the farmers. The scientists, here labelled "The New Gods of Rice," claim that the genetically engineered rice will eliminate disease and poverty. The farmers, in turn, fear the influence of a monopoly owned by biotech companies they worry are looking to drive them out of business. In Thailand, this battle has already begun with the companies patenting their own potent grains, a practice which may change the nature of rice forever.

MICROECONOMICS: UNDERSTANDING THE MARKET SYSTEM

A fundamental proposition in economics is that people have unlimited wants, but there are limited resources, which leads to the problem of scarcity. Hence the central question in economics is how best to allocate limited resources to produce goods and services. In this program we introduce the market system, the law of demand and supply, price elasticity, market structures, market failures and government response, and many more key concepts. Featuring clear explanations, excellent graphics and examples from all over the world, this program introduces the classic concepts of microeconomics in an engaging and thought-provoking way.

MONEY AND SPEED: INSIDE THE FLASH CRASH

On May 6, 2010, the Dow Jones took a dramatic nosedive but recovered 20 minutes later. Now known as the 2010 Flash Crash, the incident left financial players and Wall Street commentators agape. What triggered the economic tsunami, and could it happen again? In this program a data analyst, a fund manager, and others explain the computerized trading that precipitated the historic Flash Crash. Mathematician Paul Wilmott is wary of this algorithmic method that replaces human decision-making, while fund manager Rishi Narang supports it. The video includes commentary from computer-historian George Dyson and from Gregg Berman, the SEC regulator who led the investigation into the Flash Crash.

EDUCATION

QUIET REVOLUTION, A: SINGAPORE'S WORLD CLASS EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM

Many say Singapore has the best education system in the world. This film shows how this system has produced such amazing results and how it differs from the educational philosophy as practiced here in the United States.? The system acknowledges that not everyone is "college material" and steers students into the appropriate training or educational course.

The film follows the inspiring stories of two Singaporean school children facing the highest stakes exam of their lives - the primary school leaving exam, or PSLE. It determines where you go to secondary school - and in credential-driven Singaporean society, it is a grade that stays with you for life. We see the hard studies, the tears, the testing grind, the passes and the failures - and learn the surprising way success-driven Singapore handles academic failure -- in a country where the 'Tiger' mom or dad is nothing new. This is an in-depth look at high-stakes testing - and how it affects the lives and psyches of the children.

ELEMENTS OF LANGUAGE

WORLDS OF ENGLISH: A GLOBAL LANGUAGE

With the whole world now interconnected, speaking English is commonly seen as a fast track to a good future. Students in Beijing spend Friday evenings practicing the lingo at "English corners," and employees of a Bangalore call center work on neutralizing their Indian accents. But in many countries there's concern about a growing divide between those who speak English—a well-off, Europeanized middle class—and those who don't. Not only are socioeconomic barriers erected by its use, but the infiltration of English, some feel, weakens their cultural identity. This program documents the unparalleled success of English while challenging viewers to consider the downside of its spread.

WORLDS OF ENGLISH: FUTURE OF ENGLISH

Day-to-day use of English has impacted local languages everywhere, spawning the growth of variants such as India's Hinglish and Singlish in Singapore. Do these variations undermine language, or do they enrich it? This program examines the emergence of hybrid forms of English and discusses their pros and cons. A push by the Singapore government to promote Standard English was met with fierce, pro-Singlish resistance. And in the European Parliament members objecting to the institute's adoption of "Euro English" believe—as do English-opposers in Africa and Asia—that the language will impart foreign values and ultimately erode what it is that now makes each nation unique.

WORLDS OF ENGLISH: THE RISE OF ENGLISH

How did a language originally spoken in just a small part of the British Isles come to dominate the communication of so many different countries? From its start as a diverse group of Anglo-Saxon dialects and all the way onward to adoption on a global scale, this program tracks the establishment of English as the world's common tongue. English crossed the sea by means of settlement, trade, and colonialism, yet when British empires crumbled the language gained an even stronger foothold outside its native land. In India and Africa it remained as the language of instruction, though not without some opposition, and China by the 1980s went from scorning English as "the language of imperialism" to embracing it.

POWER OF CHOICE, THE: VOLUME 10 - DEPRESSION AND SUICIDE

Featuring Michael Pritchard

This program, which was videotaped in two high schools still reverberating from recent suicides, presents a clear minded look at what to do if you or someone you care about is at risk. Host Michael Pritchard and teens in Phoenix and South Bend, Indiana identify the signs frequently exhibited by people who are at risk for suicide and discuss the recommended procedures for intervening. In addition, they examine ways of coping with the depression and stress that often leads to suicide, and encourage people to ask for help when they feel themselves at risk. As one student emphatically puts it, "Suicide is a permanent solution to a temporary problem."

Objectives: To sensitize young people to some of the warning signs of suicide. To provide some guidelines for how to respond to a potential suicide victim. To suggest ways of getting help when they, or someone they care about, is at risk.

ENVIRONMENT

TAR CREEK

Directed by Matt Myers

Tells the incredible story of the Tar Creek Superfund site in NE Oklahoma and the massive and deadly remains left by the lead and zinc mines there.

TAR CREEK is the story of the worst environmental disaster you've never heard of: the Tar Creek Superfund site. Once one of the largest lead and zinc mines on the planet, Tar Creek is now home to more than 40 square miles of environmental devastation in northeastern Oklahoma: acid mine water in the creeks, stratospheric lead poisoning in the children, and sinkholes that melt backyards and ball fields.

Now, almost 30 years after being designated for federal cleanup by the Superfund program, Tar Creek residents are still fighting for decontamination, environmental justice, and ultimately, the buyout and relocation of their homes to safer ground. As TAR CREEK reveals, America's Superfund sites aren't just environmental wastelands; they're community tragedies, too...until the community fights back.

TROPICAL STORMS AND FLOODING IN BANGLADESH: FLOODING IN BANGLADESH - CAUSES, IMPACTS, AND MANAGEMENT

Taking viewers deep inside a devastated landscape, this program examines physical forces directly tied to flooding in Bangladesh as well as the broader causes of such disasters, including climate change. It also explores the social, economic, and environmental impact of intense flooding through the personal accounts of people living by major rivers and on Bangladesh's char lands, areas built up from river sediment. Examples of flood management strategies are explored, with a look at the pros and cons of hard and soft engineering. Additionally, the film shows how NGOs are working with flood-affected communities to reduce the developing world's vulnerability to future floods.

TROPICAL STORMS AND FLOODING IN BANGLADESH: TROPICAL STORMS - BANGLADESH'S CYCLONE AILA

With extraordinary footage shot during and after Severe Cyclonic Storm Aila, this program looks at the causes and effects of the violent weather event in Bangladesh. Viewers learn how cyclones take shape and develop, witness scenes of Aila striking coastal areas, and explore the social, economic, and ecological consequences through expert commentary and first-hand accounts. The film returns to specific areas a year after the storm and provides examples of how NGOs and government agencies are working together to reduce both the short- and long-term impact of cyclones through better monitoring, predictions, preparation, disaster relief, and poverty alleviation strategies. Eye-catching graphics help explain scientific concepts.

LANGUAGES LOST AND FOUND: SPEAKING & WHISTLING THE MAMMA TONGUE

By Iris Brooks and Jon H. Davis; Narrated by William Hurt; Music by John McDowell

This richly illustrated short film celebrates diverse linguistic and cultural practices from around the world. In footage spanning five continents – from rainforest longhouses in Borneo to dramatic mountaintops in the Canary Islands—dynamic visions of art, music and dance are woven into a vivid global mosaic.

It makes the point that the way we think, speak, and express our ideas is a reflection of our language. The film reminds us of how quickly some languages are disappearing while introducing the native tongue as an all-important vehicle for maintaining culture, sharing traditional wisdom, and envisioning the future.

Review

- "...tells the story of linguistic diversity and language endangerment. Whether in Palauan, Inuktitut, Kichwa or the birdlike whistles of Silbo Gomero, the melody of this cultural collage is soul-piercing: if we lose our mother tongue, we may lose the essence of who we are." - Juliette Blevins, Dir., Endangered Language Initiative, CUNY Graduate Center

EUROPE

LUXEMBOURG: THE FAILED TAKEOVER

By Willy Perelsztejn; Directed by Claude Lahr

The invasion of the Grand-Duchy of Luxembourg by the German army in 1940 marked the beginning of a long ordeal for the Luxembourg people. For more than four years, the country was occupied by the Nazis, who were eager to destroy the country's independence and integrate the Grand-Duchy into the Reich.

The Luxembourgers had to be 'Germanised' by force. An entire nation saw itself exposed to merciless oppression. Those defending themselves in the name of freedom were jeopardising their lives as well as those of their loved ones. Nonetheless, resistance to the Nazi invaders kept strengthening throughout the years of occupation, thereby compelling the Germans to resort to ever more radical means.

The history of the Grand-Duchy under Nazi subjugation has left Luxembourg society profoundly scarred. Indeed, not all Luxembourgers were hostile to the Nazis. Some actively collaborated with the enemy not stopping short of betraying their compatriots. Conversely, a handful of men and women made a far from obvious choice, and one that still commands respect: that of orchestrating acts of resistance.

The majority of Luxembourgers eventually rejected an annexation to Nazi Germany, causing the attempt to assimilate Luxembourg into the Third Reich to backfire. The German occupation of Luxembourg, more than any other period, fostered awareness on the part of the population of their true national identity. The emotional backbone of the film rests on the many testimonies of the people who lived through that tragic period: those who took part in the only general strike ever organised against the Nazi occupant, those who were enlisted into the German army and were forced to fight their allies on the Russian front, those who joined the resistance groups. The witnesses are Luxembourgers that were personally as well as directly involved in the events they are relating. An important addition to films about the Second World War.

VILLAGE WITHOUT WOMEN: SEARCHING FOR A WIFE IN RURAL SERBIA

By Srdjan Sarenac

This raucous yet poignant documentary takes us into the lives of three Serbian brothers who are without wives in a remote mountain village of eight inhabitants, all of them single men. Their broken-down house with an earthen floor has no running water, a rickety outhouse, a living room whose walls are covered with Playboy-type pictures, and one bedroom shared by all three men. While Zoran, the eldest, dreams of marrying, he fails to convince a Serbian woman to share this primitive lifestyle.

In nearby Albania there is a surplus of women, and Zoran is willing to pay a matchmaker for the opportunity to meet a group of unattached Albanian women. But at the rendezvous dinner it is obvious that these ladies are not the marrying kind. They certainly would not relish being partnered with a man who may really be looking for a housekeeper. And a further problem is that the scars left by the war in Kosovo makes it difficult for his youngest brother to consider welcoming a former "enemy." Zoran has the opportunity to extend the olive branch to the opponent. Will Zoran's attempt be fruitful? Can he fulfill his dream and renew hope in his village? Filmed with an ironic sense of humor, Village Without Women is a must-see for Anthropology, Gender Studies and Eastern Europe Studies.

ASSESSMENT OF PHYSICAL ACTIVITY AND INACTIVITY USING WEARABLE MONITORS: PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE DIRECTIONS

By Patty Freedson

Assessment of Physical Activity and Inactivity Using Wearable Monitors: Past, Present, and Future Directions features a presentation made in memory of one of ACSM past-presidents and one of the most prominent figures in the development of sports medicine and exercise science in America—D. Bruce Dill. The DVD provides a historical overview of the use of wearable monitors to effectively monitor physical activity. With regard to wearable monitors, the DVD looks at both the past (how lab calibrations began; limitations of cut-point methods) and the present (solutions using machine learning/pattern recognition); current tools; sedentary behavior assessment, as well as the future (what is in the pipeline; next steps).

HERITAGE FAMILY STUDY, THE: AN OVERVIEW AND SELECTED RESULTS

By Jack H. Wilmore

The Heritage Family Study: An Overview and Selected Results provides a review of a major investigative undertaking that explored the genetic basis (markers) of changes in risk factors for coronary disease, diabetes, hypertension, and other diseases that occur as the result of exercise (20 weeks of aerobic endurance training). Ongoing for a number of years and featuring five of the most renowned medical and exercise science professionals in the world, the study looked at both the familiar resemblances in the research subjects' responses to training and the genes responsible for human variation in these responses to training. The DVD presents a summary of selected results from the study and offers a perspective on the possible relevance on the health of individuals.

Among the topics covered:

- Background information
- Study design
- Selected results

REGULAR TO RIPPED: HIGH INTENSITY INTERVAL TRAINING

By Michael Bracko, Laura J. Kruskall, Heather Chambliss, John P. DiFiori

High Intensity Interval Training (HIIT) is the newest and most exciting workout in the fitness industry. Although employed for decades by athletes, it has become one of the most popular forms of exercise for "fitness-athletes". Regular to Ripped: High Intensity Interval Training details some of the most popular HIIT programs, as well as an applied review of the numerous research studies on the benefits and risks of HIIT. The DVD explores what HIIT can do for exercisers as it relates to caloric expenditure, resting metabolic rate, weight loss, and fitness benefits. The DVD also features a panel discussion by Summit faculty who discuss the pros and cons of HIIT from their perspective.

FIBER OPTIC TRAINING

STAFF DEVELOPMENT: FIBER OPTIC ACTIVE DEVICES

Electronics play an important role in all fiber optic systems because they provide an interface between the optical fiber and transmission equipment. Many of these components contain both optical and electronic elements, and are thus called "optoelectronic". Electro-optic components fall into two broad categories: devices that convert signals between optical and electrical formats, such as transmitters and receivers; and devices that manipulate light but are powered or controlled by electronic circuits, such as optical amplifiers and modulators. Active devices are electronic components made up of semiconductor materials that actively manipulate electrons to perform the intended function. They require a source of energy to operate and have an output that is a function of present and past input signals. Types of active devices include controlled power supplies, transistors, light sources, amplifiers, and transmitters. This DVD examines the wide array of active devices that are available for fiber optic communications systems, as well as related topics such as thermal noise, loss budgets, optical sub-assemblies, component and system analysis and bit error rate testing.

Topics:

- The theory and fundamentals of electro-optical components.
- Optical sources, such as LEDs, VCSELs, laser diodes, and optical amplifiers.
- PIN, PIN-FET and APD detectors and their application in opto-electronic systems.
- Transmitters and receivers, and how active components are manufactured, integrated, and tested.
- Design and packaging for active optical components, and the roles of sources, detectors, transimpedance amplifiers, clock and data recovery, mux/demux, heat sinks and transponders.
- Transceiver modules, such as TOSA, ROSA, MSA, XENPACK, X2, XPAK, SPF, and XFP.
- How to employ test equipment with active devices to verify performance, quality and operation, and to characterize components.

STAFF DEVELOPMENT: FIBER OPTIC PASSIVE DEVICES

This DVD is for those who wish to learn about the passive devices, components, and optical sub-assemblies used in fiber optic communication systems. The content examines WDM devices, optical switches, filters, gratings, isolators, wavelength lockers, dispersion compensators, circulators, and many others.

This DVD serves as a primer on the various types of passive devices that have been developed for use in fiber optic communication systems. Fiber optic passive devices are purely optical instruments that work by guiding, refracting and reflecting light. Considered a cost-effective alternative to electro-optical components, these devices have become commonplace and are seeing wide use as components and optical sub-assemblies in communication systems.

The DVD's individual chapters will detail the theory, manufacture and employment of various passive components and optical sub-assemblies, including an in-depth look at the technology and products used in wide, coarse and dense wavelength division multiplexing. Later chapters discuss the evolution of optical add/drop multiplexing as well as testing and test equipment for passive components.

FINANCE, ACCOUNTING AND TAXATION

MONEY AND SPEED: INSIDE THE FLASH CRASH

On May 6, 2010, the Dow Jones took a dramatic nosedive but recovered 20 minutes later. Now known as the 2010 Flash Crash, the incident left financial players and Wall Street commentators agape. What triggered the economic tsunami, and could it happen again? In this program a data analyst, a fund manager, and others explain the computerized trading that precipitated the historic Flash Crash. Mathematician Paul Wilmott is wary of this algorithmic method that replaces human decision-making, while fund manager Rishi Narang supports it. The video includes commentary from computer-historian George Dyson and from Gregg Berman, the SEC regulator who led the investigation into the Flash Crash.

FRENCH

LES FETES EN FRANCE

France's long and colourful history has provided the French people with many reasons to celebrate. In the French calendar we see religious festivals, political revolutions and relics of ancient pagan rituals right throughout the year. Filmed entirely in France, in the French language (with the option of French subtitles), this exciting program explores five of the most significant of these celebrations – Paques, Les Fetes de Rois, Poisson d'avril, La Fete Nationale and Noel. It addresses the importance of cultural awareness in learning a language, and enables us to recognise shared traditions as we see social interactions in diverse contexts.

UNE JOURNEE A PARIS

In this charming program we join Sophie and Pierre as they spend a day in Paris visiting some world famous monuments – the Louvre, Arc de Triomphe, Eiffel Tower and Notre Dame. They take a Batobus on the Seine and walk the renowned Champs Elysees, stopping for lunch at an outdoor cafe. Throughout the program we see simple French at work in practical situations, with the option of displaying French subtitles. Through these experiences, we learn the importance of prior knowledge when interpreting meaning and deducing meaning from context. There is a strong focus on the interdependence of language and culture.

GAY AND LESBIAN

COMING OUT

A youth produced program about heterosexism and homophobia.

Have you ever wondered what it would be like if straight people had to "come out" in a gay world? "Coming Out", a youth-produced DVD, turns normal expectations upside down, and deftly illuminates the impact of heterosexism and homophobia on the identities of queer youth. The DVD was produced by a team of queer and straight young women as part of the Reel Grrls program which partners teen girls with women media professionals who teach them digital filmmaking in order to create self-affirming media images about teen identity. As the video was conceived and produced by teens it is a fresh and humorous approach that encourages audiences to examine previous held prejudices in a clever and non-threatening manner.

GENDER AND SEXUALITY

ME, MY SEX, AND I: DISORDERS OF SEXUAL DEVELOPMENT

Deeply ingrained assumptions hold that every person should be designated either male or female, but some experts are now questioning whether that is correct. This program tells the stories of people born with ambiguous genitalia or what has often been called "intersex" anatomy. It is a condition long shrouded in shame and secrecy, even though DSDs (disorders of sexual development) are estimated to be as common as twins or red hair, appearing in almost one in 50 births. Viewers are presented with powerful insights from people living with DSDs and from medical professionals at the forefront of the issue, including clinical psychologist Tiger Devore, whose own sex was ambiguous at birth.

MEN AND MASCULINITY: MEN AND DEPRESSION

With Fredric E. Rabinowitz, PhD

Fredric E. Rabinowitz demonstrates the "deepening psychotherapy" approach with men, integrating a psychodynamic developmental perspective with a gender role strain perspective.

Dr. Rabinowitz works with a young man who shows characteristics of masked depression, in which the symptoms of depression are obscured to some degree but perceptible just beneath the surface of the patient's affect. With the use of empathy, along with asking questions and reflecting, Dr. Rabinowitz draws out the underlying sadness, anger, and feelings of emptiness related to the client's early life experiences.

THREE APPROACHES TO PSYCHOTHERAPY WITH A FEMALE CLIENT: THE NEXT GENERATION

With Judith S. Beck, PhD; Leslie S. Greenberg, PhD; and Nancy McWilliams, PhD
Hosted by Jon Carlson, PsyD, EdD and Gary R. VandenBos, PhD

In Three Approaches to Psychotherapy With a Female Client — The Next Generation, three leading therapists demonstrate three different therapeutic orientations with a single client.

Inspired by the original "Three Approaches to Psychotherapy" video, which featured three pioneering therapists working with client "Gloria," this DVD revisits the original program concept with presentations of cognitive therapy with Judith S. Beck, emotion-focused therapy with Leslie S. Greenberg, and psychodynamic therapy with Nancy McWilliams. Beck, Greenberg, and McWilliams define and illustrate their individual approaches, engage in a roundtable discussion about their work, and provide voiceover commentary for their respective sessions.

This spirited presentation demonstrates the shared features and key differences of contemporary therapeutic approaches, allowing the viewer a chance to compare and contrast the techniques and qualities of three master psychotherapists.

GENERAL BIOLOGY

GENE CODE, THE: THE BOOK OF LIFE - GENETICS AND EVOLUTION

Likening the beauty and complexity of DNA to an epic poem, this program revolves around the idea that we all carry the story of life on Earth in our genes, and that the similarities between species may play a more significant role in that story than previously thought. A visit to Iceland's hot springs reveals heat-, acid-, and salt-resistant organisms called Archaea—primordial versions of which may have set the stage for multi-cellular life. Moving to more advanced species, the film looks at bone-development genes in boa constrictors that are comparable to those of humans. Such parallels, the program says, indicate not only shared genetic origins but also the notion that particular clusters of genes are focal points of evolutionary importance.

GENE CODE, THE: UNLOCKING THE CODE - GENETICS AND MEDICINE

Although the impact of genetic research on human life is an ever-changing and often theoretical prospect, our current knowledge of the human genome already has direct, real-world applications. This program looks at several ways in which genetic breakthroughs have improved health care technology and enriched the study of human physiology. Case studies focus on DNA screening and its benefits—for both parents and children—in identifying hereditary problems, such as Duchenne muscular dystrophy, Huntington's disease, and congenital and developmental abnormalities. The film also explores implications for type-2 diabetes, the complex area of multifactorial genetic disorders, the chain termination method of DNA sequencing, and more.

GEOGRAPHY

HAWAII: ROOTS OF FIRE

Directed by Diane LaMacchia and Doug Prose

HAWAII: ROOTS OF FIRE is a new documentary about the hidden forces that drive the planet's largest and most active volcanic system, the Hawaiian Islands.

The film follows earth scientists as they work among the volcanoes of the Big Island Hawaii, pursuing clues and compiling evidence in a quest to shed light on the mysterious inner-Earth process that has been producing giant volcanoes in the middle of the Pacific Ocean for more than 75 million years.

Scientists have long been puzzled over the source of the huge quantities of lava erupting out of Hawaii's massive volcanoes. Does the lava come from just below the Earth's crust? Or does it come from much deeper, perhaps even as far down as the Earth's core, some 1,800 miles below the surface?

The film focuses on an international team of scientists who take on these key questions with a major drilling project into the flanks of Mauna Kea, Hawaii's tallest volcano.

After years of painstaking research, startling new discoveries are made. Not only have the scientists determined where the lava is coming from, but they have solved other long-standing mysteries about the workings of Hawaii's magnificent volcanoes.

This project was funded by the National Science Foundation Continental Dynamics and Informal Science Education Programs.

DINOSAURS: A HORIZON GUIDE

Using the fragmentary fossil record and other scientific data, paleontologists have succeeded quite brilliantly in reconstructing the dinosaurs' long-ago world, providing insights into their appearance, behavior, diet, environment, and ultimate fate—all of which have significant implications for the ongoing evolution of humankind. Sifting through the Horizon archive, this program examines the extraordinary finds and chance discoveries, technological innovations, and revolutionary thinking that have kept paleontology in a constant state of evolution.

GLOBALIZATION AND GLOBAL ISSUES

CHINATOWN: AN ATTEMPT AT GLOBALIZATION IN SWEDEN

By Ronja Yu

Kalmar is a small town in the south of Sweden, facing problems of unemployment and a dwindling population. It really needed an economic boost. The local authorities signed an agreement with ambitious Chinese businessman Luo Jingxing, who planned to set up a commercial center in Kalmar. Here is an ideal globalization project, that unfortunately did not work out as envisioned. This amusing and relevant film shows the problems that emerge when the tigers of the developing world try to expand into Europe

The inhabitants of Kalmar prepare happily to receive their new neighbors. But the Chinese construction workers are told by their boss "you don't spit on the ground in Sweden." There's the strict Swedish Health and Safety Inspectorate, which clashes with the Chinese desire to get things done fast. Swedish safety officers will not allow the Chinese to work without the proper work shoes. The workers laugh with bemusement. The Chinese wanted to start building before getting their permits. The project pitted Chinese raw capitalism against Swedish bureaucracy. In the end, the center failed, money disappeared, and both sides lost out. The harsh reality of the cultural clash defeated this vision of globalization.

GODS OF RICE, THE

By Galen Yeo

Through the eyes of an anthropologist this beautifully produced film explores the rich culture of rice, still the basis of survival for most people throughout the world.

In the central Philippines lies a village where its indigenous people have lived among their rice terraces for over 2,000 years. If placed end to end, the rice terraces would circle nearly half the globe. In Bali, the Subak water temples foster a unique blend of technological efficiency and religious ritual that together create a perfect ecological balance.

A growing problem, however, is that the world will soon run short of the free land required to grow enough rice to meet demand. To address this issue, scientists at the International Rice Research Institute are developing rice grains with improved nutritional value. The most successful strain is Golden Rice, called the "Rosetta Stone" of genetically modified crops. This new strain has triggered an ongoing fight between the scientists and the farmers. The scientists, here labelled "The New Gods of Rice," claim that the genetically engineered rice will eliminate disease and poverty. The farmers, in turn, fear the influence of a monopoly owned by biotech companies they worry are looking to drive them out of business. In Thailand, this battle has already begun with the companies patenting their own potent grains, a practice which may change the nature of rice forever.

GOOGLE BABY

Directed by Zippi Brand Frank

Google Baby is a journey across three continents telling the story of the up-and-coming baby production industry in the age of globalization. Doron, an Israeli entrepreneur with a high tech background proposes a new service – baby production. The baby producer (as he introduces himself) provides customers with a turn-key, cost effective solution using outsourcing of the surrogacy element to India as a way to lower prices. The preferred genetic material is selected by the clients and the rest is left in the hands of the producer: sperm and eggs are purchased online and multiple embryos are produced and frozen. Packed in liquid nitrogen, only the embryos that fit the customers' preferences are shipped to India where they are implanted into the wombs of local women. These surrogates are kept in a closed clinic under constant supervision by Dr. Nanya Patel. She sees her participation as sisterly, "one woman helping another." The customers arrive at the end of the nine month pregnancy period to pick up their babies.

In the 60's, the introduction of the contraceptive pill turned sex into an act independent of the risk of pregnancy. Today, technology has turned 'making a baby' into an act independent of sex. Globalization is making "baby producing" affordable – and all one needs is a credit card.

The film raises many issues but the presentation is non-judgmental. Discussions of medical ethics, racism, and exploitation may follow. A valuable addition for women's studies, bioethics, and globalization courses.

Reviews

- "A compelling documentary. An amazingly neutral hand as Ms. Brand Frank deftly avoids the cliches that typically materialize in any journalistic look at atypical reproduction." - The New York Times
- "Will freeing sex and propagation from traditional blood-bound structures like race and family, lead to a new understanding of mankind, or are we just shifting onto another level of racism and colonialism? Brilliantly made, "Google Baby" raises scary questions of our time..." - Docaviv

SOCIAL SCIENCES: WHAT IS ECONOMICS?

A basic function of this program is to demonstrate that economics is indeed a coherent science. The program explains and illustrates the purposes of the discipline, outlines the major types of economic systems and explores the mechanisms, assumptions and values of our own economic system. The program characterizes economics as the science of choosing which of our resources we will use and which of our wants we will satisfy. Students review aspects of traditional economic systems and then examine our own. The program shows how interrelated values and priorities shape the decisions which direct our economy.

GROUP THERAPY

CELEBRATING CULTURAL DIVERSITY: A GROUP FOR FIFTH GRADERS

By Sam Steen, PhD & Sheri Bauman, PhD

Watch this diverse group of children engage in activities and discussions that increase their awareness of their own cultures and their appreciation for differences.

There are so many wonderful activities demonstrated in this video that are easy to learn and implement. One particularly powerful exercise takes place in the third session, when the group begins to directly face the pain of discrimination and ignorance. In this activity, called "Words Hurt," Dr. Bauman reads words which represent hurtful or discriminatory things that many people hear throughout their lifetime. The children are given Styrofoam balls, which represent the inner self, and are asked to insert toothpicks into their "self" when Dr. Bauman reads a hurtful comment that they have heard directed towards them. In this emotional session, we begin to see how prevalent teasing and discrimination are in these young children's lives, and how important it is to offer safe spaces where children can talk about the pain they have experienced, so they can begin to heal from shame and learn to celebrate differences. This comprehensive video will help you create such a space.

By watching this video, you will:

- Learn how to create a therapeutic environment to increase children's awareness and appreciation of multiculturalism.
- Increase your skills in leading and co-leading groups.
- Understand how to facilitate developmentally appropriate activities and discussions that foster reflection.

LEADING GROUPS WITH ADOLESCENTS

By Janice DeLucia-Waack, PhD & Allen Segrist, PhD

In this comprehensive DVD featuring a live, unscripted group with actual high school students, two expert group therapists share their extensive knowledge, making this video a must-see for those new to leading groups as well as for experienced group therapists looking to refine their skills.

One highlight of this video is that it walks the viewer through each stage of a group, giving you a comprehensive understanding of what to do from beginning to end. Beginning with the initial session, you will learn activities to help adolescents get to know each other and become more comfortable in the group, as well as how to talk about ground rules for safety and goal setting.

Then comes the middle stage of the group, in which the focus shifts to skill development and the learning of new behaviors. Here the group explores how thoughts influence feelings, as well as assertiveness skills and incorporating resilience. Finally, learn how to facilitate the termination of a group, which many group therapists would argue is the most important stage. Watch as the group explores what they have learned and how they have helped each other, as they say goodbye and reflect on their time together.

Another bonus to this video is the time the co-leaders and moderator spend reflecting on the group and processing what occurs. This gives the viewer a great degree of insight into the thinking processes of the co-leaders and why they chose specific activities and interventions. The video ends with a lively and candid discussion among the co-leaders and the moderator, in which the group members participate and add their input on how the group was for them.

By watching this video, you will:

- Learn how to create a therapeutic environment for adolescents that is fun and engaging as well as safe and structured.
- Discover techniques that help teens tap into their inner strength and resilience.
- Understand how to facilitate activities and discussions that foster self-discovery and interpersonal learning.

HEALTH

ELECTRIC MIND

By Nadav Harel

Electric Mind is a cutting-edge documentary that takes us to hospitals, research centers and clinics where groundbreaking research is being done on the electricity of brain function as a treatment for depression, bipolar disorder, epilepsy and dystonia.

Through the experiences of several patients being treated with deep brain stimulation (DBS), electrocardiac treatment (ECT) and transcranial magnetic stimulation (TMS), Electric Mind follows the progress of a young girl with epilepsy who is finally able to lead a normal life with her preteen friends -- and without the threat of seizures. We see a mid-career photographer, felled by intense depression, who seems to have been lifted out of its paralyzing effects by a series of deep brain stimulations. Lastly, we're introduced to an elderly woman who finally responds to treatment after enduring many months of inertia during which she could not respond to stimulus or remember any recent history.

Renowned neurologists, psychiatrists and surgeons discuss questions of medical ethics, the brain-body, brain-mind interactions and issues of personal identity. The prospect of manipulating our minds and behavior with machines has captured human imagination for decades. Now recent advances bring the promise of relief to many suffering from brain disorders.

HEALTH CARE AND TREATMENT

JOINT REACTION: HIP REPLACEMENT

TECHNOLOGY GONE AWRY

Ron was an active 76-year-old when he underwent articular surface replacement, or ASR, for one of his hips. Soon after his surgery a lump the size of a grapefruit developed on the side of his leg. Five operations later, he can barely walk. Another case study features Catherine, who had ASR in her early 40s and now suffers from toxic levels of cobalt in her system. Ron and Catherine are among the multitude of patients worldwide facing a painful, uncertain future due to the chromium and cobalt components of ASR. Produced in Australia, this program overviews how the metal-to-metal technology was intended to work and asks much-needed questions about its trial phase—which appears to have been wholly inadequate. Contains graphic surgical imagery.

HEALTHY RELATIONSHIPS

PUT THIS ON THE MAP

An award-winning program about young people and gender identity.

Family, school, and social pressures create educational and health disparities for queer/trans youth, and for those questioning their gender or sexual identity. Yet talking about gender and sexuality diversity in schools and youth-serving organizations can bring up concerns among leadership about liability, community reaction, or saying the wrong thing. These concerns often overshadow the daily repercussions of an inexperienced or inactive faculty or staff.

Research indicates that queer and transgender young people are more than four times as likely to have attempted suicide in the past year than their peers, as well as face an increased risk of harassment at school, drug and alcohol use, and of being the victims of physical violence. Queer and transgender youth are also over-represented in the juvenile justice system and in systems of state care, where policies and practices often don't meet the most basic safeguards. Educators, health providers, service organizations, and state agencies often lack confidence and competency to help or to address structural issues related to gender and sexuality.

ETRUSCAN ODYSSEY: EXPANDING ARCHAEOLOGY

By Rachel Lyon and Christine Intagliata

The mysterious Etruscan civilization dominated the central region of ancient Italy, around what is now the heartland of Tuscany - before and during the Roman dynasties. While the origins of the Etruscans are lost to pre-written history, Etruria is distinguished from other ancient societies through their remarkable culture, which featured unique language, powerful women, arcane religious beliefs, and magnificent art and architecture.

This film documents the work of Dr. P. Gregory Warden and his team as they search the hilltops of Poggio Colia, Italy, for any clues into the mysterious Etruscan civilization. By restoring and cataloguing the cultural artifacts left behind by ancient settlers, modern archaeologists attempt to reconstruct a picture of daily life in Etruria.

Among the issues addressed is what was it like to make the great gold jewels for the ruling families? And to build the complex sarcophagi to hold the remains?

Reviews

- "...a feast of Etruscan art, artifacts and landscapes... a sensitive interpretation by leading excavators of standard Etruscan issues such as origins and disappearance... and the major topic of Etruscan religion." - Nancy de Grummond, Ph.D, Florida State University
- "A fast paced and stunning visual journey through history and material culture of one of Italy's most dynamic civilizations." - Rex Wallace, Prof., Center for Etruscan Studies, University of Massachusetts

LUXEMBOURG: THE FAILED TAKEOVER

By Willy Perelsztejn; Directed by Claude Lahr

The invasion of the Grand-Duchy of Luxembourg by the German army in 1940 marked the beginning of a long ordeal for the Luxembourg people. For more than four years, the country was occupied by the Nazis, who were eager to destroy the country's independence and integrate the Grand-Duchy into the Reich.

The Luxembourgers had to be 'Germanised' by force. An entire nation saw itself exposed to merciless oppression. Those defending themselves in the name of freedom were jeopardising their lives as well as those of their loved ones. Nonetheless, resistance to the Nazi invaders kept strengthening throughout the years of occupation, thereby compelling the Germans to resort to ever more radical means.

The history of the Grand-Duchy under Nazi subjugation has left Luxembourg society profoundly scarred. Indeed, not all Luxembourgers were hostile to the Nazis. Some actively collaborated with the enemy not stopping short of betraying their compatriots. Conversely, a handful of men and women made a far from obvious choice, and one that still commands respect: that of orchestrating acts of resistance.

The majority of Luxembourgers eventually rejected an annexation to Nazi Germany, causing the attempt to assimilate Luxembourg into the Third Reich to backfire. The German occupation of Luxembourg, more than any other period, fostered awareness on the part of the population of their true national identity. The emotional backbone of the film rests on the many testimonies of the people who lived through that tragic period: those who took part in the only general strike ever organised against the Nazi occupant, those who were enlisted into the German army and were forced to fight their allies on the Russian front, those who joined the resistance groups. The witnesses are Luxembourgers that were personally as well as directly involved in the events they are relating. An important addition to films about the Second World War.

MODUS OPERANDI: THE GERMAN OCCUPATION OF BELGIUM

By Willy Perelsztejn; Directed by Hugues Lanneau

From 1942 to 1944, 24,916 Jewish men, women and children were deported from Belgium to Auschwitz. Only 1,206 survived.

Modus Operandi raises and systematically answers the question: How did just a handful of Nazis, with the help, voluntary or unwitting, of the Belgian authorities, bring about their destruction? It covers the sequence of events and different phases that led to the Final Solution, namely:

- The identification of the Jewish population.
- The socio-economic exclusion of the Jews.
- The wearing of the yellow star, starting in June 1942.
- The convocations to 'work in the East' that were sent out by the Association of Jews of Belgium (AJB/VBB) - a body created by the Germans.
- Arrests and raids during August and September 1942.
- Deportations, including deportation of children.
- Rescue actions (notably the Jewish Defense Committee's work).
- Arrests of Jews with Belgian passports, starting in September 1943.
- The Final Solution.

This is a complex story. The film recognizes that the Belgium population was concerned about its own survival which enabled the Nazis to carry out their anti-Jewish policies. Here is an indispensable documentary for an understanding of the tragic events during the Second World War.

WHEN CASTRO SEIZED THE HILTON

By Bente Olav

Picture Conrad Hilton glowing with pride over his new luxury hotel in Havana only to have it taken over soon after opening by Fidel Castro to use as his revolution's headquarters. The Havana Hilton went from being a capitalistic monument to become the main headquarters of Cuban communism. The takeover was one of the strongest symbols of the changes that came to dominate the dramatic developments in Cuba, and its relationship with the US.

Using unique historical archive footage, interviews with people who were there, and exuberant music of the 50's and 60's the film captures an era in a way that history books can not.

WHERE BIRDS DON'T SING: THE RAVENSBRUCK AND SACHSENHAUSEN CONCENTRATION CAMPS

By Rosemarie Reed

Where Birds Don't Sing chronicles the horrifying stories of two concentration camps in the Third Reich, Ravensbruck and Sachsenhausen. Ravensbruck is located in Furstenberg, a quiet town north of Berlin. Not far from the center of the village is a tall, concrete-block building surrounded by barbed wire. This was the largest concentration camp for women in the German Reich.

Sachsenhausen Concentration Camp was located in Oranienburg, also outside Berlin, the first camp to be built after "Reichsfuhrer SS" Heinrich Himmler was put in charge of the German police in July, 1936. It was built to express the world view of the SS in its architecture and to symbolically subdue the prisoners to the absolute power of the SS. It took on a special position in the system of concentration camps when the administrative department responsible for all concentration camps moved from Berlin to Oranienburg. Between 1936 and 1945, more than 200,000 people were imprisoned there. At first the prisoners were political opponents of the National Socialist regime, then came the people declared to be racially or biologically inferior and from 1939 onwards, increasing numbers of citizens from occupied European countries were transported to the camp. We learn how mistreated the prisoners were by their guards. The film ends with a moving reunion of the survivors of both camps.

HOLOCAUST

FINDING KALMAN: A LIFE RECLAIMED

By Roz Jacobs and Laurie Weisman

How will we tell the story of the Holocaust when the survivors are gone?

In this profoundly touching, intergenerational documentary a charismatic Holocaust survivor inspires her family to connect to relatives they could never meet. Focusing on her brother, Kalman, Anna recounts tales of a mischievous boy who tried to escape the Warsaw ghetto with her.

Her daughter, an artist, devours the stories and paints his portrait over and over again. As Kalman's face emerges on canvas, the film travels back and forth in time from archival Warsaw ghetto footage to summers in a Catskills bungalow colony; from vibrant family life before World War II to now.

Four generations grapple differently with their shared history. In spite of parental attempts to shield their children from the horrors, Roz, the artist grew up very close to her mother's pain, understanding it in stages. Maya, an Israeli-born granddaughter expresses her life's passion playing the viola. Performing with Arab and Israeli youth in Daniel Barenboim's West-Eastern Divan Orchestra, she questions why there has to be war when she sees the natural ease of making music with someone defined as her enemy. Maya performs the original music composed for the film. Eleven year-old great-grandson Roy wonders with concern how the members of his generation will understand the Holocaust when it seems like just another story. Anna, the survivor lives with her pain, but is committed to having a good time, too.

As the loving family that grew from two survivors creates art and music and celebrates together, the film shows how four generations find light even in the darkest of places—with a resiliency that moves us to do the same.

HUMAN ANATOMY AND PHYSIOLOGY

GENE CODE, THE: UNLOCKING THE CODE - GENETICS AND MEDICINE

Although the impact of genetic research on human life is an ever-changing and often theoretical prospect, our current knowledge of the human genome already has direct, real-world applications. This program looks at several ways in which genetic breakthroughs have improved health care technology and enriched the study of human physiology. Case studies focus on DNA screening and its benefits—for both parents and children—in identifying hereditary problems, such as Duchenne muscular dystrophy, Huntington's disease, and congenital and developmental abnormalities. The film also explores implications for type-2 diabetes, the complex area of multifactorial genetic disorders, the chain termination method of DNA sequencing, and more.

Julie loves the glorious colors associated with the sound of a rooster crowing, while Mandi remembers phone numbers by their hues. Until John read a newspaper article about synesthesia in later life, he thought that everyone saw the days of the week as various shades of blue. In this program people with synesthesia describe their experiences and perceptions, and the benefits and drawbacks of having a condition in which the barriers between the senses are dissolved. ME, MY SEX, AND I: DISORDERS OF SEXUAL DEVELOPMENT

Deeply ingrained assumptions hold that every person should be designated either male or female, but some experts are now questioning whether that is correct. This program tells the stories of people born with ambiguous genitalia or what has often been called "intersex" anatomy. It is a condition long shrouded in shame and secrecy, even though DSDs (disorders of sexual development) are estimated to be as common as twins or red hair, appearing in almost one in 50 births. Viewers are presented with powerful insights from people living with DSDs and from medical professionals at the forefront of the issue, including clinical psychologist Tiger Devore, whose own sex was ambiguous at birth.

HUMAN COMMUNICATION

WORLDS OF ENGLISH: A GLOBAL LANGUAGE

With the whole world now interconnected, speaking English is commonly seen as a fast track to a good future. Students in Beijing spend Friday evenings practicing the lingo at "English corners," and employees of a Bangalore call center work on neutralizing their Indian accents. But in many countries there's concern about a growing divide between those who speak English—a well-off, Europeanized middle class—and those who don't. Not only are socioeconomic barriers erected by its use, but the infiltration of English, some feel, weakens their cultural identity. This program documents the unparalleled success of English while challenging viewers to consider the downside of its spread.

WORLDS OF ENGLISH: FUTURE OF ENGLISH

Day-to-day use of English has impacted local languages everywhere, spawning the growth of variants such as India's Hinglish and Singlish in Singapore. Do these variations undermine language, or do they enrich it? This program examines the emergence of hybrid forms of English and discusses their pros and cons. A push by the Singapore government to promote Standard English was met with fierce, pro-Singlish resistance. And in the European Parliament members objecting to the institute's adoption of "Euro English" believe—as do English-opposers in Africa and Asia—that the language will impart foreign values and ultimately erode what it is that now makes each nation unique.

WORLDS OF ENGLISH: THE RISE OF ENGLISH

How did a language originally spoken in just a small part of the British Isles come to dominate the communication of so many different countries? From its start as a diverse group of Anglo-Saxon dialects and all the way onward to adoption on a global scale, this program tracks the establishment of English as the world's common tongue. English crossed the sea by means of settlement, trade, and colonialism, yet when British empires crumbled the language gained an even stronger foothold outside its native land. In India and Africa it remained as the language of instruction, though not without some opposition, and China by the 1980s went from scorning English as "the language of imperialism" to embracing it.

BLOOD IN THE MOBILE: MINING IN THE CONGO

By Frank Piasecki Poulsen

We all love our mobile phones. They connect us to our family and friends. But they also connect us with the Democratic Republic of Congo, one of the most dangerous places on earth. Inside our mobile phones are illegally mined minerals, minerals that fuel conflict, create child slavery, and support other severe human rights abuses in the Congo.

This riveting documentary reveals a mineral trade plagued with violence and human exploitation. The director takes on the Congolese military and corrupt warlords with barnstorming bravado to gain access to Bisie, a militia-controlled slave mine that produces cassiterite, a tin oxide used in cell phones. As many as 25,000 captive workers live there in unimaginable squalor and fear.

He takes his findings back to the Finnish mobile phone giant Nokia, a company that nets up to $1.6 billion in profits annually. His hope is that Nokia will stand behind its claim that "Sustainability is in everything we do." But Nokia refuses to acknowledge "blood" minerals are used in the manufacture of cellphones. Blood in the Mobile is a film about about human courage, and about hope and the search for solutions.

Reviews

- "Blood in the Mobile brings to light important issues to consider in our race for connectivity." - Heather Haynes, programmer, Hot Docs

- "A disturbing film depicts the high price in African blood paid for the convenience of cell phones, as well as the relative indifference of big corporations that do not know—or at least do not care—where their raw materials come from".

IMMIGRATION

MINUTEMEN, THE: VIGILANTES AT THE BORDER

Directed by: Corey Wascinski

Aggravated by the influx of undocumented immigrants and fed up with the lack of government involvement, the Minutemen positioned themselves along the U.S. / Mexico border. Armed, energetic, and bound by common ideals, they are a diverse, often fragmented group of disillusioned freedom fighters led by a modern day Don Quixote "Lil' Dog" and his four legged companion "Freckles".

Zealous and often comical, these subjects exist in what many believe to be the realm of vigilantism. This cinema verite documentary follows nine of these eccentric, self-appointed watchdogs as they fight to regain their sovereignty as well as their own sanity in an isolated and dangerous landscape. Filmed over the course of four years, we examine the motivations of and relationships between these conflicted patriots.

Reviews

- "Regardless of your political beliefs, you can embrace The Minutemen movie as an indie film upholding the honored tradition of independent filmmaking... Wascinski does not cave in to political orthodoxy." - Stewart Nusbaumer, Huffington Post
- "A strong verite film that challenges our perceptions of a controversial issue. The film catalyzes us to consider the meaning of patriotism, immigration and freedom." - Roger Ebert, Sun Times

WHERE WE LIVE: IRAQI EXILES IN AMERICA

By Fady Hadid

Iraqi-born Fady Hadid tries to find an exiled family to film in a suburb of San Diego, one of the largest communities of Iraqi refugees in the United States. Almost all are afraid to speak with him, fearing for their families back at home. Finally the Hamad family steps forward, and a touching portrait emerges of hope for life in the new country along with longing for the old country and the life left behind.

Raed, the family's patriarch, had lived in Iraq with his five brothers under one roof. Now he doesn't know for sure who survived the war.

He fixes cars for Arabic-speaking customers and hopes to have his own shop some day. Rana, his wife, cares for their three children, while struggling to learn English. She fights homesickness with her optimism for a better life for her children.

The Hamad family faces the same problems as other refugee groups in America. For an American audience there is an added dimension. Here are refugees of a conflict in which the U.S. is so intimately involved; a conflict that divided our own country.

JOB SEARCH SKILLS

COMMON JOB INTERVIEW MISTAKES: WHAT NOT TO SAY OR DO

It's true that a jobseeker needs to stand out from the crowd—but there are good and bad ways to do that! Having all the right credentials and experience doesn't count for much if a candidate comes off as unprepared, unmotivated, and unprofessional in an interview. This video shows how to avoid that fate with concrete advice from experts, eye-catching graphics that reinforce core concepts, and clear-cut dramatizations that illustrate interview dos and don'ts. For newcomers to the job market, a firm grasp of the "don'ts" definitely comes in handy—after all, young people may not realize they should turn off their cell phones before an interview or refrain from asking too early about the position's salary. From tips on ensuring punctuality to strategies for giving the most positive, team-oriented impression possible, this is a first-rate informational resource for employment counseling and business education.

DISABILITIES AT WORK: SUCCESSFUL JOB HUNTING FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES - SMART RESUMES AND APPLICATIONS FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES

For anyone who thinks "disabled" means "unemployable," this video quickly dispels that myth and shows how to begin the job-hunting process by identifying skills, strengths, and interests. Viewers are provided with a basic explanation of the Americans with Disabilities Act and its guarantees of equal opportunity, as well as an overview of the kinds of companies and organizations that often take the lead in hiring disabled applicants. Other major topics include creating a self-assessment or profile of talents and abilities, setting up informational interviews, developing online and personal networks, and examining the possibilities of self-employment.

DISABILITIES AT WORK: SUCCESSFUL JOB HUNTING FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES

Job interviews are stressful for everybody, and maybe even more so for people with disabilities. But they don't have to be. This video shows how to turn an interview into a self-selling opportunity that focuses on what a disabled candidate can do, no matter how obvious his or her physical limitations might be. Offering detailed pointers on preparing for an interview, including ways to project confidence and a positive attitude, the program also suggests approaching an interview as a chance to dispel stereotypes and improve a prospective employer's understanding of disabilities. Ways to respond effectively to frequently asked questions—some appropriate, some illegal, all of them challenging—are presented along with a helpful discussion of how to follow up after an interview.

DISABILITIES AT WORK: SUCCESSFUL JOB HUNTING FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES - SMART RESUMES AND APPLICATIONS FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES

A resume must be impressive. But for people with disabilities, there's always an extra concern. At what stage of the process should the disability be mentioned—in the resume? On an application? Is it better to wait until a face-to-face interview? While there's no easy answer, this video helps job seekers sift through the many challenges and decisions of completing resumes, cover letters, references, and applications. Illustrating the differences between chronological, functional, and combination resumes, as well as the specific uses of a targeted resume, the program explains why a candidate with a disability might choose one type or another and explores ways to submit an application package that is positive, professional, and proactive.

TITANS: HERB KELLEHER

Southwest Airlines began as an obscure Texas company and grew into an industry giant—eventually flying more than a quarter of a million passengers around the U.S. on any given day. Profiles Herb Kelleher, the co-founder and former CEO of Southwest and by many accounts still its heart and soul, thanks to his "emeritus" status. Viewers learn how Kelleher grew the company from a small regional carrier with just four jets into an industry leader with a business model based on low fares, a no-frills aesthetic, and service that gave passengers "freedom to fly." A straight-talking iconoclast, Kelleher is reportedly adored by Southwest employees and respected on Wall Street. Furthermore, Southwest has an astounding 38 consecutive years of profitability, a record no other US airline can touch.

LATIN AMERICA AND THE CARIBBEAN

CITIES ON SPEED - BOGOTA: IMPROVING CIVIC BEHAVIOR

By Danish Radio

Soon more than 550 cities world wide will have a population of more than one million. In 2030 eighty percent of the world's population will live in cities. Megacities have traditionally been economic and political power centers but today the fastest growing cities are in developing nations.

The new challenge is that cities are growing helter skelter rather than planned. There is an acute need for new models of city planning to prevent collapses under such huge social, economic and environmental pressure. If cities are to remain livable, the problems of population increase must be understood and dealt with. Cities on Speed shows how four different megacities are dealing with this challenge. What are the visions and the solutions and how do they affect the inhabitants?

In the early 90s, Bogota was a city with big problems: Social inequality, pollution, out-of-control population growth and poor public transportation. Kidnappings were the order of the day and the city had the world's highest homicide rates. But unlike other poor megacities, Bogota found a solution: In 1993, Antanas Mockus, a university president, became mayor and turned the city into one big social experiment. Under his leadership community watch groups were formed, homicides fell 70%, traffic fatalities dropped by over 50%, and many citizens voluntarily paid an extra 10% of taxes!

WHEN CASTRO SEIZED THE HILTON

By Bente Olav

Picture Conrad Hilton glowing with pride over his new luxury hotel in Havana only to have it taken over soon after opening by Fidel Castro to use as his revolution's headquarters. The Havana Hilton went from being a capitalistic monument to become the main headquarters of Cuban communism. The takeover was one of the strongest symbols of the changes that came to dominate the dramatic developments in Cuba, and its relationship with the US.

Using unique historical archive footage, interviews with people who were there, and exuberant music of the 50's and 60's the film captures an era in a way that history books can not.

FORGOTTEN MAN, THE: PRIVATE BRADLEY MANNING AND THE WIKILEAKS CONTROVERSY

While WikiLeaks boss Julian Assange has been cast in some quarters as a heroic champion of free speech, his ongoing expose of US foreign policy would not have been possible without the work of Private Bradley Manning, who is alleged to have handed over hundreds of thousands of secret US war files and diplomatic cables. Reporter Quentin McDermott tells the inside story of Bradley Manning and his daring intelligence heist.

Second only to Julian Assange, Bradley Manning is the most important figure in the WikiLeaks controversy. But, while all eyes are on Assange, Manning is wasting away in solitary confinement. David House is one of the few civilians allowed to visit him. He describes the young soldier's mental deterioration and his struggle to deal with long hours of confinement, "...the US Government is just trying to put immense pressure on him in order to get him to crack open".

GEN Y DECODED: INSIGHTS AND TACTICS FOR LEADERS

With Kit Yarrow

- They're not just young, they're different.
- Why meaningful work may trump salary as a motivator.
- How Gen Y and Boomers can help each other.

Today's young workers are a new breed, thanks to two unique forces in their upbringing. Raised during the self-esteem movement, they are often self-confident and used to attention. And the first generation to grow up with technology, they work fast and expect fast results. In the workforce, they can seem demanding, even disrespectful of authority, especially the occasional "roaring tiger" with an inflated sense of entitlement.

Leaders that adjust their communication styles and expectations will succeed in connecting with and motivating this group. Dr. Yarrow's tips for effectively managing Gen Y include providing context, relevance, and purpose for their work. Give frequent, personal feedback and recognize their unique skills. To counter boredom, stay innovative in practices and technology, provide opportunities for learning, travel, or career development. Perhaps most important, protect your best employees from the roaring tigers.

LITERATURE

STIEG LARSSON'S MILLENNIUM: AS VIEWED BY EVA GABRIELSSON, HIS PARTNER

By Georg Larsen and Stig Bilde

Stieg Larsson's Millennium books (The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo, The Girl Who Played with Fire and The Girl Who Kicked the Hornets' Nest), are selling like hotcakes worldwide. Although they are considered mysteries, Gabrielsson says they are actually fierce social criticism. Films were made of the books in Sweden and currently Hollywood is producing its own versions.

Eva Gabrielsson was Larsson's partner for thirty years. In this film she talks for the first time about his literary intent and about the reality behind his books. She believes the film industry has subverted the original meaning of the books in its attempt to squeeze as much money as possible out of the series. In her opinion, the films have been marketed as action stories instead of "...a critical portrait of women's oppression in a patriarchal society," (specifically as men use sexual violence against women). In this documentary, Gabrielsson is seen working with a Danish theatre company creating a stage version.

BMW: A DRIVING OBSESSION

Reported by award-winning correspondent Carl Quintanilla, this documentary tells the fascinating story of a small, struggling company that transformed itself into a global luxury-car powerhouse—and is now going all-out to maintain its edge. Viewers go inside BMW's secretive Tech Center, where teams of engineers obsess over the smallest of details. The program then profiles BMW's chief designer and explains the fascinating process that starts with a pencil sketch and ends with a new model on the showroom floor. Other segments feature discussions of environmental sustainability and competition from Chinese automakers; a conversation with David Champion, senior director of the Auto Test Division at Consumer Reports, who questions the value of some BMW features; and a journey to the village of Goodwood, England—home to the most precious gem in BMW's crown, the Rolls-Royce.

SISTERS IN ISLAMIC BANKING: FEMALE CEOS AND SHARIA-COMPLIANT FINANCE

Women are still rare at the top rung of the banking industry, both in the West and in the Islamic world. However, a number of Malaysia's Sharia-compliant financial companies offer excellent examples of the glass ceiling cracking. This program follows women who specialize in Islamic finance while forging careers which, in many ways, resemble those of Western career women. Fozia Amanulla discusses her goals and responsibilities as CEO of EON Cap Islamic Bank, while Raja Teh Maimunah, formerly Global Head of Islamic Markets at Bursa Malaysia, talks about her gradual realization of the benefits of Sharia finance. Noripah Kamso, CEO of CIMB-Principal Islamic Asset Management, describes her work with colleagues around the globe—supporting a view shared by all interviewees that Islamic finance will likely expand beyond the margins in non-Muslim markets.

MARRIAGE AND FAMILY THERAPY

RELATIONSHIPS: COGNITIVE-BEHAVIORAL FAMILY THERAPY

With Frank M. Dattilio, PhD, ABPP

When applied to families, the cognitive-behavioral therapeutic approach examines the interactional dynamics of family members and how they contribute to family functioning and dysfunction. In Cognitive-Behavioral Family Therapy, Dr. Frank M. Dattilio demonstrates a single-session intervention with a single mother and her three sons, identifying some of the automatic thoughts and schemas that exist among these family members.

This DVD depicts the manner in which a cognitive-behavioral approach can be addressed within a family structure, with the therapist engaging the family and highlighting issues that involve emotions, beliefs, and behavioral exchange.

OPEN SOURCE REVOLUTION

Once the domain of programmers and tech-savvy hobbyists, open source software has hit the mainstream. How exactly did computer users go from living in a world of purchased programs to a world where many of the most sought after applications are free to use, free to copy, and free to modify? This video traces the open source movement in detail, from its earliest days to the present. Richard Stallman, founder of the Free Software Foundation, is profiled, and open source tools for education and business—Linux, Open Office, Firefox, and GIMP—are discussed.

TRADITIONAL PRINT AND ONLINE ADVERTISING

Where is the best place to spend an advertising budget? Though newspaper circulation is falling, most adults still read the paper, while the popularity of print magazines is increasing, and readership of online media has exploded. This program explains different types of print and digital media formats and the benefits of advertising in each. The relative cost of placing classified and display ads in daily, weekly, and shopper newspapers is compared, along with the marketing difference between buying space in general interest, special interest, regional, and B2B magazines. Online coupons and other advantages of advertising on Web sites is also covered.

WIKIS IN THE CLASSROOM

Web 2.0 technologies, such as wikis, have enabled educators and students to become instant creators of shared online content. This video describes what wikis are and how they can be employed as educational tools at both the school and college level. Benefits of wikis are cited, and the use of wikis within academia and far beyond is covered, with examples ranging from student projects, classroom management, and teacher-to-teacher resource sharing to international cultural exchanges. The video also offers cautionary advice about reliance upon Wikipedia as a primary research source.

MEDIA LITERACY

VALENTINO'S GHOST

Directed by Michael Singh

Shows the way in which the changing image of Arabs and Muslims in the U.S.

media has mirrored America's political agenda in the Middle East.

Valentino's Ghost takes viewers on a chronological journey through more than a century of images of Muslims, Arabs and Islam in the U.S. media, from the early 20th-century fantasies of romantic sheiks to today's damaging stereotypes as evil fanatics. Through interviews with Robert Fisk, Niall Ferguson, and John Mearsheimer amongst others, the film shows the way in which the changing image of Arabs and Muslims has mirrored America's political agenda in the Middle East.

Valentino's Ghost aims to sharpen viewers' media literacy and increase their skills in questioning media representations, especially those of minority groups and people with whom our government is in conflict. The film ends with a report of a few Hollywood films that have provided complex images and avoided ethnic stereotyping.

Reviews

- "An important and informative teaching tool. Comprehensive in its scope, Valentino's Ghost provides the crucial background to enable viewers to put stereotypical representations of Arabs and Muslims in historical context. Rather than simply cataloguing negative portrayals of Arabs and Muslims in U.S. media, it demonstrates how they are shaped by historical and political forces, revealing them to be cultural artifacts of these same forces." - Amira Jarmakani, Associate Professor, Director, Graduate Studies for the Women's Studies Institute, Georgia State University, Author, Imagining Arab Womanhood: The Cultural Mythology of Veils, Harems, and Belly Dancers in the U.S.
- "Stunning for its comprehensiveness, Valentino's Ghost is not only a riveting account of the multiple ways in which American media have framed Arabs, Islam, and Muslims over the past century, but an explanation as to why...If you see the need for change and want a place to start, watch this film to develop your tools." - Louise Cainkar, Assistant Professor of Social and Cultural Sciences, Marquette University, Author, Homeland Security: The Arab American and Muslim American Experience after 9/11

DISABILITIES AT WORK: SUCCESSFUL JOB HUNTING FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES - EFFECTIVE JOB SEARCH FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES

For anyone who thinks "disabled" means "unemployable," this video quickly dispels that myth and shows how to begin the job-hunting process by identifying skills, strengths, and interests. Viewers are provided with a basic explanation of the Americans with Disabilities Act and its guarantees of equal opportunity, as well as an overview of the kinds of companies and organizations that often take the lead in hiring disabled applicants. Other major topics include creating a self-assessment or profile of talents and abilities, setting up informational interviews, developing online and personal networks, and examining the possibilities of self-employment.

DISABILITIES AT WORK: SUCCESSFUL JOB HUNTING FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES - JOB INTERVIEW ESSENTIALS FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES

Job interviews are stressful for everybody, and maybe even more so for people with disabilities. But they don't have to be. This video shows how to turn an interview into a self-selling opportunity that focuses on what a disabled candidate can do, no matter how obvious his or her physical limitations might be. Offering detailed pointers on preparing for an interview, including ways to project confidence and a positive attitude, the program also suggests approaching an interview as a chance to dispel stereotypes and improve a prospective employer's understanding of disabilities. Ways to respond effectively to frequently asked questions—some appropriate, some illegal, all of them challenging—are presented along with a helpful discussion of how to follow up after an interview.

DISABILITIES AT WORK: SUCCESSFUL JOB HUNTING FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES - SMART RESUMES AND APPLICATIONS FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES

A resume must be impressive. But for people with disabilities, there's always an extra concern. At what stage of the process should the disability be mentioned—in the resume? On an application? Is it better to wait until a face-to-face interview? While there's no easy answer, this video helps job seekers sift through the many challenges and decisions of completing resumes, cover letters, references, and applications. Illustrating the differences between chronological, functional, and combination resumes, as well as the specific uses of a targeted resume, the program explains why a candidate with a disability might choose one type or another and explores ways to submit an application package that is positive, professional, and proactive.

MENTAL HEALTH ISSUES

ANXIETY DISORDERS

Humans, like many animals, possess a highly developed sense of danger in our environment. In its most basic form, our awareness of these threats is anxiety. Our 'fight or flight' response can be highly beneficial, but in the 21st Century, this state of anxiety in some people can become a constant state of mind, and a real limitation to a person's ability to function well. In this program we take a comprehensive look at anxiety disorders including generalised anxiety, panic, post traumatic, and obsessive compulsive disorders and phobias. With excellent illustrations and input from leading experts, this is a wide-ranging examination of anxiety today.

CITIES ON SPEED - CAIRO: GARBAGE

By Danish Radio

Soon more than 550 cities world wide will have a population of more than one million. In 2030 eighty percent of the world's population will live in cities. Megacities have traditionally been economic and political power centers but today the fastest growing cities are in developing nations.

The new challenge is that cities are growing helter skelter rather than planned. There is an acute need for new models of city planning to prevent collapses under such huge social, economic and environmental pressure. If cities are to remain livable, the problems of population increase must be understood and dealt with. Cities on Speed shows how four different megacities are dealing with this challenge. What are the visions and the solutions and how do they affect the inhabitants?

Cairo

Previously only 12 million people lived in Cairo and the city was neat and tidy. Today Cairo has a population estimated at 20 million with six giant Garbage Villages that have evolved into towns within the city. Nobody can keep up with the speed at which the city is growing and their garbage piles up in the streets.

LETTERS FROM IRAN

(The voices in this film emerge despite state censorship and repression. Exceptional in a country living in fear, they tell the chronicle of a forbidden Iran.)

While winds of freedom blow through the Arab world, the Iranian youth waits. They were the first to rise up against their leaders in 2009. The first to tweet, Facebook and post YouTube updates, filming the fallout of their failed revolution on camera phones. Now, Iran has closed itself off to the Western press, making it difficult to get the inside story from the outside.

For the past two years, Manin Loiseau has been following a group of Iranians inside Iran. Many lost loved ones or were tortured themselves in the aftermath of the elections. Piecing together interviews, footage from hidden cameras, YouTube clips and more, she paints a vivid portrait of the aftermath of the Green Revolution.

MINDFULNESS AND SPIRITUALITY

SYSTEMS OF

PSYCHOTHERAPY: POSITIVE AND TRANSPERSONAL APPROACHES TO THERAPY

With Roger Walsh, MD, PhD, DHL

In Positive and Transpersonal Approaches to Therapy, Roger Walsh works with a young woman who is questioning her religious faith and related conventional views of religion and spirituality.

In his deeply empathic approach to therapy, Dr. Walsh explores the client's existential and spiritual anxieties and helps her to recognize them as part of a positive developmental process. He also works with her self-condemnation and sense of unworthiness, and enables her to identify her personal strengths, a process which proves deeply meaningful to her.

In addition to exploring existential, spiritual and developmental issues, this demonstration also emphasizes collective social and cultural factors.

MULTICULTURAL

MINUTEMEN, THE: VIGILANTES AT THE BORDER

Directed by: Corey Wascinski

Aggravated by the influx of undocumented immigrants and fed up with the lack of government involvement, the Minutemen positioned themselves along the U.S. / Mexico border. Armed, energetic, and bound by common ideals, they are a diverse, often fragmented group of disillusioned freedom fighters led by a modern day Don Quixote "Lil' Dog" and his four legged companion "Freckles".

Zealous and often comical, these subjects exist in what many believe to be the realm of vigilantism. This cinema verite documentary follows nine of these eccentric, self-appointed watchdogs as they fight to regain their sovereignty as well as their own sanity in an isolated and dangerous landscape. Filmed over the course of four years, we examine the motivations of and relationships between these conflicted patriots.

Reviews

- "Regardless of your political beliefs, you can embrace The Minutemen movie as an indie film upholding the honored tradition of independent filmmaking... Wascinski does not cave in to political orthodoxy." - Stewart Nusbaumer, Huffington Post
- "A strong verite film that challenges our perceptions of a controversial issue. The film catalyzes us to consider the meaning of patriotism, immigration and freedom." - Roger Ebert, Sun Times

RUDY PEREZ - COUNTDOWN: REFLECTIONS ON A LIFE IN DANCE

Directed by Rachel Perez Bitan

For over forty years the choreographer and dancer Rudy Perez has invigorated the dance scene. In the 1960s he was hailed as a postmodern pioneer at the groundbreaking Judson Dance Theater in New York. He garnered critical acclaim for his solos as well as for the choreography he created for his own dance ensembles, which often included unusual humorous elements.

The documentary follows the fascinating rehearsal of one of Perez' signature dances, Countdown with the talented dancer Victor Quijada* in Los Angeles. Throughout the rehearsal process, Rudy's life and career are revealed through evocative home movies, archival videos of his body of work and rare footage of New York in the '50s and '60s. After enduring an impoverished childhood, Perez left his Puerto Rican family at seventeen and began his dance training with the legendary New Dance Group, studying with Martha Graham, Merce Cunningham and Mary Anthony, among others. Included are interviews with dance critics, dancers and collaborators who discuss Perez' impact on the East and West Coast dance scene.

Review

- "'Countdown,' Perez's celebrated 1964 solo -- and the title of an excellent documentary -- is that magical amalgam of music, imagery, atmosphere and powerful movement-suggestion we call drama." - Donna Perlmutter, LA City Beat

WHERE WE LIVE: IRAQI

EXILES IN AMERICA

By Fady Hadid

Iraqi-born Fady Hadid tries to find an exiled family to film in a suburb of San Diego, one of the largest communities of Iraqi refugees in the United States. Almost all are afraid to speak with him, fearing for their families back at home. Finally the Hamad family steps forward, and a touching portrait emerges of hope for life in the new country along with longing for the old country and the life left behind.

Raed, the family's patriarch, had lived in Iraq with his five brothers under one roof. Now he doesn't know for sure who survived the war.

He fixes cars for Arabic-speaking customers and hopes to have his own shop some day. Rana, his wife, cares for their three children, while struggling to learn English. She fights homesickness with her optimism for a better life for her children.

The Hamad family faces the same problems as other refugee groups in America. For an American audience there is an added dimension. Here are refugees of a conflict in which the U.S. is so intimately involved; a conflict that divided our own country.

MULTICULTURAL AWARENESS

BEYOND HATE: THE HEART OF HATRED

This program features conversations with a variety of people who have explored the heart of hatred. A Los Angeles gang member uses hate as a survival weapon. White supremacist leader Tom Metzger defends his policies of hate both in a court of law and in interviews. A former Israeli soldier tells how he disguised himself as a Palestinian in order to better understand the source of his own hatred. High school students in Bensonhurst, New York, discuss the beating death of a black youth in their neighborhood, and Myrlie Evers, wife of assassinated civil rights leader Medgar Evers, talks about her own triumph over hate after her husband's untimely death. A man who physically abused his wife is presented as an example of people who act hatefully when their identity and self-esteem are threatened.

NATURAL RESOURCES

TAR CREEK

Directed by Matt Myers

Tells the incredible story of the Tar Creek Superfund site in NE Oklahoma and the massive and deadly remains left by the lead and zinc mines there.

TAR CREEK is the story of the worst environmental disaster you've never heard of: the Tar Creek Superfund site. Once one of the largest lead and zinc mines on the planet, Tar Creek is now home to more than 40 square miles of environmental devastation in northeastern Oklahoma: acid mine water in the creeks, stratospheric lead poisoning in the children, and sinkholes that melt backyards and ball fields.

Now, almost 30 years after being designated for federal cleanup by the Superfund program, Tar Creek residents are still fighting for decontamination, environmental justice, and ultimately, the buyout and relocation of their homes to safer ground. As TAR CREEK reveals, America's Superfund sites aren't just environmental wastelands; they're community tragedies, too...until the community fights back.

PHOTOGRAPHY

LENS & PENS: ART IN AN UNEXPECTED PLACE

By Deborah J. Schull

This inspiring film tells the story of a poetry, painting, and photography workshop and its profound impact on three people deemed by the criminal justice system 'not guilty by reason of insanity.' Relegated to the John Howard Pavilion—the former maximum-security wing of Washington, DC's, historic St. Elizabeths Hospital—patients Ronnie, Pam, and Kevin are chosen by the social worker Ed Washington to participate in the new program: Lens, Pens, Brushes & Friends.

Ed opens the film's narrative as he expresses his intent that the arts workshop begin to bridge the divide between this treatment population and the outside community. Framed by his recollections of the program's evolution, laced with interviews of Ronnie, Pam, and Kevin and the workshop's three volunteer-teachers (representing poetry, photography, and painting) and graced by footage of the students' artwork, the documentary gives every indication that Ed's hopes will be realized. With public exhibits, performances, and even sales of their art, and with substantial leaps in artistic skill and self-confidence, Ronnie, Pam, and Kevin grow beyond anything they could have imagined—and must now balance a newfound freedom with an uncertain future.

PHYSICAL ANTHROPOLOGY

GENE CODE, THE: THE BOOK OF LIFE - GENETICS AND EVOLUTION

Likening the beauty and complexity of DNA to an epic poem, this program revolves around the idea that we all carry the story of life on Earth in our genes, and that the similarities between species may play a more significant role in that story than previously thought. A visit to Iceland's hot springs reveals heat-, acid-, and salt-resistant organisms called Archaea—primordial versions of which may have set the stage for multi-cellular life. Moving to more advanced species, the film looks at bone-development genes in boa constrictors that are comparable to those of humans. Such parallels, the program says, indicate not only shared genetic origins but also the notion that particular clusters of genes are focal points of evolutionary importance.

GENE CODE, THE: UNLOCKING THE CODE - GENETICS AND MEDICINE

Although the impact of genetic research on human life is an ever-changing and often theoretical prospect, our current knowledge of the human genome already has direct, real-world applications. This program looks at several ways in which genetic breakthroughs have improved health care technology and enriched the study of human physiology. Case studies focus on DNA screening and its benefits—for both parents and children—in identifying hereditary problems, such as Duchenne muscular dystrophy, Huntington's disease, and congenital and developmental abnormalities. The film also explores implications for type-2 diabetes, the complex area of multifactorial genetic disorders, the chain termination method of DNA sequencing, and more.

EVERY CHILD WANTS TO PLAY: SIMPLE AND EFFECTIVE STRATEGIES FOR TEACHING SOCIAL SKILLS

Developed by: Annie Baltazar Mori, OTD, OTR/L, Danette Bonfeld Piantanida, MA, CCC-SLP and Pediatric Therapy Network

Any parent or professional working with children will want to see this DVD and companion workbook to learn practical strategies that help build social skills.

Strategies include those involving visual demonstration and body awareness introducing concepts such as personal space, and verbal strategies such as staying on topic during conversation.

Every Child Wants to Play takes into account the multiple demands placed on a child in social situations. Along with social and emotional skills, children must access language, cognitive, motor and sensory skills for interaction. This DVD and workbook provide a toolbox of effective strategies to help children and their families feel more confident in social situations.

This program is designed to support children ages 4 through 12 years. However, many of the strategies have been adapted for older children through adolescence and young adulthood.

POLITICAL SCIENCE

AMERICAN RENEGADE: CONFESSIONS OF A RADICAL HUMANIST

By Scott Garen

This admiring portrait of an indefatigable social activist weaves through 20th century American history, bringing alive the issues for a new audience.

For 75 years, Abe Osheroff fought on the front lines of social activism - from the battlefields of the Spanish Civil War to the killing fields of Nicaragua, the witch hunts of McCarthy, and the civil rights movement of the sixties. Activist, lover, visionary, renegade, he raged against injustice wherever he found it. A master storyteller, he takes us along on his passionate journey for justice. Abe strikes a resounding chord in today's world with a singular voice that never stops chanting "yes, we can!"

FORGOTTEN MAN, THE: PRIVATE BRADLEY MANNING AND THE WIKILEAKS CONTROVERSY

While WikiLeaks boss Julian Assange has been cast in some quarters as a heroic champion of free speech, his ongoing expose of US foreign policy would not have been possible without the work of Private Bradley Manning, who is alleged to have handed over hundreds of thousands of secret US war files and diplomatic cables. Reporter Quentin McDermott tells the inside story of Bradley Manning and his daring intelligence heist.

Second only to Julian Assange, Bradley Manning is the most important figure in the WikiLeaks controversy. But, while all eyes are on Assange, Manning is wasting away in solitary confinement. David House is one of the few civilians allowed to visit him. He describes the young soldier's mental deterioration and his struggle to deal with long hours of confinement, "...the US Government is just trying to put immense pressure on him in order to get him to crack open".

VALENTINO'S GHOST

Directed by Michael Singh

Shows the way in which the changing image of Arabs and Muslims in the U.S. media has mirrored America's political agenda in the Middle East.

Valentino's Ghost takes viewers on a chronological journey through more than a century of images of Muslims, Arabs and Islam in the U.S. media, from the early 20th-century fantasies of romantic sheiks to today's damaging stereotypes as evil fanatics. Through interviews with Robert Fisk, Niall Ferguson, and John Mearsheimer amongst others, the film shows the way in which the changing image of Arabs and Muslims has mirrored America's political agenda in the Middle East.

Valentino's Ghost aims to sharpen viewers' media literacy and increase their skills in questioning media representations, especially those of minority groups and people with whom our government is in conflict. The film ends with a report of a few Hollywood films that have provided complex images and avoided ethnic stereotyping.

Reviews

- "An important and informative teaching tool. Comprehensive in its scope, Valentino's Ghost provides the crucial background to enable viewers to put stereotypical representations of Arabs and Muslims in historical context. Rather than simply cataloguing negative portrayals of Arabs and Muslims in U.S. media, it demonstrates how they are shaped by historical and political forces, revealing them to be cultural artifacts of these same forces." - Amira Jarmakani, Associate Professor, Director, Graduate Studies for the Women's Studies Institute, Georgia State University, Author, Imagining Arab Womanhood: The Cultural Mythology of Veils, Harems, and Belly Dancers in the U.S.

- "Stunning for its comprehensiveness, Valentino's Ghost is not only a riveting account of the multiple ways in which American media have framed Arabs, Islam, and Muslims over the past century, but an explanation as to why...If you see the need for change and want a place to start, watch this film to develop your tools." - Louise Cainkar, Assistant Professor of Social and Cultural Sciences, Marquette University, Author, Homeland Security: The Arab American and Muslim American Experience after 9/11

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

COLLABORATIVE PLANNING: TRANSFORMING THEORY INTO PRACTICE

DVD 1 - Collaborative Planning: Transforming Theory into Practice

This DVD will provide you with an understanding of the value of collaborative planning and a thorough understanding of the five essential components to an effective collaborative teaming process. Richard Villa, nationally renowned lecturer and author of Creating an Inclusive School and Restructuring for Caring and Effective Education, presents a comprehensive overview of collaboration identifying the history, rationale and elements for its successful implementation in our nation's schools. From research and practice, Villa provides important information about how collaborative teams can function optimally. He visits with teachers engaged in transforming the theory of "collaborative planning" into successful instruction in the classroom. Collaborative teams of teachers are profiled and educators share how they met the many challenges and obstacles that needed to be overcome.

The viewer will learn:

To differentiate instruction through the power of collaborative planning To design collaboration using the P-I-G-S Face Model To identify how research-based theory can be transformed into practice To implement practical strategies that promote collaboration in schools To design inclusive classrooms based on collaborative planning and teaming

DVD 2 - Collaborative Teaching: The Co-Teaching Model

This second DVD in the Collaboration Series provides valuable information in the use of "co-teaching" as an effective instructional and organizational arrangement. Building on the five essential components of collaborative planning detailed in Tape 1, Villa reviews four basic models of "co-teaching":

Supportive Complimentary Parallel Split Team Teaching In addition to observing these models as they function in actual classrooms, you will see Villa as he helps educators address the most common issues and concerns related to implementing collaborative teaching in their schools. Richard Villa shares his expertise based on research and practice of professionals working across the country. Collaborative Teaching provides clear, concise and research-based information that enables educators to meet the challenges that any collaborative process entails.

The viewer will learn:

- To implement four approaches to successful co-teaching (supportive, complementary, parallel, and team teaching)
- To select appropriate strategies to ensure effective co-teaching in inclusive classrooms
- To overcome obstacles that are deterrents to the implementation of co-teaching
- To design co-teaching experiences based on the collaborative teaching model
- To differentiate instruction through the power of co-teaching

SCIENCE OF HUMAN ENERGY FIELDS, A

In this DVD, Dr. Ross explains a proposed new science and medicine that is described in his 2009 book, Human Energy Fields. According to Dr. Ross' theory, the human aura, chi energy, the human spirit and the life force are all traditional, subjective terms for the electromagnetic (EM) field of the body. Just as we measure brainwaves in an EEG or the electrical field of the heart in an EKG, so too we could measure the EM field of the body as a whole in order to detect disease, track treatment and better understand health and elite performance in all areas of life.

Dr. Ross proposes that a measurable EM signal emerges through the eyes and can be detected with a high-impedance electrode that makes no physical contact with the body. Dr. Ross has published a paper with data showing the characteristics of this signal in Hertz and microvolts. The "eyebeam," which Dr. Ross calls human ocular extramission in his technical writings, is the foundation of the sense of being stared at, according to the theory.

In general, the theory of human energy fields proposes that EM signals between organisms have an ecological function – this is a new area of science based on a telecommunications model. Human beings are "biological cell phones" and transmit digitized EM information back and forth between each other, as do all plants and animals. This signal traffic plays a role in countless biological and ecological processes.

PSYCHOLOGY

BALL, THE

By Jessica Laski

This charming film takes us into the world of students with special needs as they prepare for their school's debutante ball. Most high schoolers take their prom for granted but these young people have the challenge of overcoming disability in order to make a glamorous presentation that night.

The pupils at the Ashwood School are all mildly intellectually disabled, although their abilities vary. These children are on the threshold of adulthood physically. They are starting to be interested in the opposite sex, are craving more independence and looking forward to earning a living, making a home, even starting a family. First loves, fist fights and falls on the dance floor are intercut with interviews with parents, the school principal, and intimate moments in their day-to-day lives at home.

As the day approaches we share their trepidation that everything be perfect. It is a significant night for both them and their parents, who will be watching with pride. As they mark the end of their schooling with this grand finale, the question is raised: What will be possible for them?

ELECTRIC MIND

By Nadav Harel

Electric Mind is a cutting-edge documentary that takes us to hospitals, research centers and clinics where groundbreaking research is being done on the electricity of brain function as a treatment for depression, bipolar disorder, epilepsy and dystonia.

Through the experiences of several patients being treated with deep brain stimulation (DBS), electrocardiac treatment (ECT) and transcranial magnetic stimulation (TMS), Electric Mind follows the progress of a young girl with epilepsy who is finally able to lead a normal life with her preteen friends -- and without the threat of seizures. We see a mid-career photographer, felled by intense depression, who seems to have been lifted out of its paralyzing effects by a series of deep brain stimulations. Lastly, we're introduced to an elderly woman who finally responds to treatment after enduring many months of inertia during which she could not respond to stimulus or remember any recent history.

Renowned neurologists, psychiatrists and surgeons discuss questions of medical ethics, the brain-body, brain-mind interactions and issues of personal identity. The prospect of manipulating our minds and behavior with machines has captured human imagination for decades. Now recent advances bring the promise of relief to many suffering from brain disorders.

HEALING YEARS, THE: WOMEN SURVIVORS OF CHILD SEXUAL ABUSE

Directed by Kathy Barbini for Big Voice Pictures

This important documentary investigates the effect of incest on three women as it illuminates their journey from pain and despair to recovery to finally working to end the cycle of incest.

The film features former Miss America Marilyn Derbur and her nationwide work as an advocate for victims rights. Also profiled is Janice Mirikitani, president of San Francisco's Glide Memorial Church, and her work with inner city addicts and alcoholics. She has found that 90 percent of women in recovery were abused as children. Barbara Hamilton is a 79-year-old survivor who has finally ended three generations of incest in her family. She describes growing up in a household where incest took place and how this gave rise to suicidal feelings in later years. It was therapy that enabled her to surmount her pain.

These poignant stories are revealed through interviews, reminiscences with family members, scenes from counseling groups, and home movies.

IN MY PARENTS' BASEMENT

By Maureen Judge

This film explores the stories of three adult children who have returned to their parents' home to live. Each of the subjects and their families grapple with living together. Future dreams, past failures and the present struggles of daily life are captured in close-up over a nine-month period of time.

Through conversations, anecdotes, arguments and unpredictable emotional highs and lows, it sheds light on the myriad of issues triggered by adult children moving back in with their parents.

We meet Bob, an articulate 34 year-old who has lived with his parents for two years and shows no signs of moving out. He struggles with depression, dislikes sunlight, and can't seem to hold down a job.

Nancy, at age 42, was kicked out of her boyfriend's apartment and can't afford a place of her own. She shares the basement with her grandmother, while trying to get her pet grooming business off the ground.

Denise and David are a young married couple. They work full time, but have moved in with Denise's parents to save money for a house.

In My Parents' Basement reflects a growing phenomenon in today's society, and as the documentary unfolds, it becomes painfully clear that being a parent or a child is a lifelong calling that requires patience, compassion, and strength.

KIDS WITH CAMERAS: CREATIVITY AND THE AUTISM SPECTRUM

By Alex Rotaru

This engaging film follows an intensive film camp for children eleven to nineteen with autism spectrum disorder. It was led by an award-winning educator, Brad Koepenick, a professional actor who found that his true vocation was in the classroom. His experience, and recent research has shown that developing autistic children's creative and acting abilities significantly improves their social interaction skills.

The film follows the participation of seven Asperger's children as they create films, poems, paintings and music, with encouragement from the teacher and stimulated by interaction with one another. Revealing moments in the children's private lives and candid interviews with their parents bring to life the challenges they and their families face in coping with the disorder.

Each year a growing number of children are diagnosed with autism, now more than one in a hundred—four times more boys than girls. Kids With Cameras offers insight into the potential of these young people when their creative energies are unleashed.

STRIKE DICE! BETTING ON MY FATHER

By Natalie Picoe

Addiction can break up families, and often does. This is the story of a daughter whose father, an addicted gambler, left the family when the children were young to pursue his addiction in Las Vegas. As a grown woman, Natalie goes to Las Vegas in search of her father, where she finds him homeless, gaunt, and unwashed, but still driven by the desire to gamble. Despite her best efforts, he is, at first, unwilling to acknowledge his addiction and accept the help he needs.

This is a chronicle of a daughter's struggle to get her father off the streets and back into society, and to be accepting of a less than perfect father, who still nonetheless is her one and only dad. Over time she ameliorates his condition, finding him shelter and social services. She also tries to help him conquer his addiction and seems to be partially successful. By the end of the film they have become father and daughter

An important film for courses in counseling, family relations and social work..

Review

"...a one of a kind, high stakes match of wits and wills between father and daughter... Natalie Picoe's film invites us into a full house of emotion: love, regret, anger, compassion, understanding and acceptance; a story of how one family copes with the consequences of gambling when there are no more chips on the table." - Alan Berliner, director, (EMMY Award Winner) Nobody's Business

WHERE DID I PUT MY MEMORY?

By Josh Freed

Memory loss is becoming one of the great health concerns. As we live longer, our brains age, and we have more and more information to forget, including the information overload from new technologies. Are we all doomed to lose our ability to recall, or are there ways to keep our memories intact?

This is a light-hearted but enlightening journey into the world of memory. The film visits London to attend The World Memory Championship, an annual battle of the brains where the world's best memories meet in a gruelling mental Olympics. We hear from Canada's Dave Farrow who was diagnosed with ADHD and dyslexia as a child, but has gone on to become the Guinness World Record Holder for Greatest Memory, memorizing 3,068 playing cards after seeing them once.

Where Did I Put My Memory? also draws on the talents of Newfoundland singer, Pamela Morgan, and her "memory songs". Academic memory specialists provide their insight: Dr. Daniel Levitin at McGill University, Dr. Tracy Taylor at Dalhousie University, Dr. Fergus Craik at Baycrest's Rotman Research Institute, and Dr. Sheena Josselyn at Toronto SickKids. They help fill in some of the blanks when it comes to the subject of memory and show how memory can be improved.

RELIGION AND SPIRITUALITY

TRUE BELIEVERS: RELIGION IN TODAY'S CHINA

China is on the rise economically, but the post-Mao era has also seen an increasing hunger for something beyond material prosperity. From the novice Daoist monk honing tai chi skills atop a sacred mountain to the uncountable worshippers of the underground house church movement, this program reports on modern China's emboldened—yet still cautious—religious population. In the city of Wenzhou, evangelical pastor Zheng Datong agrees to be interviewed, despite secret police looking on. Pastor Samuel Lamb, another lightning rod for security surveillance, insists that "oppression simply leads to more believers," while Pastor Joseph Gu, leader of a mainstream Three-Self Patriotic Movement church, describes the rapid growth of his congregation. For a much different yet equally spiritual perspective, the film turns to Daoist kung-fu master Zhong Yunlong at the Wudong Mountain monastery, where a sacred shrine still attracts pupils and travelers.

ATOMS & MOLECULES: BUILDING BLOCKS OF LIFE

This program provides students who have no training in chemistry with the background they need to understand such complex biological processes as photosynthesis, respiration, protein synthesis, and DNA replication. The program begins with a basic explanation of atomic structure, and then proceeds to an analysis of four important types of chemical bonds: covalent, polar covalent, ionic and hydrogen. In conclusion, the program explores four essential organic molecules: carbohydrates, lipids, proteins and nucleic acids.

BODY CORPORATE: WHO OWNS YOUR GENES?

Right now across the globe there is a major legal and scientific war raging over one simple question: should we allow individuals and corporations to patent genes? Everyday we walk around, encountering a genetic whirlpool of people of different shapes and colors, barely conscious that 4000 of the 20,000 genes inside each of us belong to biotech companies. Some biotech companies claim patents reward medical research and promote the investigation of life saving treatments. Others see it very differently, describing patenting as a biotech land-grab that's less about patients and more about greed. For example, if a person carries the breast cancer gene, he/she has a 50 to 85 per cent chance of contracting the disease. But the cost of this testing is prohibitive.

In Body Corporate, reporter Andrew Fowler travels in the United States and Australia to hear from both sides in this high-stakes controversy. Who is right? Can the very basis of life itself be patented and sold? Is it possible that a unique gene that makes us what we are could be patented by someone we don't know and then franchised out to a major corporation? These questions will be resolved in the courtrooms as companies with multi-million dollar investments are prepared to battle all the way to the Supreme Court.

DNA AND RNA: DECIPHERING THE CODE OF LIFE

By examining DNA and RNA in a historical framework, students gain understanding of the experiments that led to the Watson-Crick double helix model. The program describes the roles of DNA and RNA in protein synthesis and details how DNA transmits hereditary information. It also explains the DNA code and discusses the causes of such diseases as sickle-cell anemia.

ELECTRIC MIND

By Nadav Harel

Electric Mind is a cutting-edge documentary that takes us to hospitals, research centers and clinics where groundbreaking research is being done on the electricity of brain function as a treatment for depression, bipolar disorder, epilepsy and dystonia.

Through the experiences of several patients being treated with deep brain stimulation (DBS), electrocardiac treatment (ECT) and transcranial magnetic stimulation (TMS), Electric Mind follows the progress of a young girl with epilepsy who is finally able to lead a normal life with her preteen friends -- and without the threat of seizures. We see a mid-career photographer, felled by intense depression, who seems to have been lifted out of its paralyzing effects by a series of deep brain stimulations. Lastly, we're introduced to an elderly woman who finally responds to treatment after enduring many months of inertia during which she could not respond to stimulus or remember any recent history.

Renowned neurologists, psychiatrists and surgeons discuss questions of medical ethics, the brain-body, brain-mind interactions and issues of personal identity. The prospect of manipulating our minds and behavior with machines has captured human imagination for decades. Now recent advances bring the promise of relief to many suffering from brain disorders.

WONDERS OF ASTRONOMY & SPACE, THE: ASTRONOMY - THE SKY ISN'T FALLING

The sky, in fact the whole universe, is expanding, perhaps the result of the Big Bang, an event many cosmologists think took place about 15 billion years ago. The Big Bang Theory, which is the most widely accepted scientific explanation about the origin of the Universe, is a very complex subject. This program looks at the universe and explains the Big Bang theory in a way that is understandable to students.

WONDERS OF ASTRONOMY & SPACE, THE: COMET - VISITORS FROM SPACE

Comets have been causing fear in the minds of humans for millennia. Now spacecraft are helping us to understand what they are made of and how they behave. The time it takes for a comet to make one complete orbit around another object is known as the orbital period. The range of a comet's orbital period may be from a few years to hundreds of thousands of years. Short-period comets originate in the Kuiper belt, or its associated scattered disc, which lie beyond the orbit of Neptune. Longer-period comets are thought to originate in the Oort Cloud, a spherical cloud of icy bodies in the outer Solar System. Comets allow us to study what the solar system was like in its formative period. This program will help students understand why comets cause both fear and fascination.

WONDERS OF ASTRONOMY & SPACE, THE: THE SUN -

HEAT, LIGHT & LIFE

The Sun is our lifeline – the source of most energy from our planet. The light and heat of the sun travels 93 million miles to Earth in just eight and a half minutes. Without the energy that comes from the sun, the Earth would be desolate. Without the sun's rays, the Earth would be dark and cold. Life as we know it would be impossible. Directly or indirectly, the sun furnishes most of the energy which supports life on Earth. This program explains some of the latest theories behind the raging nuclear reactions at the sun's core and how scientists are using instruments both in space and on Earth to study the sun.

POWER OF CHOICE, THE: VOLUME 3 - SELF-ESTEEM

Featuring Michael Pritchard

In this program, host Michael Pritchard and high school students from Albuquerque, Detroit, Dallas, Wichita, and Columbia, S.C., discuss self-esteem: what is it, what it does for us, how we can enhance it, how we can undermine it, and how we affect the self-esteem of those around us. The underlying message of this show is that good self-esteem leads to good choices, and good choices lead to higher self-esteem. As one boy in Detroit said, "Really, the only thing that you can really count on in your life is that you know yourself. I have my self-esteem. I know what I can do. You have to take it from there."

Objectives: To stimulate young people to think about their level of self-esteem. To make them aware of the relationship between their self-esteem and the quality of the choices they make. To uncover some of the factors that can enhance or diminish their self-esteem. To sensitize them to the affect their own actions have on the self-esteem of others.

SECONDHAND HANGOVER

A youth produced program about the effects of growing up with addicted parents.

Drug and alcohol abuse is more than a disease that controls the life of the addict; it affects the lives of all those associated with the person, and is an enormous problem for the child of an addicted parent. This program produced by Reel Grrls, an organization for teenage girls that trains them in video production and media skills, including animation, cinematography, script writing and more. "Secondhand Hangover" tells the real-life stories of life of three young women growing up as the children of alcohol/drug addicted parents, and how they have struggled with their parents' addictions. It will leave the viewer with a better understanding of the effects addiction can have on teens from a teen point of view.

Stories include "Dear Stranger", "Breaking the Cycle" and "Love You, Hate Your Addiction".

SEX AND DATING

POWER OF CHOICE, THE: VOLUME 8 - SEX

Featuring Michael Pritchard

In this program, Michael Pritchard and students from Columbia, S.C.; Gainesville, FL; Wayne, NJ; Washington, D.C.; Dallas, TX; and New York City, take on the thorny issues they face in making decisions about sex. As they attempt to juggle runaway hormones, religious values, peer pressures, sexually transmitted diseases, and unwanted pregnancies, these teens search for an answer to the age-old riddle of how to make choices tonight that you can live with tomorrow.

Objectives: To stimulate young people to think critically about their expectations and behaviors regarding sexual involvement. To get them to look realistically at the potential consequences of choosing to be sexually active. To motivate them to make those choices for themselves, and to act responsibly on the choices they make.

HARASSMENT: SEX, RELIGION, AND BEYOND - EMPLOYEE VERSION

In a series of compelling stories, this broadcast-quality film explains the law. But it also captures the imagination and personalizes the value of inclusiveness by showing the potential harm that can be caused by unwelcome conduct. The Employee Version focuses on their responsibility to take action if employees experience or witness inappropriate behavior—either asking for help or speaking to the harasser directly if they feel comfortable doing so.

Examples of bad behavior:

- Social media allows an embarrassing photo to make the rounds in a hospital.
- Two guys on a city crew mistreat a "less macho" coworker.
- Friction in a restaurant kitchen leads to insults for a busser from another country.
- A religious coworker is excluded on a construction site.
- A client puts pressure on a company rep for a "quid pro quo" exchange.
- Two colleagues are offended by the inappropriate dress and flirtatious behavior of their coworkers.
- Retaliation takes a subtle form but is no less against company policy—and against the law.

SOCIAL ENVIRONMENTS AND CHANGE

WORLDS OF ENGLISH: A GLOBAL LANGUAGE

With the whole world now interconnected, speaking English is commonly seen as a fast track to a good future. Students in Beijing spend Friday evenings practicing the lingo at "English corners," and employees of a Bangalore call center work on neutralizing their Indian accents. But in many countries there's concern about a growing divide between those who speak English—a well-off, Europeanized middle class—and those who don't. Not only are socioeconomic barriers erected by its use, but the infiltration of English, some feel, weakens their cultural identity. This program documents the unparalleled success of English while challenging viewers to consider the downside of its spread.

WORLDS OF ENGLISH: FUTURE OF ENGLISH

Day-to-day use of English has impacted local languages everywhere, spawning the growth of variants such as India's Hinglish and Singlish in Singapore. Do these variations undermine language, or do they enrich it? This program examines the emergence of hybrid forms of English and discusses their pros and cons. A push by the Singapore government to promote Standard English was met with fierce, pro-Singlish resistance. And in the European Parliament members objecting to the institute's adoption of "Euro English" believe—as do English-opposers in Africa and Asia—that the language will impart foreign values and ultimately erode what it is that now makes each nation unique.

WORLDS OF ENGLISH: THE RISE OF ENGLISH

How did a language originally spoken in just a small part of the British Isles come to dominate the communication of so many different countries? From its start as a diverse group of Anglo-Saxon dialects and all the way onward to adoption on a global scale, this program tracks the establishment of English as the world's common tongue. English crossed the sea by means of settlement, trade, and colonialism, yet when British empires crumbled the language gained an even stronger foothold outside its native land. In India and Africa it remained as the language of instruction, though not without some opposition, and China by the 1980s went from scorning English as "the language of imperialism" to embracing it.

SOCIAL INEQUALITY

CHINESE BUBBLE, THE: PREDICTIONS AND PERSPECTIVES

Has China circumvented the economic woes of America and Europe, or is the "Chinese miracle" headed for similar implosions in its housing and financial markets? For answers, this film seeks out the opinions of several Chinese commentators—from respected economists who offer complex analysis to ordinary Beijing citizens who describe their day-to-day struggles with the country's rapid changes. Real estate tycoon Feng Lun, one of the world's most successful developers, is also featured, insisting that opportunities are equal for all in China. But more nuanced views come from a taxi driver, a car salesman, and a construction worker, as well as from Dr. Wang Jianmao of the China Europe International Business School and Shanghai-based economist Dr. Andy Xie.

ME, MY SEX, AND I: DISORDERS OF SEXUAL DEVELOPMENT

Deeply ingrained assumptions hold that every person should be designated either male or female, but some experts are now questioning whether that is correct. This program tells the stories of people born with ambiguous genitalia or what has often been called "intersex" anatomy. It is a condition long shrouded in shame and secrecy, even though DSDs (disorders of sexual development) are estimated to be as common as twins or red hair, appearing in almost one in 50 births. Viewers are presented with powerful insights from people living with DSDs and from medical professionals at the forefront of the issue, including clinical psychologist Tiger Devore, whose own sex was ambiguous at birth.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

JOINT REACTION: HIP REPLACEMENT TECHNOLOGY GONE AWRY

Ron was an active 76-year-old when he underwent articular surface replacement, or ASR, for one of his hips. Soon after his surgery a lump the size of a grapefruit developed on the side of his leg. Five operations later, he can barely walk. Another case study features Catherine, who had ASR in her early 40s and now suffers from toxic levels of cobalt in her system. Ron and Catherine are among the multitude of patients worldwide facing a painful, uncertain future due to the chromium and cobalt components of ASR. Produced in Australia, this program overviews how the metal-to-metal technology was intended to work and asks much-needed questions about its trial phase—which appears to have been wholly inadequate. SOCIOLOGY

IN MY PARENTS' BASEMENT

By Maureen Judge

This film explores the stories of three adult children who have returned to their parents' home to live. Each of the subjects and their families grapple with living together. Future dreams, past failures and the present struggles of daily life are captured in close-up over a nine-month period of time.

Through conversations, anecdotes, arguments and unpredictable emotional highs and lows, it sheds light on the myriad of issues triggered by adult children moving back in with their parents.

We meet Bob, an articulate 34 year-old who has lived with his parents for two years and shows no signs of moving out. He struggles with depression, dislikes sunlight, and can't seem to hold down a job.

Nancy, at age 42, was kicked out of her boyfriend's apartment and can't afford a place of her own. She shares the basement with her grandmother, while trying to get her pet grooming business off the ground.

Denise and David are a young married couple. They work full time, but have moved in with Denise's parents to save money for a house.

In My Parents' Basement reflects a growing phenomenon in today's society, and as the documentary unfolds, it becomes painfully clear that being a parent or a child is a lifelong calling that requires patience, compassion, and strength.

MOM'S HOME

By Maureen Judge

The film follows three pairs of mothers and daughters who have been brought together under one roof by reasons such as a father/husband's death, degenerative illness, loneliness, isolation, financial circumstances or cultural tradition. Gloria is caring for her widowed mother May, who is coping with the onset of Alzheimer's disease. Originally from Scotland, they return to their native country and encounter the extra burden of re-adjusting not only to shared living but to a "new" environment.

Charmaine has opened her home to her mom Harrian. Harrian had been living with her son for 15 years, but for the sake of his own family, the son felt it best that Harrian move on... and out.

Pam voluntarily moved in with her daughter Liz to help out with the finances. Now, after 11 years of cohabitation, Pam yearns for her own freedom.

All the women find themselves in an emotional tug-of-war as they grapple with conflicting emotions, changing expectations, social adjustments and a sometimes ill-fated commitment to do what's best. Candid and insightful, the film focuses on the all-too recognizable family dramas brought on by role reversals as Mom now finds herself reliant on her adult child.

CITIES ON SPEED - MUMBAI: TRAFFIC

By Danish Radio

Soon more than 550 cities world wide will have a population of more than one million. In 2030 eighty percent of the world's population will live in cities. Megacities have traditionally been economic and political power centers but today the fastest growing cities are in developing nations.

The new challenge is that cities are growing helter skelter rather than planned. There is an acute need for new models of city planning to prevent collapses under such huge social, economic and environmental pressure. If cities are to remain livable, the problems of population increase must be understood and dealt with. Cities on Speed shows how four different megacities are dealing with this challenge. What are the visions and the solutions and how do they affect the inhabitants?

Mumbai

Urban planning can be tough in the world's largest democracy! Mumbai is growing like it was on steroids and a collapsing infrastructure could put an end to economic growth. Public trains are filled to the bursting point, traffic is nearing a complete gridlock. An eight lane high-way is being built out in the sea to try to compensate for the threatening collapse.

STRESS AND RESILIENCY

LIFE STEPS: VOLUME 4 - BOUNCING BACK

Featuring Michael Pritchard

Resiliency is perhaps the most important skill teenagers need to bounce back from the common disappointments of adolescence. In this program, they learn essential resiliency skills: developing realistic expectations, identifying obstacles, persisting and maintaining a sense of self-worth and optimism. More complex issues such as depression and suicidal thoughts are also discussed.

SUBSTANCE ABUSE

MEETING AT THE CROSSROADS, A: STRAIGHT TALK FROM REAL TEENS ABOUT SUBSTANCE ABUSE

This honest, hard-hitting video shows teens and preteens the real consequences of drug and alcohol use. Teens in a juvenile detention facility tell how they got involved with drugs and talk about the negative consequences of their decisions. Their experiences serve as a warning to others who might choose the same path.

The video also includes interviews with teens in a SADD (Students Against Destructive Decisions) program who have committed to staying clean and sober. In a rare face-to-face meeting, the incarcerated teens and the teens in SADD discuss peer pressure and what it takes to stay away from drugs.

The message in A Meeting at the Crossroads is clear: Peer pressure and environment may play a role in drug use, but the issue ultimately comes down to choice. Teens have the power to choose their friends wisely and decide for themselves whether or not to drink and use drugs.

An ideal length for any workshop or classroom setting, the video is appropriate for both at-risk and general youth populations. It can be shown in schools, agencies, counseling centers, support groups, and other settings where youth need to hear straight talk on the issues.

MOST-USED, MOST-ABUSED DRUGS: BINGE DRINKING BLOWOUT

In high school news travels fast and bad news moves at lightning speed. A cell phone text conversation informs us that Justin is dead after "passing out" playing "Hot Shots," a drinking game.

This hard-hitting texting conversation opens Binge Drinking Blowout, a "no-use" message documentary focusing on how excessive drinking affects young adults. Students share experiences of blackouts, violence, date rape encounters, and alcohol poisoning emergencies, while friends and families of victims tell students about the heavy price they paid. Throughout, we periodically return to the story of Justin, finding a Facebook "in memoriam" page to him, and then learning through a chat conversation that Bruce has been arrested for causing Justin's death. As the chats continue we learn that Bruce is also accused of sexual assault of a young woman he plied with alcohol. Binge Drinking Blowout teaches that mixing drugs with alcohol is lethal and that "partying" has serious consequences not to be ignored.

MOST-USED, MOST-ABUSED DRUGS: MARIJUANA: THE GATEWAY DRUG

Logan texts Lee the shocking news that Dana has been kicked out of school for smoking marijuana on campus. Lee thinks the school administration is wrong for making such a big deal since "it's only weed." Logan thinks Dana made a big mistake, risking everything by smoking pot.

This typical debate between students leads this marijuana prevention video, with students who've learned the hard way passing on their knowledge that marijuana starts a lifestyle of drug use. Their first joint can lead students to hard drugs, prison, or even death. Former teen users beg students not to take that step.

Logan and Lee keep chatting through the show, and eventually Dana gets her act together, successfully completing drug treatment. Marijuana: the Gateway Drug has a strong anti-drug message: marijuana is not a harmless drug—it's illegal and its use brings harsh consequences.

MOST-USED, MOST-ABUSED DRUGS: SMOKING-THE TOXIC TRUTH

Jill texts Zoey with the news that she has broken up with her boyfriend, Brady, because of his smoking.

A familiar exchange from teenagers about relationships opens Smoking the Toxic Truth, a tobacco prevention video that discourages young people from smoking. They meet Terry Jones, a larynx cancer patient struggling with the results of his choice to smoke. Terry's teenage son laments that his Dad is different now that he has cancer, brought on himself by smoking. Terry's otolaryngologist warns: "There is no question that tobacco smoke is the prime cause of cancer of the larynx." Throughout the show, Jill and Zoey continue chatting online about the negatives of smoking and how it divides teens socially. On a Facebook page, we learn that Brady gets kicked off the basketball team for smoking, and is now hanging out with a drug-using crowd of kids.

In a positive conclusion, this documentary video features teens warning their peers about tobacco toxicity and addiction, giving them the good advice to say "No" to smoking.

SYSTEMS OF PSYCHOTHERAPY

RELATIONSHIPS: COGNITIVE-BEHAVIORAL FAMILY THERAPY

With Frank M. Dattilio, PhD, ABPP

When applied to families, the cognitive-behavioral therapeutic approach examines the interactional dynamics of family members and how they contribute to family functioning and dysfunction. In Cognitive-Behavioral Family Therapy, Dr. Frank M. Dattilio demonstrates a single-session intervention with a single mother and her three sons, identifying some of the automatic thoughts and schemas that exist among these family members.

This DVD depicts the manner in which a cognitive-behavioral approach can be addressed within a family structure, with the therapist engaging the family and highlighting issues that involve emotions, beliefs, and behavioral exchange.

SYSTEMS OF PSYCHOTHERAPY: COGNITIVE-BEHAVIORAL THERAPY STRATEGIES

With Keith S. Dobson, PhD

Cognitive-behavioral therapy (CBT), a system of treatment involving a focus on thinking and its influence on both behavior and feelings, is one of the dominant approaches to psychotherapy. CBT is based on a model of psychopathology that emphasizes the role of dysfunctional beliefs and situational cognitions and their influence on emotional and behavioral outcomes, which in turn reinforce negative beliefs and thought patterns.

Cognitive-Behavioral Therapy Strategies illustrates multiple aspects of the CBT system of psychotherapy, including the setting conditions (e.g., the therapy relationship), parameters around the techniques, and the techniques themselves.

Using selected vignettes from actual therapy sessions, Keith S. Dobson explores the key techniques used in cognitive-behavioral therapy, including developing a therapeutic alliance, case conceptualization, psychoeducation, assigning homework, and assessing automatic thoughts.

SYSTEMS OF PSYCHOTHERAPY: POSITIVE AND TRANSPERSONAL APPROACHES TO THERAPY

With Roger Walsh, MD, PhD, DHL

In Positive and Transpersonal Approaches to Therapy, Roger Walsh works with a young woman who is questioning her religious faith and related conventional views of religion and spirituality.

In his deeply empathic approach to therapy, Dr. Walsh explores the client's existential and spiritual anxieties and helps her to recognize them as part of a positive developmental process. He also works with her self-condemnation and sense of unworthiness, and enables her to identify her personal strengths, a process which proves deeply meaningful to her.

In addition to exploring existential, spiritual and developmental issues, this demonstration also emphasizes collective social and cultural factors.

SYSTEMS OF PSYCHOTHERAPY: QUALITIES AND ACTIONS OF EFFECTIVE THERAPISTS

With Bruce E. Wampold, PhD, ABPP

In Qualities and Actions of Effective Therapists, Bruce E. Wampold discusses the essential aspects of effective therapy. Although evidence conclusively shows that psychotherapy is effective, evidence also shows that some therapists consistently achieve better outcomes than do others. Research has begun to identify the qualities that effective therapists have and the actions that they take to produce positive therapeutic outcomes.

In this DVD, Bruce Wampold discusses the things therapists do and the ways that they conduct sessions to help improve outcome, including verbal fluency, affect modulation, empathy, and the ability to provide an explanation for the client's distress. Wampold illustrates each therapist characteristic or action with demonstrations from actual therapy sessions, enabling viewers to observe compelling examples of skills that deepen and strengthen the therapeutic process.

SYSTEMS OF PSYCHOTHERAPY: USING CLIENT FEEDBACK IN THERAPY

With Barry L. Duncan, PsyD

In Using Client Feedback in Therapy, Barry L. Duncan illustrates his client-directed, outcome-informed approach to psychotherapy, which enlists the use of client feedback to ensure a positive treatment outcome. In this process, the client's voice is a highly integrated part of how the service is delivered, with feedback about therapeutic benefit and the quality of the alliance both shaping how therapy unfolds and demonstrating its effectiveness.

In this session, Dr. Duncan works with a woman in her 40s who is struggling to make sense of the end of her marriage. While the client has successfully moved on from the termination of her relationship, she is still nagged by a lack of understanding of how it happened and what responsibility she carried as a partner.

THREE APPROACHES TO PSYCHOTHERAPY WITH A FEMALE CLIENT: THE NEXT GENERATION

Hosted by Jon Carlson, PsyD, EdD and Gary R. VandenBos, PhD

In Three Approaches to Psychotherapy With a Female Client — The Next Generation, three leading therapists demonstrate three different therapeutic orientations with a single client.

Inspired by the original "Three Approaches to Psychotherapy" video, which featured three pioneering therapists working with client "Gloria," this DVD revisits the original program concept with presentations of cognitive therapy with Judith S. Beck, emotion-focused therapy with Leslie S. Greenberg, and psychodynamic therapy with Nancy McWilliams. Beck, Greenberg, and McWilliams define and illustrate their individual approaches, engage in a roundtable discussion about their work, and provide voiceover commentary for their respective sessions.

This spirited presentation demonstrates the shared features and key differences of contemporary therapeutic approaches, allowing the viewer a chance to compare and contrast the techniques and qualities of three master psychotherapists.

TECHNOLOGY

FACEBOOK OBSESSION, THE

tarted by three kids in a Harvard dorm room, Facebook now boasts over 800 million users and affects society in ways many people haven't realized. This documentary delivers a comprehensive look at how the Internet phenomenon began, evolved, and now influences everyday life—or, in some cases, not-so-ordinary life. Featuring case studies of events prompted by Facebook, including an account of a girl reunited with her birth mother as well as a woman who lost her job due to online postings, the program explores the intense privacy debate that Facebook has provoked while shedding light on the ubiquitous appeal of the Facebook profile—a template of self-expression deployed (in diverse ways) from your local police station to the White House.

TITANS: STEVE JOBS

Irrepressible, irascible, and iconic, Steve Jobs reigned as the undisputed king of Silicon Valley for the better part of three decades. From his parents' California garage he launched the personal computer revolution and built Apple into the most envied and valuable technology company in the world. From the Macintosh and the iPod to the iPhone and iPad, Jobs personally presided over the creation of dozens of transformational devices—while battling hostile corporate boards, cutthroat competitors, and a serious illness along the way. This program offers a retrospective of Jobs's career—including the creation of Apple, its ascent under his visionary direction, and the evolution of his management style, which, although famous for its confrontational nature, secured his legacy as one who dared to

"Think Different."

WIKIS IN THE CLASSROOM

Web 2.0 technologies, such as wikis, have enabled educators and students to become instant creators of shared online content. This video describes what wikis are and how they can be employed as educational tools at both the school and college level. Benefits of wikis are cited, and the use of wikis within academia and far beyond is covered, with examples ranging from student projects, classroom management, and teacher-to-teacher resource sharing to international cultural exchanges. The video also offers cautionary advice about reliance upon Wikipedia as a primary research source.

TEEN SEXUALITY

COMING OUT

A youth produced program about heterosexism and homophobia.

Have you ever wondered what it would be like if straight people had to "come out" in a gay world? "Coming Out", a youth-produced DVD, turns normal expectations upside down, and deftly illuminates the impact of heterosexism and homophobia on the identities of queer youth. The DVD was produced by a team of queer and straight young women as part of the Reel Grrls program which partners teen girls with women media professionals who teach them digital filmmaking in order to create self-affirming media images about teen identity. As the video was conceived and produced by teens it is a fresh and humorous approach that encourages audiences to examine previous held prejudices in a clever and non-threatening manner.

PUT THIS ON THE MAP

An award-winning program about young people and gender identity.

Family, school, and social pressures create educational and health disparities for queer/trans youth, and for those questioning their gender or sexual identity. Yet talking about gender and sexuality diversity in schools and youth-serving organizations can bring up concerns among leadership about liability, community reaction, or saying the wrong thing. These concerns often overshadow the daily repercussions of an inexperienced or inactive faculty or staff.

Research indicates that queer and transgender young people are more than four times as likely to have attempted suicide in the past year than their peers, as well as face an increased risk of harassment at school, drug and alcohol use, and of being the victims of physical violence. Queer and transgender youth are also over-represented in the juvenile justice system and in systems of state care, where policies and practices often don't meet the most basic safeguards. Educators, health providers, service organizations, and state agencies often lack confidence and competency to help or to address structural issues related to gender and sexuality.

URBAN ISSUES

CITIES ON SPEED - BOGOTA: IMPROVING CIVIC BEHAVIOR

By Danish Radio

Soon more than 550 cities world wide will have a population of more than one million. In 2030 eighty percent of the world's population will live in cities. Megacities have traditionally been economic and political power centers but today the fastest growing cities are in developing nations.

The new challenge is that cities are growing helter skelter rather than planned. There is an acute need for new models of city planning to prevent collapses under such huge social, economic and environmental pressure. If cities are to remain livable, the problems of population increase must be understood and dealt with. Cities on Speed shows how four different megacities are dealing with this challenge. What are the visions and the solutions and how do they affect the inhabitants?

In the early 90s, Bogota was a city with big problems: Social inequality, pollution, out-of-control population growth and poor public transportation. Kidnappings were the order of the day and the city had the world's highest homicide rates. But unlike other poor megacities, Bogota found a solution: In 1993, Antanas Mockus, a university president, became mayor and turned the city into one big social experiment. Under his leadership community watch groups were formed, homicides fell 70%, traffic fatalities dropped by over 50%, and many citizens voluntarily paid an extra 10% of taxes!

VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN

HEALING YEARS, THE: WOMEN SURVIVORS OF CHILD SEXUAL ABUSE

Directed by Kathy Barbini for Big Voice Pictures

This important documentary investigates the effect of incest on three women as it illuminates their journey from pain and despair to recovery to finally working to end the cycle of incest.

The film features former Miss America Marilyn Derbur and her nationwide work as an advocate for victims rights. Also profiled is Janice Mirikitani, president of San Francisco's Glide Memorial Church, and her work with inner city addicts and alcoholics. She has found that 90 percent of women in recovery were abused as children. Barbara Hamilton is a 79-year-old survivor who has finally ended three generations of incest in her family. She describes growing up in a household where incest took place and how this gave rise to suicidal feelings in later years. It was therapy that enabled her to surmount her pain.

These poignant stories are revealed through interviews, reminiscences with family members, scenes from counseling groups, and home movies.

TROPICAL STORMS AND FLOODING IN BANGLADESH: FLOODING IN BANGLADESH - CAUSES, IMPACTS, AND MANAGEMENT

Taking viewers deep inside a devastated landscape, this program examines physical forces directly tied to flooding in Bangladesh as well as the broader causes of such disasters, including climate change. It also explores the social, economic, and environmental impact of intense flooding through the personal accounts of people living by major rivers and on Bangladesh's char lands, areas built up from river sediment. Examples of flood management strategies are explored, with a look at the pros and cons of hard and soft engineering. Additionally, the film shows how NGOs are working with flood-affected communities to reduce the developing world's vulnerability to future floods.

WOMEN'S STUDIES

CUTTING TRADITION, THE

By Nancy Durell McKenna and John Howarth; Narrated by Meryl Streep

The Cutting Tradition focuses on the issue of female genital mutilation (FGM), a custom, which appears barbaric to the westernised eye but is still practiced in many African and some Middle-Eastern countries. Despite being illegal in many of the places where it is practiced, FGM continues to be administered to very young women, often even little girls. In the majority of cases it exposes them to medical and psychological problems from which they sometimes never recover. The reasons are rooted in religious, cultural and historical grounds; this film comprises a balanced and non-judgemental exploration into those factors.

Natives of Burkina Faso, Egypt, Djibouti and Ethiopia express their opinions both in support of and against FGM. Their authentic, undiluted statements highlight the difficulty of resolving an issue that is as deeply rooted in their cultures as it is shocking to us. Narrated by Meryl Streep, with footage of traditional wedding celebrations and a shocking scene which follows a young girl experiencing FGM, Streep's narration takes us through this journey in a delicate and non-judgemental way.

GOOGLE BABY

Directed by Zippi Brand Frank

Google Baby is a journey across three continents telling the story of the up-and-coming baby production industry in the age of globalization. Doron, an Israeli entrepreneur with a high tech background proposes a new service – baby production. The baby producer (as he introduces himself) provides customers with a turn-key, cost effective solution using outsourcing of the surrogacy element to India as a way to lower prices. The preferred genetic material is selected by the clients and the rest is left in the hands of the producer: sperm and eggs are purchased online and multiple embryos are produced and frozen. Packed in liquid nitrogen, only the embryos that fit the customers' preferences are shipped to India where they are implanted into the wombs of local women. These surrogates are kept in a closed clinic under constant supervision by Dr. Nanya Patel. She sees her participation as sisterly, "one woman helping another." The customers arrive at the end of the nine month pregnancy period to pick up their babies.

In the 60's, the introduction of the contraceptive pill turned sex into an act independent of the risk of pregnancy. Today, technology has turned 'making a baby' into an act independent of sex. Globalization is making "baby producing" affordable – and all one needs is a credit card.

The film raises many issues but the presentation is non-judgmental. Discussions of medical ethics, racism, and exploitation may follow. A valuable addition for women's studies, bioethics, and globalization courses.

MOM'S HOME

By Maureen Judge

The film follows three pairs of mothers and daughters who have been brought together under one roof by reasons such as a father/husband's death, degenerative illness, loneliness, isolation, financial circumstances or cultural tradition. Gloria is caring for her widowed mother May, who is coping with the onset of Alzheimer's disease. Originally from Scotland, they return to their native country and encounter the extra burden of re-adjusting not only to shared living but to a "new" environment.

Charmaine has opened her home to her mom Harrian. Harrian had been living with her son for 15 years, but for the sake of his own family, the son felt it best that Harrian move on... and out.

Pam voluntarily moved in with her daughter Liz to help out with the finances. Now, after 11 years of cohabitation, Pam yearns for her own freedom.

All the women find themselves in an emotional tug-of-war as they grapple with conflicting emotions, changing expectations, social adjustments and a sometimes ill-fated commitment to do what's best. Candid and insightful, the film focuses on the all-too recognizable family dramas brought on by role reversals as Mom now finds herself reliant on her adult child.

MOTHERS' WAY, DAUGHTERS' CHOICE

By Kyoko Gasha

"I love my mother, but I just don't want to be like her." Why would successful women from the world's second largest economic power choose to start their lives over in New York City? The documentary Mother's Way, Daughters' Choice explores how several Japanese women struggled to reconcile their traditional upbringing with their desire to create unique lives. To understand these struggles, the director, Kyoko Gasha, shows the deep, powerful influences of Japanese culture on her own life. Kyoko also uncovers stories of other Japanese women in New York City, weaving parallel tales of guilt, denial, sacrifice, success and joy. This is a story of cultures clashing on a personal level.

Kyoko's own story illustrates the difficulties associated with being a traditional Japanese wife and mother while pursuing a demanding career as a broadcast journalist. Kyoko moved to New York where she succeeded as a broadcast journalist for the world's largest news organization and an active parent to her daughter. Her story is echoed by other women in Mothers' Way, Daughters' Choice: Nozomi, a banker, Akiko, a corporate lawyer, Sumie a travel agent and Noriko a director of a non-government organization. They all experienced the influences of their birth culture and concluded that they would have to move to a different environment to breathe. Beautifully crafted, this film tells a universal story of the influences of mothers on their daughters and how growth can at once be a painful and rewarding experience.

SISTERS IN ISLAMIC BANKING: FEMALE CEOS AND SHARIA-COMPLIANT FINANCE

Women are still rare at the top rung of the banking industry, both in the West and in the Islamic world. However, a number of Malaysia's Sharia-compliant financial companies offer excellent examples of the glass ceiling cracking. This program follows women who specialize in Islamic finance while forging careers which, in many ways, resemble those of Western career women. Fozia Amanulla discusses her goals and responsibilities as CEO of EON Cap Islamic Bank, while Raja Teh Maimunah, formerly Global Head of Islamic Markets at Bursa Malaysia, talks about her gradual realization of the benefits of Sharia finance. Noripah Kamso, CEO of CIMB-Principal Islamic Asset Management, describes her work with colleagues around the globe—supporting a view shared by all interviewees that Islamic finance will likely expand beyond the margins in non-Muslim markets.

WORLD HISTORY

EAGLE AND THE BEAR, THE: U.S. - SOVIET RELATIONS SINCE WORLD WAR II

This compelling program explores the complex relationship between the United States and the Soviet Union. It focuses on how the USSR and U.S. alliance that smashed the forces of Nazi Germany quickly degenerated into an international standoff. And it describes the perceptions and misconceptions each has had about the other.

Early confrontations such as the Berlin Airlift, development of the nuclear arms race, the Alger Hiss and Rosenberg spy cases are detailed. And students are presented with a candid view of the tensions in the '80s between Reagan and Gorbachev, including the crises in Grenada and Afghanistan.

SECRETS OF THE ARABIAN NIGHTS

Since their appearance in Europe some 300 years ago, the stories of The Thousand and One Nights have entranced Western readers with visions of an exotic, magical Middle East. In this program, actor and director Richard E. Grant revisits the book he loved as a child and seeks to understand its persistent hold on the collective imagination. Grant travels to Paris to discover how the Arabist Antoine Galland imported the tales of Sinbad, Ali Baba, and Aladdin in the early 18th century. In Cairo, Grant explores the medieval Islamic world that gave birth to the beloved narratives while he examines present-day controversies over their sexually explicit content. Ultimately, Grant poses a question—can The Arabian Nights still enrich and possibly change Western perceptions of the Arab world?

Note: Only available in the US.

WORLD RELIGIONS

SACRED AND SECRET: RITES OF PASSAGE IN BALI

Religion in Bali is marked by rituals of high artistry aimed at harmonizing the forces of darkness and light, as this program shows. Ancestor worship, karma, and other key concepts are illustrated through lavish, rare, high-definition footage of a cremation ceremony—considered a joyous prelude to reincarnation—a birth ceremony, a puberty rite, and a wedding. A priest explains the interplay between humans and the spirit world, with input from scholar Graeme MacRae; anthropologist Urs Ramseyer discusses the rites of the indigenous Bali Aga; and Gill Marais, on whose book this film is based, comments on the sacred trance-dances performed by young girls.

SACRED AND SECRET: SPIRIT POSSESSION IN BALI

The elaborate rituals and timeless pageantry of Bali make the island unforgettable for visitors, yet few really understand what lies behind the dances, the costumes, and the ceremonies. With gorgeous, high-definition footage this program delves into the spiritual beliefs at the heart of Balinese traditions. Viewers observe the powerful Barong dance, in which participants fall into a trance and are later revived by mantras, and witness a frenetic invocation of the goddess of death not performed for tourists. In addition, the video documents the four months of preparation leading up to a spectacular cremation ceremony for three members of the royal family of Ubud, including the man known as Bali's Last King.
